Lays Blame on Farmers.

Peter A. Downey, assistant superintendent of schools of Cook county, declared in a lecture before the teachers' institute at Chicago normal school Tuesday, that the average country home in Cook county is destitute of reading matter for children. Mr. Downey said the farmers opposed a plan of Superintendent Bright by which he hoped to install a library of fifty books in every school.

"This plan was so strenuously opposed by the farmers that Mr. Bright was compelled to drop it. Farmers do not know the pleasures of reading. And this state of affairs exists, I claim, with many of the leading educators of the country because of the kind of teachers we have had for several generations," said Mr. Downey. "I favor the adoption of a law by the next legislature which will place a premium upon libraries in the country schools. For every dollar given by the district for a library I think that the state should give an equal amount. The plan is operative in some states."

Prof. Mann told the teachers that the elements which are found in all good literature are sincerity, simplicity, human sympathy and ethical value. He pleaded for more good literature in the schools.

VIEWED WITH ALARM.

The Present Situation of the Coal Miners' Strike Makes Us Shiver.

The average citizen who has been paying but small heed to the coal strike during these summer months is now becoming seriously interested in that mighty struggle between labor and capital. He is beginning to figure out just how much in dollars and cents this affair means to him, and, in the language of the campaign speaker, he has come to the point where the situation is one "to be viewed with alarm."

Of course the habit of each thrifty householder is to stock his coalbin some time before Sept. 1 with enough coal to feed his cellar furnace, his kitchen range and his open grates for all winter. His August order to the retail coal dealer is for from ten to twenty-five tons, varying with the size of his house, fifteen tons being an average winter's consumption in a house of ten or twelve rooms. The time has come to fill the coalbin, but heads of families shrink from giving an order that means the addition of $75 or $100 to their yearly living bills. Those empty coalbins yawn menacingly to the man of moderate income. He looks at the idle furnace, now a useless, dormant thing, but soon to become a voracious, hungry monster demanding toll and homage, and he shivers with anticipated dread. Feed the monster he must when November comes, and he wonders if, like the price the British paid for conquering the Boers, his winter coal must be acquired "at a cost that will stagger humanity."

GREATEST EVER KNOWN.

Government Crop Report Announces 1902 as A Record Breaker.

Piping times of plenty these should be for the farmers in our great west if the recent government crop report is to be trusted. According to the figures, we shall have harvested, when the fields are all cut and the shocks all gathered in, the greatest crop ever known in the history of our agriculture. It will consist, so the official estimate runs, of a corn crop of 2,422,000,000 bushels, 634,000,000 bushels of wheat and 806,000,000 bushels of oats, an aggregate of 3,862,000,000 bushels for the three grains.

The general effect of the crop prospects is reflected in the way merchants in all sections save those in Texas, where the crops were damaged by the recent droughts, are in the market here as free buyers of goods. Their stocks have been allowed to run down, and they are buying freely for the trade and taking a better class of goods than heretofore. The feature of the trade is that goods are wanted earlier than in previous seasons.

All the factories are said to be busy. Railroads are having a larger movement of merchandise to the agricultural sections than last year, and traffic generally is fully as heavy as last year. Money is plenty and cheap, and the west never had so much prosperity in sight.

So, hurrah for corn! hurrah for wheat! hurrah for oats! Hurrah for all of us, but especially hurrah for the farsighted, hardworking farmer who planted the crop that has broken the record!

IN PERFECT HARMONY.

Republicans of Lake County Nominate An Excellent Ticket.

Grayslake the Scene of a Largely Attended County Convention.

The agony is over. The republicans of Lake county have met in convention and nominated a ticket satisfactory to all, excepting, perhaps, those who awaited the political lightning to strike them. The excitement expected failed to materialize; not a ripple of discord was visible, though candidates were many and their friends anxious. The meeting was largely attended and is spoken of as the most harmonious held by the party in this county for years. The following are the nominees:

County Judge—D. L. Jones.
County Clerk—A. L. Hendee.
Sheriff—Geo. N. Powell.
Treasurer—L. C. Price.
Supt. of Schools—Frank Gaggin.

This is the list of gentlemen awarded the honors, and they have naught to fear in the battle to be fought at the polls November 4. The voters of the county will elect them by a very large majority.

Convention in Detail.

When Chairman Wynn of the county central committee rapped for order at 2 o'clock p.m., Saturday afternoon, he found assembled the largest number of voters who have attended a political convention in Lake county for a number of years, there being over 600 people in the hall. The hall, the best and finest in Lake county, was nicely arranged for the comfort and convenience of delegates and spectators, and was an eden compared with the accommodations offered at Libertyville.

The call was read by Secretary Webb and the convention declared ready to organize. Chairman Wynn appointed C. B. Doolittle of Grayslake sergeant at arms. J. J. Brascher placed in nomination J. L. Swayer of Waukegan as temporary chairman, and Miles T. Lamey of Barrington placed in nomination B. H. Miller of Libertyville as temporary secretary. The officers were chosen without dissenting vote.

Chairman Swayer named as assistant secretaries the following representatives of the press: M. L. Smith, Waukegan Sun; Frank Just, Libertyville Independent; Fred B. Whitney, Waukegan Gazette; C. H. Morrison, Barrington Review.

The following was named as a committee on credentials:

Benton, D. Simmons; Newport, W. B. Lewin; Antioch, E. S. Sanderson; Grant, A. B. Paddock; Avon, L. R. Carfield; Warren, O. B. Whitmore; Waukegan—P. Brand, W. F. Weiss, L. McDonough; R. Connelly, H. Deacon. Shields, J. F. King, O. B. Gross. Libertyville, Paul McGuffin. Fremont, E. C. Payne. West Deerfield, A. Easton. Deerfield—W. J. Obee, A. W. Fletcher. Cuba, M. T. Lamey. Wauconda, H. E. Maiman. Ela, H. A. Prelim. Vernon, Geo. Quinton.

The chairman named as committee on resolutions, Messrs. Chas. Whiney of Waukegan; E. W. Brooks, Wauconda; H. W. Cook, Shields; J. C. Bidlecome, Waukegan; A. N. Tiffany, of Antioch.

The committee presented a resolution of thanks to the people of Grayslake for the hospitable welcome accorded the delegates and visitors, and to Messrs. Doolittle & White for the use of the beautiful hall and for their efforts for the comfort of delegates and representatives of the press.

The following important resolution was presented, and a committee consisting of one member from each township appointed to cooperate with the county central committee in securing the enactment of the law:

Whereas, the present system of holding primary elections and voting at same has a tendency to cause discord among republicans and create factions within party lines and

Whereas, believing that a Primary Law requiring the Australian system of balloting direct for the candidates should be enacted, or without such a law, a similar plan should be adopted by the republican party in Lake county, therefore be it

Resolved by the republican party of Lake county in convention assembled this 23rd day of August, 1902, that the senator and representatives from the Eighth Senatorial district, when elected, be and are hereby requested to secure the enactment of a Primary Voting Law which will require all political parties to hold their primaries at the several voting places on the same day and the names of all candidates for nomination to appear upon separate ballots, under their respective headings and the ballots be prepared, issued and voted in similar manner as at our present elections, except that a cross shall be placed opposite the name of each candidate voted for.

The resolutions were unanimously adopted. Awaiting the report of the committee on credentials, Charles Whitney of Waukegan, addressed the convention on the subject of "Trusts and Combinations", and he hit them hard. He followed the doctrine laid down by President Roosevelt and said, "the republicans and democrats are as one party on this issue and it is the duty of every man, regardless of political belief, to use every means in his power to place the trusts and monopolies under federal control; to stop their further oppression of the laboring classes and those engaged in business in a small way."

The Nominations.

The committee on credentials reported a contest in the delegations from East Deerfield and that the same had been settled by sending the delegates elected by the regular caucus.

The temporary organization was made permanent and the convention proceeded to nominations.

For county judge, Clarence Smith presented the name of D. L. Jones. The nomination was seconded and it was moved that the same be by acclamation. The vote for Mr. Jones was unanimous.

Mr. Carfield of Avon presented the name of Albert L. Hendee for county clerk, which was seconded. W. B. Lewin of Newport, stated that the town of Newport had a candidate for that office in the person of John Hoffman, but he wished to withdraw that candidate from the field and second the nomination of A. L. Hendee. This gave Mr. Hendee the nomination by acclamation.

For sheriff four candidates were presented, Powell of Waukegan; Rudolph of Deerfield; Fritsch of Grayslake and Hall of Ela. The informal ballot resulted

Geo. N. Powell..... 123
Frank Fritsch..... 17
H. Rudolph..... 25
Wm. Hall..... 28

The ballot was declared formal and Geo. N. Powell declared the unanimous choice of the convention.

For the office of treasurer Charles Whitney, in a neat little speech, presented the name of Lewis C. Price of Wauconda. Geo. N. Gridley of Vernon was named by Mr. Holtje. The ballot resulted as follows:

Price..... 175
Gridley..... 18

The nomination of Mr. Price was made unanimous.

Miles T. Lamey of Cuba placed in nomination for the office of Superintendent of Schools, Frank Gaggin of Gurnee. H. W. Cook of Shields, asked the honor for M. W. Marvin of Waukegan, and C. W. Kirk of Highland Park presented the claims of W. A. McKenzie of Ravina. The ballot

Gaggin..... 107
McKenzie..... 44
Marvin..... 42

Mr. Gaggin was declared the unanimous choice of the convention and all the nominees enthusiastically cheered.

Convention Notes.

Harmony in great big sizes was to be seen in every nook and corner of the convention hall. It was manufactured in Grayslake previous to the opening of the meeting and was therefore fresh and good.

When Mr. Cook of the committee on resolutions read the paragraph thanking the people of Grayslake for their hospitality, Frank Just of the Libertyville Independent refused to incorporate the paragraph in his notes. It was a deserved compliment but the Libertyville delegation didn't regard it in that light.

George Powell, the nominee for sheriff, was attacked by stage fright when called upon to address the convention, but he made an excellent impression in what he said was his maiden effort.

County Clerk Hendee told the delegates how thankful he was for the honor which had been conferred upon him for the fifth time and also what he new about farming. "Many a time, at my birthplace 2 miles from this hall, have I fed the cows and milked the pigs," said that popular official, and everybody howled.

Frank Gaggin, the popular young principal of the Gurnee schools, was profuse in his thanks for the nomination, and made a hit as a story teller. The assembly said "You are all right" and Mr. Gaggin said he was pleased to know that so many people thought so. L. C. Price said that he was not an orator or a politician but he would administer the duties of the office in a manner to reflect credit upon those who had chosen him for the responsible position and to the credit of the republican party.

Judge Jones stated that it was unnecessary for him to say a word. The people seemed satisfied with his work as county judge and he liked the job. The office was not a political one and he would carry forward the work with impartiality to none.

OHIO LAWMAKERS ARE IN SESSION

Called Together to Give Relief to Cities Now Without Government.

TO BRING ORDER OUT OF CHAOS

Governor Nash Suggests That the Legislature Leave Discussion of Model Municipalities for Future Date and Do Something at Once.

The special session of the Ohio legislature, called to enact laws for the government of municipalities and to restore to the supreme court lost jurisdiction, convened at Columbus at 3 p. m. Aug. 25.

Promptly at the hour named each branch of the general assembly was called to order, and after roll call the governor's message, accompanied by a municipal code bill, prepared under the direction of the chief executive, was received. Following this resolutions were offered on the death of the Hon. William Bell, Jr., former secretary of state, and at the time of his death a member of the house. Adjournment was then taken.

In his message, Governor Nash first calls attention to the act passed last May depriving the supreme court of nearly all the appellate jurisdiction it formerly possessed. The repeal of the act is recommended. Continuing, the message says:

"During the last days of June the supreme court of the state handed down several decisions which practically deprive our municipal corporations of all government. It is apparent that this is an extraordinary occasion, which needs a remedy at the earliest possible moment. Constitutional government must be restored to our cities and villages. The labor demanded of us is not so much a work of construction as of readjustment.

Assembly Must Act.

The question now is not what we think would be a 'model' municipal government, but what we can get considering the constitutional limitations and all the circumstances surrounding us. The task must be approached with a spirit of 'give and take,' and with a determination to accomplish something which will bring order out of chaos. It is time enough to attempt to have our favorite ideas in regard to municipalities incorporated into law after order has been restored, and when the general assembly has ample time at its regular session to discuss and consider them."

Opposes a Convention.

The governor then traces briefly the history of constitutional government of municipalities in Ohio, and advises that the legislature ignore the requests for a constitutional convention. He then submits his ideas of the necessity of the situation in the form of a municipal code bill, the enactment of which he recommends.

Concluding, the governor says:

"I suggest that by joint resolutions you refer the school laws to the state commissioner of common schools and the attorney general; the laws relating to the compensation of county officers to the auditor of the state, secretary of state and the attorney general; the laws relating to the registration and elections to the secretary of state, with instructions to revise and recodify said laws, remove therefrom all imperfections, and have their work ready for presentation to the general assembly of Ohio on the first Monday in January, 1904."

He earnestly recommends that no other subject of legislation be considered.

GEN. FRANZ SIGEL DEAD.

One of the Notable Figures of the German Revolution and the American Civil War.

One of the notable figures of the German revolution of 1848 and of the American civil war has passed away. Gen. Franz Sigel died in New York Aug. 21, in his 78th year.

Gen. Sigel was born in Sinshelm, Baden, Nov. 18, 1828. He was educated at the gymnasium of Bruchsal, and was graduated from the military school at Karlsruhe. When the Baden revolution began in February, 1848, when only 24 years old he became at once one of the leaders of the rebels and was given command of 4,000 men. He was, however, twice beaten by the government troops while marching upon Freiburg, and was forced to flee across the French border and into Switzerland, in April, 1848.

A year later, at the outbreak of the insurrection of May, 1849, he again ventured into Baden and became successively commandant of the lake and upper Rhine district, commander of the army of Neckar, minister of war, and finally commander-in-chief. He and in the second retreat from Springfield commanded the rear guard.

When the army of Virginia was formed under the command of Gen. John Pope, Sigel, then in command of the first corps, was engaged in various fights from Cedar Creek to the second Bull Run, where he commanded the right wing, and outgeneraled "Stonewall" Jackson in the first day's fight. After the defeat he covered the retreat of the army to Centerville and held advanced positions at that place and Fairfax Courthouse.

Sent in February, 1864 by President Lincoln himself, to the command of the Department and Army of West Virginia, he ordered Gen. George Cook with a large force into the Kanawha valley. He himself then led a smaller force of 7,000 men through the Shenandoah valley against Lynchburg and Staunton, and he had with him in this expedition some of the German-American regiments which were always to be found in his command.

GENERAL FRANZ SIGEL.

I met him again, he was trudging along His knapsack with chickens was swelling; He'd "blenkered" these dainties, and thought it no wrong From some secessionist's dwelling, "What regiment's yours, and under whose flag Do your fight?" said I, touching his shoulder; Turning slowly around he smilingly said, For the thought made him stronger and bolder: "I fights mit Sigel!"

The next time I saw him his knapsack was gone. His cap and canteen were missing. Shell, shrapnel, and grape, and the swift rifle ball Around him and o'er him were hissing. "How are you, my friend, and where have you been, "And for what and for whom are you fighting?" He said, as a shell from the enemy's gun Sent his arm and his musket a kiting: "I fights mit Sigel!"

fought in a number of battles before and after succeeding to the highest command, and distinguished himself by leading his army of 15,000 through three hostile army corps, crossing into Switzerland with the remnant on July 11th.

He was arrested by the Swiss authorities in 1851 and turned over to the French police, who saw that he went to England. In May, 1852, he sailed for New York.

Here he married the daughter of Rudolph Dulon, in whose school he taught while conducting Die Revue, a military magazine. In 1858 he became teacher of mathematics and history in the German institute in St. Louis.

It was owing to Sigel and Gen. Nathaniel Lyon that Missouri was saved to the Union. The former organized a regiment of infantry and a battery of artillery as soon as hostilities began, when it appeared that these bodies and others, to which he gave the incentive, and been secretly drilling for some time past.

He was engaged in the fight at Dug Springs, and after the death of Gen. Lyon in the battle of Wilson's Creek, conducted the retreat of the army from Springfield toward Rolla. Commissioned brigadier general in May, 1861, he commanded the advance guard of Gen. John C. Fremont's army,

GENERAL MILES TO VISIT ISLANDS

Will Go to the Philippines in an Official Capacity in Few Weeks.

REFUSES TO DISCUSS THE MOVE

Simply States That He is Not Going as a Tourist, and as His Health is Not Affected, the Interviewer is Left to Guess the Rest.

Boston special. General Nelson A. Miles will sail for the Philippines within a few weeks. When interviewed on the subject the general was reluctant as to the object of the trip. As the story went the rounds, Senator Hoar's name was linked with it, until finally it was stated that one of General Miles' principal reasons for coming to New England at this time was to consult with Senator Hoar regarding his proposed trip.

Admits Intention to Sail.

The senior senator's well known anti-imperialist sentiments, considered in connection with General Miles' correspondence with the war department, made public several months ago, in regard to the conduct of the war in the far east and suggesting that he be sent there, lent to the story a significance that it would not otherwise have had.

Just before he left town General Miles admitted that it was his intention to sail for the Philippines as soon as his arrangements were completed, which will probably be in about three weeks.

General is Noncommittal.

"Will you go in an official capacity?" he was asked.

"Well, I'm not going as a tourist, neither am I going for my health," was the reply, and just the faintest suspicion of a smile was discernible for a fraction of a second.

"What will you do out there?" "That is difficult to say," answered the general. "I cannot tell until I get there."

"Will you give any directions regarding the operations of the American troops?"

"That I cannot say, either," was the reply.

Declines to Answer.

"But, general," continued the reporter, "in view of the correspondence between yourself and the war department some time ago, does your visit to the Philippines in your official capacity at this time indicate a change of heart on the part of the department?"

"You will have to put that question to the department," said General Miles, and then he added: "I don't hold my finger on the pulse of the war department."

Furnished no Witnesses.

"There is one question more that I would answer, though, if you asked me," he added a moment later. "I would tell you that some of the statements that have appeared about me are untrue. The statement that I had been active in suggesting material and witnesses for the senate committee is without foundation. I never suggested a single witness, and only read the testimony of witnesses who appeared before the committee."

Magnificent Eastern Potentates. The Indian princes at the coronation of King Edward were encircled with ropes of pearls, one or two of them had pearls attached to their ears, and diamonds, rubies and other priceless gems hung in clusters about them.

Of the Indian princes the most noticeable was the Maharajah of Gwalior, in a turban encrusted with jewels. His wrist was covered with a bracelet of diamonds, and on his back hung a shield blazing with jewels—a magnificent example of an eastern potentate clad in the splendor of the splendid east.

Ras Makonnen, the Abyssinian envoy, was another guest whose costume was of a character most striking. It included the curious-looking, crown shaped headdress, formed from a lion's mane, which is only displayed upon high state occasions. Under his flowing robe he showed a superb breastplate of velvet interwoven with gold, and behind him an interpreter carried his gold shield and his immense sword, too sweeping and scimitar-like to be worn in a crowded room. —London Mail.

A Free Criticism. Some time ago Sir Charles Wyndham presented London's Green Room club with a chair that had been the property of David Garrick. It happened to be at the time when Wyndham was acting the part of Garrick in the play of that name at the Criterion theater, and had settled down for a long run. At luncheon one afternoon soon after the presentation, Wyndham was discovered sitting in the Garrick chair in an attitude distinctly belonging to the period of periwigs and knee breeches. By his side stood a famous critic and a famous poet. "Ah, Wyndham," remarked the critic, admiringly, "you grow more and more like Garrick every day." "And less and less like him every night," growled the poet.

EPITAPH ON MEXICAN TOMB

Neatly Worded Eulogy Over Grave of Notorious Outlaw. Mexicans are fond of epitaphs, they rejoice in eulogies, they like to honor their dead. Their attachment for relatives is great, and monuments and flower-strewn graves show that the departed are not forgotten. The deceased may have left a bad record, and his friends may be anxious that his conduct should be forgotten; still this does not debar him from a neatly worded eulogy.

Just outside the cemetery at Vera Cruz there stands a fine monument which marks the resting place of a notorious outlaw, whose cruelty and violence made his name a constant menace to all peace and order. His wife, in spite of harsh treatment, was his faithful servant to the last, and after his death thought that she should show her respect for his memory.

She could not speak of his nobility and worth, and so, after much consideration, she caused the following inscription to be engraved upon the tomb:

"Juan Fernandez has passed to his reward; he was an unerring shot and knew no fear; owing to circumstances over which he had no control his talents were perverted from their proper course, but the world should be grateful for his life, as his example stands as a timely warning to the rising generation."

New Silk from South Africa.

Gold and silver silk is coming from South Africa, says an English publication. The fibres are spun by two remarkable spiders of Rhodesia, and an experimenter has found that the creatures may be reared in captivity and that the silk can be utilized. Both filaments have a brilliant metallic luster and are very fine and strong, the fineness of the golden silk being about that of the silkworm's thread, but the strength being much greater. A thread of steel of the same size, in fact, has only two-thirds the strength of this spider's thread.

AMERICA'S DUTY TO THE CUBANS

President Declares Help Must Be Extended to the Island Republic.

ASKS ALL TO AID IN EFFORT

Reciprocity Should Be Granted to Infant Government by Powerful Nation That Brought About Release From Spanish Oppression.

Cuban relations and the duty of the United States in the island republic, the need of a strong navy, ever improving and ever ready for service, and the qualities in a man which are necessary to make him a good citizen and an aid in building a great government were impressed upon the people of three states by President Roosevelt in his series of speeches.

A flattering tribute was paid to Thomas Brackett Reed by the president during his address at Portland, the home of the ex-speaker. Mr. Roosevelt said the majority never had ruled until Reed as speaker of the house took things in hand, and, despite criticism, assumed control.

Praises Moody. Secretary of the Navy Moody also was complimented during the president's visit to his cabinet member's home town.

Regarding Cuba, President Roosevelt was especially earnest. He declared reciprocity that will help the island republic in its days of infancy must be granted by the powerful republic that freed Cuba from oppression, and he urged all to aid in bringing about the concession needed.

Sleeps in Blaine's Bedroom. President Roosevelt, after a most busy day, filled with speechmaking and greetings from throngs at every city and village through which he passed, was the guest of Gov. Hill in Augusta, Me. Many stops were made on the way from Boston to Augusta, the president delivering addresses at Lowell, Lawrence and Haverhill, Mass., and Dover, N. H., in addition to his speeches in Maine.

Gov. Hill's house has become historic because of the fact that it was the home of James G. Blaine, and the president occupied the identical bedroom used by that statesman.

Crowds Cheer. For twenty-five minutes the city of Lowell, Mass., entertained President Roosevelt. The president left Boston at 8:25 o'clock. The towns of West Medford, Winchester and North Billerica turned out immense crowds and gave a rousing cheer as the train passed by. At each place the president appeared on the platform and acknowledged the greetings.

The special train arrived at Lowell at 9:19 a. m. and its arrival was signaled by the firing of a presidential salute by the local militia, and the G. A. R. performed guard duty.

FARMERS WANT PAY FOR CROPS

Will Press Claim for Damages Against Chicago Drainage Commission.

A meeting of land owners and tenants along the lower Illinois river valley was held at the courthouse at Carrollton to discuss the recent immense damage to crops on account of the overflow of the river and to arrive at some plan, if possible, for recovering damages for losses sustained. Hon. Edgar M. Husted of Roodhouse, president of the Lower Illinois River Valley association, presided, and the meeting was largely attended. Hon. Henry C. Withers and others made speeches on the subject and insisted that the Chicago drainage commission is legally responsible for the damage occasioned along the river here. The common law provides that whoever turns an unusual or harmful quantity of water upon the premises of another is responsible for the damage, and, as the commission was warned some years ago of the result of turning in the Chicago sewage without removing the dams, it is felt there is good ground for a successful suit. The following resolution was adopted:

"Resolved, That we renew our demand for the removal of the Kampsville dam and for the dredging of the Illinois river and that a committee be appointed to interview the Chicago sanitary board."

The chairman appointed Mr. Withers as a committee of one to visit Chicago and look after the case. Louis Lowenstein of White Hall, one of the largest owners of bottom lands, was made chairman of the county organization.

WHO WANTS COLORED TERROR?

Fine Chance to Adopt a Pickaninny With a Temper.

The officials are looking for a home for Powhattan Perkins, a 7-year-old colored boy of Upper Alton. He can not be kept in any state institution or jail very long at one time, and the authorities have concluded that the only way to get rid of him is to find some one who is willing to take him and provide him with a living and a home in return for what he may be able to get out of him in the future, or for mere humanity's sake. Powhattan has been sent to the reform schools, but never remained there, and the officers were always glad when he left. He is a perfect terror, and has tried to kill his aged grandmother, with whom he lived, and has always taken the greatest pleasure in destroying her property or the property of others with whom he was displeased.

Use Arkansas Coal.

Alton anthracite coal users are substituting Arkansas coal, which, they claim, does the work of hard coal satisfactorily. The New Supreme Court Justice.

It is reassuring to learn that the appointment of Oliver Wendell Holmes to the supreme bench of the United States was made not because Judge Holmes was the son of the poet, but because he had come to be recognized throughout Massachusetts as a most able legal scientist. It is said that the Oliver Wendell Holmes of today knows law as well as his distinguished father knew medicine and metrical construction. He is said to be a man of original thought as well as one utterly fearless in upholding that which he believes to be right. Surely these ought to be admirable qualities in a justice of the highest tribunal in the land.

Justice Holmes brings to the bench
 the combined experience of a soldier, scholar, legal writer and scientist. Possessed of strong powers for diagnosis and analysis, his studies have been wide and varied, and he is in the broadest sense a scholar. He has not adopted the easy course of following legal rules merely because they exist
 as such without first tracing out their history and origin and their relation to the matter in hand. His opinions, which run through the last forty-five volumes of the Massachusetts reports, are expressed in a fine literary style
 peculiarly his own, and they occasionally sparkle with wit.

He has generally reasoned and explained the law of the case in hand, citing such cases as may have had relation to it, without copying in a wholesale manner general rules. His opinions are almost always brief, and they are prepared generally with celerity. He does not hesitate to make a precedent when he has none to follow, and labor men have had occasion
 more than once to praise him for his decisions in cases involving their interests. He thinks that workmen may combine for getting the most they can for their labor just as capital may combine with a view of getting the greatest possible return. While this latter quality in the new justice's makeup may be looked upon by some as evidence of radicalism, most persons will accept it as an indication of a broad mind and a spirit of progressiveness which has not been fettered by the conservatism of the bench.

Railroad men are constantly trying new schemes to increase the speed of trains without disregarding
 the demands of safety, and experiments are shortly to be made between Wheaton and Elgin, Ill.,
 with cars and on rails specially made for the purpose to run a train of six cars by electric power at the sensational speed of 100 miles an hour.
 "We are going to do what Germany failed to do," says the electrical engineer in charge of the preparations.
 This refers to experiments made last year between Berlin and Zossen, when a speed of a hundred miles an hour
 was proved to be entirely practicable,
 provided the rails are strong enough to stand the strain. The unexpected discovery made by the German tests was that electric motors at high speed
 put a greater strain on the roadbed
 than steam locomotives.

The diamonds in Queen Alexandra's coronation crown are to be sold. Here is a fine chance for folks who have laid in their winter's supply of coal and still have a surplus on hand. No;
 it is not understood that the crown itself will be sold as a souvenir or that the Kohinoor is included in the list.
 As the crown will not be used again,
 when it is put among the other regalia
 in the tower of London its 3,688 stones will be displaced by paste jewels. The king and queen can scarcely afford to keep in their possession such a bauble,
 worth, as it is, several hundred thousand pounds, and they have given the jewelers authority to sell the stones.
 Each will be sold with a guarantee that it was used in the queen's crown.
 A splendid thing, that guarantee, when nicely framed and hung in the front room.

Uncle Sam is busy designing new coins for the Filipinos. Just at present he is not going to provide them with new dollars. Congress thought it best to avoid interfering too radically all at once with the money of the archipelago and so directed no change except in the smaller pieces—the half dollar, quarter dollar and dime. These subsidiary coins of brand new design will soon jingle in the pockets of the natives of those distant Pacific islands.

Since it is reported that the United States army has a secret high explosive shell capable of piercing any armor, we may now expect to hear of some one inventing a secret armor
 which no shell can pierce.

And now they are trying to attach
 a matrimonial rumor to Lord Kitchener. There is always a bunch of trouble making in store for the be-goes.

DUMAS AS A COOK.

He Was Particularly Good in the Preparation of Turkeys.

Dumas pere was in producing the slave of his pen and never studied in his life. No author ever owed less to education or book learning and more to a perpetually fresh and unsophisticated mind and to sociable intercourse with the bright spirits of his day, the upper Bohemia, the best artists, dramatic authors and lions of various kinds of his time. His one accomplishment was his neat, flowing, clerical handwriting, but he knew nothing of science, of any kind of serious literature, and as he had never thought of punctuation before he burst on the world as an author left it always to the proofreader. Like Rossini, if Dumas had not been the author of "Monte-Christo" and other novels that brought him each a fortune (which he spent as soon as he made), he might have been a great cook.

I partook of a lunch he cooked two years before his death at the house of Gudin, the painter. He came to cook
 it in this way: Gudin, meeting him
 on a Friday on the boulevard, said:
 "A friend has just sent me three splendid turkeys from Devonshire. What shall I do with them?" "You should let me cook them," said Dumas. "All right." "But I must go tomorrow to prepare them for the spit." Dumas arrived next morning with a hamper-full of truffles for the turkeys and, not to allow any to go to waste, brought calves' sweetbreads and other delicacies which are the better for truffle accompanyments. He prepared his "plats" carefully and suggested that if Gudin wished to invite friends to a particularly well cooked lunch then was his time. "Perhaps," he added, "you had better call on Alboni and ask her to come. She will crown the feast by singing a brindisi." So said, so done.
 Dumas acted as chef in the kitchen until it was almost time to serve the lunch.

A most brilliant company had been invited to judge of "le grand Alexan-dre's" culinary talents. They declared he deserved the name of "Alexandre le Grand" and expressed their sorrow that his literary genius had deprived the world of the greatest chef of the nineteenth century. Dumas used also to cook the grand dinners which Mme. Rattazzi gave at Florence when her husband was prime minister of Italy.—London News.

Onion Sauce.

As a change from the tomato sauce
 usually served with breaded lamb chops try an onion sauce made in this way: Slice two or, if very small, three onions and cook them in water for a few moments and drain. Put them in to just enough boiling water to cover,
 add a little salt and cook until tender.
 Cook together two tablespoonfuls each of flour and butter and when perfectly smooth add one-half pint of stock,
 three or four tablespoonfuls of cream and a saltspoonful each of salt and sugar and a dash of cayenne. When the onion is tender, press it through a colander and add the water in which it had been cooked.—New York Post.

The Work of Envy.

The leading lady was in tears, and
 the morning paper lay crumpled at her feet.

"What is the matter?" the manager
 asked.

"This horrid critic," she sobbed.

"Let me see. Where? What has he said?"

"There," she replied, pointing to the dreadful paragraph. "It says my acting was excellent, but that my gown didn't seem to fit me at all. I just know that was written by some spiteful woman."—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Small Brother.

"I heard him call you 'Duckie,'" announced the small brother.

"Well, what of it?" demanded his sister defiantly.

"Oh, nothin' much," answered the small brother. "I was only thinkin'
 maybe it's because of the way you walk, but it ain't very nice of him."—
 Chicago Post.

A Case in Point.

"Jobbers was thrown from his wheel
 this morning, but he pluckily arose and remounted."

"Indeed? Well, that's a case of man's not knowing when he's well off."—Richmond Dispatch.

Aptly Termed.

A farmer in a flood district, watching his mortgaged house and barn fall over
 and float down the river, remarked,
 "That represents my floating indebtedness."

A GREAT PEACH CROP

THAT WHICH GREW AROUND NEW YORK IN THE YEAR 1679.

Apparently the Luscious Fruit Was More Abundant on Manhattan Island Than Anything Else Except Bad Barbados Rum.

Books of travel usually contain a vast amount of matter that is unimportant and a good deal that is untrue,
 besides not a little that is uninteresting, and the old travelers who wrote about their voyages to New York furnished few exceptions to the rule.

Tantalizing, therefore, is the diary of an observer who visited these shores
 in 1679; who had a reportorial instinct for the important, the true and the interesting; whose journeys covered the entire territory now known as the Greater New York; who wrote fully and graphically of all he saw, and whose observations have all come down to us, with the exception of some thirty pages describing New York city at the time of his visit. Exactly that which would now be most valuable is lost; but, from what remains, we can learn a good deal about the New York
 of those days.

Jaspar Dankers is the writer whose impressions of New York have thus been lost to the world, and in what has been preserved of his writings the chief thing that forces its attention upon the reader is the magnitude of the peach crop in these parts during the year of his visit. He was a religious enthusiast, the leader of the Labadists,
 a sect that flourished briefly on three continents toward the close of the seventeenth century, and his voyage companion was a minister of the same sect.

But there is little of this in his diary
 against a great deal of what they ate and drank, and on occasions when they went to the little church in the fort where the custom house is now
 the fact is mentioned with some apologies, one service being attended "in order to avoid scandal and for other reasons" and others because "my companion is endeavoring to learn the language."

But on the very day of their arrival in New York, Sept. 23, 1679, we begin to hear of the eatables and drinkables, especially the peaches.

"He first took us to the house of one of his friends, who welcomed him and us and offered us some of the fruit of the country, very fine peaches and full grown apples, which filled our hearts with thankfulness to God. This fruit was exceedingly fair and good and pleasant to the taste, much better than that in Holland or elsewhere, though I believe our long fasting and craving for food made it so agreeable. After taking a glass of madeira we proceeded. As we walked along we saw in different gardens trees full of apples of various kinds and so laden with peaches and other fruit that one might doubt whether there were more leaves or fruit on them. I have never seen in Europe in the best seasons such an overflowing abundance. When we finished our tour and had given our guides several letters to deliver, we returned to his father-in-law's. He regaled us in the evening with milk, which refreshed us much. We had so many peaches set before us that we were timid about eating them, though we experienced no ill effects from them."

And the next day, Sunday, the record opens with this:

"I was surprised on waking to find my comrade had already dressed himself and breakfasted upon peaches."

So it went every day. Toward the end of the week they crossed the ferry (for less than half a cent apiece) to Long Island, where the people made them "very welcome, sharing with us bountifully whatever they had,
 whether it was milk, cider, fruit or tobacco, and especially, first and most of all, miserable rum, which had been brought from Barbados and which is called by the Dutch 'kill-devil.' These people are very fond of it, and most of them extravagant so, although it is very dear and has a bad taste."

But on Long Island, as elsewhere,
 the peaches were as good as the rum
 was bad.

"It is impossible to tell how many peach trees we passed, all laden with fruit to breaking down and many of them actually broken down. We came to a place surrounded with such trees
 from which so many had fallen off
 that the ground could not be discerned
 and you could not put your foot down without trampling them, and notwithstanding such large quantities had fallen off the trees still were as full as they could bear. The hogs and other animals mostly feed on them."

The peaches in Harlem were as plentiful and still more delicious. When they went up to the north end of Manhattan island, we find this notice:

"Before we left (Harlem) we did not omit supplying ourselves with peaches, which grew in an orchard along the road. The whole ground was covered with them and with apples, lying upon the new grain with which the orchard was planted. The peaches were the most delicious we had yet eaten."

But they need not have taken the precaution mentioned, for even after crossing Spuyten Duyvil they found more peaches than ever.

"We came to a road which was entirely covered with peaches. We asked the boy why they left them lie there and did not let the hogs eat them.
 He answered: 'We do not know what to do with them, there are so many.
 The hogs are satiated with them and will not eat any more.' From this we may judge of the quantity of them."—

 press.

Political Notes.

The democrats of Lake county are called to meet in convention at the town hall in the village of Libertyville next Thursday, Sept. 4, at 10 o'clock a.m., for the purpose of placing in nomination a county ticket and to select delegates to attend the Eighth Senatorial district convention which will meet in Chicago, September 15.

Senator Mason has issued another circular letter directed against Gov. Yates and his state appointees. It is in the shape of charges and if the same are true the situation is alarming. If the Senator cannot prove the charges he should be banished from the state and branded as a gigantic falsifier. He claims to have unimpeachable evidence to substantiate every charge he has made. Go it Senator and Governor. It will clear the political atmosphere and all w the people to learn who is at fault.

C. V. O'Connor of Belvidere, minority representative from the Eighth Senatorial district, who has been presented by Boone county as its choice for a second term, has issued a statement in which he says he is no longer a candidate for the place. Mr. O'Connor should have lived up to promises and decided on this course sometime ago. His withdrawal from the field will simplify matters. It is probable that Boone county will now back Mr. Sullivan in the next convention. Just what Lake county will do is all guess work. It is likely they will again ask the convention at Chicago to nominate McDermott. If the leaders cannot agree they might endorse Geo. Mawman the independent candidate. His platform is democratic and he is a vote winner.

For the studied insult to the intelligence of the decent people of Illinois Len Small, J. Mack Tanner and the whole gang of political corruptionists should be sent packing at once, says the Elgin Advocate, the leading republican journal of Kane county. Honorable republicanism has not fallen so low as to sanction or tolerate these excesses on the party. It is the plain duty of the leaders to disavow all connection with or responsibility for the disgraceful state of affairs that has made our boasted charities the aids to political ambitions.

No Assessment for September.

At the August meeting of the board of directors it being found that there was a cash balance on hand in the benefit fund of $1,009,534.05, with $452,527.65 in process of transmission between the local and head clerk's office, making a grand total of $1,462,061.70, with a total liability, both contingent and real, of $621,735.70, it was decided to omit the levy of the September assessment, says the Modern Woodmen. The balance in the benefit fund will pay all claims against our society and leave a surplus of practically one-half million dollars. The members can again congratulate themselves because of the excellent class of risks secured for our society, which is so clearly demonstrated in the exceedingly low death-rate for June, July and August. While we all realize that every member must die some time, thus bringing in the end a loss which the society must be prepared to pay in full, we are all pleased to have these losses deferred and not come quite as rapidly as expected.

This is Right.

The Waukegan Sun pays the following merited compliment to Grayslake, whose people so hospitably entertained the late republican county convention:

Grayslake—A von township—a live, hustling town. A "coming" town.

Grayslake people—Anything for the good of the town, "all together."

Arrangements: See page 83, Webster's Unabridged: "The act of arranging or put in good order condition; the state of being arranged or put in order."

Hospitality: See page 708 Webster's Unabridged: "Reception and entertainment of strangers or guests, or with kind and generous liberality."

We want a good girl for general housework. We live on small farm 2 miles from Barrington. House is convenient for work and family is small. We have no dairy and live in a plain, every-day manner. Will pay good, fair wages. C. E. CHURCHILL.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Reynolds of McHenry called on friends in our village Sunday.

C. E. Whitcomb of Chicago is spending the week with friends and relatives in our village.

Mesdames J. Welsh and Chas. Lamphere of McHenry were guests of Mrs. H. T. Fuller, Monday.

C. L. Pratt returned home Friday, after a week's trip to the Black Hills, S. D., where he is interested in mining land. A company has been formed to develop the claim and we shall expect to hear favorable reports in the near future.

The republican caucus held in our village Saturday was the most exciting we have ever witnessed. There were 224 ballots cast; L. C. Price receiving 137 and A. J. Raymond 87, which gave Mr. Price the delegates from this town for support at the county convention at Grayslake, where he secured the nomination for county treasurer over Mr. Gridley of Waukegan, by a vote of 175 to 18. We feel proud of the distinction our townsman has attained by this nomination, which means his election, and with a man as capable as he, Wauconda will have no fear of any but a good record for her town during his term of office.

What might have proved a disastrous fire started in the dental office of L. E. Golding in the Hughes building, Saturday. Dr. Golding recently purchased a new gasoline furnace and while at work the gasoline in the glass receptacle overflowed to the floor and, evaporating, drew the blaze and almost instantly spread about the building. M. W. Hughes occupies the rear of the room for furniture and it made good material for the fire. The alarm was sounded by the fire bell and the engine and hose cart were hurried to the scene, but the "bucket brigade" was doing effective work, and before the hose was laid the fire was nearly extinguished, but not until it had done about $150 damage. Mr. Hughes figures his loss about $100, fully insured. Dr. Golding estimates his loss at about $30, with no insurance, and the damage to the building, owned by H. F. Hughes, will probably reach $20, which was not insured.

LITTLE MISS MILLIONS

OR,

THE WITCH OF MONTE CARLO.

A ROMANCE OF THE RIVIERA.

By ST. GEORGE RATHBORNE,
Author of "Miss Pauline, of New York," "The Spider's Web," "Miss Caprice," etc., etc.

CHAPTER XIII.—(Continued.)

Merrick would have been lost in amazement could he have seen his old and simple friend, Jones, great-hearted Jones, who broke the bank at Monte Carlo because of the deep detestation he felt toward the world-wide sin of gambling, which he hoped to stop through radical homeopathic treatment—Jones, who had appeared so utterly gulleless and honest with Merrick, gave evidence of having some secret affiliation with the French government.

Stranger things than this have happened and Yankee detectives have ere now won fortune in foreign parts. The men who kept near Jones seemed both ready and willing to obey his slightest wish, whether it meant to watch over the booty he had forced the swollen bank to disgorge at the call of his grand system, or to guard the president of the republic from evil designs—these men were like himself, members of the Paris secret police, accustomed to peril in all its guises, and only aching for a chance to strike the conspiracy a knockout blow between the eyes.

Matters were not so bad, then, after all.

If the royalists could gather quite a force in the endeavor to carry out their plans, the president was not wholly unprotected while he had these brave men to call upon.

Jones was curiously affected while in the presence of the other.

He could not account for his feelings at the time, but as opportunity arose he cast many a side glance at the president.

The fact of the matter was that the first gentleman of France seemed to have such a happy faculty for disguising not only his face, but his voice as well, that Jones was puzzled to account for his identity.

Why, an actor could hardly have done better.

Really, the distinguished gentleman who shone so brightly in the peculiar sphere where fortune had placed him might have also made a name in the annals of the stage, if his present effort were any criterion to his ability.

Little guessed the majority of those good people who sauntered about the gardens, chatting of the remarkable scene so recently witnessed, and the uncertain future of Monte Carlo, that in their very midst stalked the elements of a sensation far more tragic than a mere run upon the bank, or any scene connected with that memorable event.

It is often so in real life.

Perhaps when Merrick learned the news, if he ever did, he would comprehend certain things in connection with the run upon the heathen bank, and suspicions might well arise regarding the philanthropic motives influencing Jones.

But the time for dreaming and reflection was gone, while the hour for action had swung into line—Jones gave the president the benefit of his experience in such matters, and just as the two gentlemen who acted as a special body guard came up again, eyeing him suspiciously the while, our good friend saw the curtain ring up on the last act of the strange drama.

CHAPTER XIV.

Count Leon Sees a Great Light.

Strange sounds, issuing from a kettle just before it commences to boil, give warning that the conjuring of the evil spirit within has begun.

So in the case of the Monte Carlo conspiracy, as the fated moment drew near when the plot of the eager royalists approached the crisis, there was an uneasy movement that could be detected in certain circles, as though those who were connected with the grand game experienced a nervous electricity that always appears when the fate of a tremendous project is in suspense.

Count Leon was like a grand marshal.

It was the crisis of his life. Should success follow his masterstroke, he could count upon great honors under the new emperor of the French.

What dream could be more extensive than this, covering as it did wealth, honor and love?

No doubt some men would have become "rattled" because of the multiplicity of the duties thrust upon them. Not so Villebois.

His long life in African wilds, where dangers in the most astonishing and unexpected guise waylaid him at every turn, had eminently fitted this man for just such a situation.

If he failed it would be through no fault of his, but because forces of which he was in utter ignorance had entered the field.

Such as Jones, for instance.

How should the fiery Gaul imagine that this wonderful man, who carried the future of Monte Carlo in the hollow of his hand, and had already twice broken the famous bank—how should he dream that this Jones was anything but what he represented himself to be, a shrewd Yankee tourist in great luck.

Count Leon believed he had the magazine in condition for exploding, the train well laid, and that the slow match had already been ignited.

The very boldness of his stroke would paralyze all fair France. When the news reached Paris that the president had been kidnaped and that a Duke of Orleans was already over the border at the head of an army, the old royalist spirit that had been slumbering so long would burst from its confinement, and the whole country rise up to welcome its king.

It happened before—it will some day come again, though not without civil war.

Glancing around the scene of action the count saw that all seemed well. His men were within easy call, and near by the figure of President Carnot could be distinctly seen as he chatted with the two gentlemanly aides who were to serve as his body guard.

Constance was leaning over a wall, with the mystical view of the harbor before her, and some one close by, speaking in soft, lover-like tones.

The count's teeth made an ugly sound as he recognized Merrick—this man was forever crossing his path, and had done so since first they met in the Transvaal.

Well knowing what he did, Villebois could well afford to laugh in a cynical fashion.

He knew, being a reader of human nature, just how matters stood, and that the girl loved Mark; but to a man of his calculating nature this did not stand out as a terrifying obstacle to the ultimate success of his suit. According to his way of thinking as a Frenchman, there were more ways than one to win a capricious woman's consent to marriage.

Merrick may have apparently won the second heat, but there was another to decide the race—and Merrick was a doomed man, since he carried a secret upon his person that the count had sworn to possess.

Let the lovers, therefore, bill and coo while the opportunity remained—let them feast their eyes upon the beautiful and quaint harbor where the gleaming of lights told of the numerous yachts at anchor—little they dreamed, poor fools, deep in the intoxication of their fluttering love, that this night, ay, this very hour, perhaps, would see them prisoners on board the steam yacht that bore away the unhappy president of France, and that ere the cruise ended the one would be a bride, the other a slave of some desert tribe.

When it comes right down to schemes that are dark and dramatic the modern playwright need only consult the files of Parisian papers for tragedies that have actually occurred upon the sacred soil of France, where truth is always stranger than the wildest dream of fiction. Other nations are not in the same class when a comparison is made.

So that this anticipated coup, whereby such mighty things were to be accomplished, was, after all, a very natural development, according to the light a Frenchman had.

At a signal from the count the grand climax would be reached. Why did he hesitate?

There was an exhilaration in the very thought that such power rested in his hands—he experienced the keenest of satisfaction in feeling that a peculiar combination of circumstances, leading up to this dramatic crisis, had for the moment made him the arbiter of a nation's destiny.

Really, this thought was enough to puff an ordinary man up with more or less vanity, and Count Leon might be excused for delaying that signal in order to enjoy his triumph the more.

While Villebois stood there, gnawing his military mustache in a fierce way, as he watched Merrick making love to Little Miss Millions, some one glided up to his side and purred in his ear.

Turning, he was met by a low, silver laugh.

It was the witch of Monte Carlo, the captivating Olgavitch, who tapped his arm with her fan and betrayed merriment at sight of the ugly frown marking his brow.

"Ah, mon ami, why knit your brows because these turtle doves coo? You and I are old campaigners in the courts of love, and we know how fragile are these vows when circumstances go the wrong way. Before a fortnight she will be your bride, and perhaps monsieur will deign yield to my humble powers of fascination, if all goes well."

She uttered this last sentence in such a peculiar tone that the count shrugged his shoulders.

"You are always like Doubting Thomas, princess, skeptical, until the end has been accomplished. Even now, when the birds are in the trap and my finger is upon the key that will explode the mine, you breathe in my ear the word 'perhaps.'"

"And you are so sanguine—things have gone as you wished in the desert; at least your determination has been able to whip them into line, so that you believe yourself next to invulnerable, forgetting that in France there are underground forces that overturn the best-laid plans—forces of which you never hear in the African wilderness."

He looked her in the eye, conscious that she was not speaking simply through the superstition that usually marks her class.

Count Leon would have scorned to take advice from any ordinary woman, but the princess could not be placed in that category. Although he had not been one of her victims, still he admired her astonishing qualities, and did not deem it beneath him to discover what was on her mind.

Men have ere now rejoiced to take advantage of bright thoughts conceived in the brain of the gentler sex, and which would never have appealed to their own superior understanding.

"We are not in France, mamselle," he said, slowly.

"Nevertheless the same conditions prevail, and you will admit the best part of the republic is here," indicating with a nod the figure of the president.

"You have been studying the situation, princess—I know it when you speak of mysterious underground currents, for it is not like you to give a needless alarm. It is well that you have decided to tell me your impression before I press the key that brings about the revolution. Once that has opened and I defy mortal man to close it. Now, in the name of our sacred cause, I adjure you to speak and tell me all."

"Because you represent our royal master I consent, for anything that endangers the success of our cause must put his future in peril. Yes, I have been keenly observing, and have made a discovery that gives me uneasiness."

"A discovery—something that may threaten the success of our cause—excuse me, princess, but, knowing how complete our arrangements have been, I cannot see how defeat could come from any quarter. We are prepared, if necessary, to bid defiance to the whole standing army of Monaco, if they attempt to thwart our game."

She smiled contemptuously.

Evidently this amazing declaration on his part did not count for a great deal in her estimation.

"You might do that alone without much danger, mon ami. But it was not from this grand army of Monaco's prince that I feared trouble."

"Ah! go on," he said, eagerly, anxious to know what astonishing thing she had learned, and for the first time feeling a peculiar creeping sensation akin to alarm pass over his frame.

"There are strangers here."

"Many of them."

"To me they are not all unfamiliar."

"Princess, it does not surprise me, since you know almost every one of consequence."

She made a grimace, together with a gesture that Bernhardt might have envied; it represented what she meant it for so exceedingly well.

"Some I chance to know who are undesirable acquaintances for a lady diplomat."

"For instance—"

"Well, one of these men who so solemnly walked off this evening with Monsieur Jones' winnings at the game I believe was the police inspector of Paris who placed me in charge of the colonel, and gave me to understand I was at present an exile from the capital."

The count's eyebrows went up expressively as he caught the full import of this intelligence.

"Mon Dieu; that is not an accident," he muttered.

She saw he was uneasy already—the strain upon his mind was tremendous, and one more straw might prove too much even for his superb nerve.

"I was so surprised at such a sight I looked with deeper interest at his companions, and, while I cannot exactly place them, I feel certain every man of the quartet belongs to the secret service of France."

The count did not look quite so puffed up as he had a few minutes before, when he believed as certain as he lived that the whole future of the republic lay in the hollow of his hand.

To conspirators against the government the name of the secret police must ever be a menace, since they worked in the dark, and no man knew what the outcome would be until it was flashed before him and a hand upon his shoulder signified arrest.

Human Pack Horses in Mexico.

A striking feature of these roads is the number of human "beasts of burden" you meet. The roads are so bad that there is very considerable risk in conveying goods of any kind—risk both to the goods and the pack mule that carries them; consequently large numbers of Indians make a living by carrying. The Mexican Indian carries his load on his back, slung by a broad leather belt across the forehead. Thus all his limbs are perfectly free, and he carries a long, light stick, like an alpenstock, to steady himself in going down steep places or in crossing streams. These men will, in good weather, carry a load from 100 to 150 pounds over the worst of roads, for a distance of twenty to twenty-five miles a day. They wear no clothing except a pair of cotton breeches rolled half way up the thighs, and a pair of leather sandals on the feet; and each man carries a blanket to roll himself up in at night. They eat no meat, their only food being posol (boiled maize ground and mixed with sugar, then rolled into a ball and carried moist). This they break into a bowl of water, mix up well to the consistency of thin gruel, and drink, and their only food consists of this posol and tortillas. The power of endurance displayed by these carriers is wonderful.

Ancient Iberian Temple.

Dr. Sieglin, professor of ancient history at the University of Berlin, has discovered during his recent tour in southern Spain what is probably the oldest temple of the ancient Iberians, at the confluence of the rivers Odial and Rio Tinto, near Huelva. The temple was dedicated to the Goddess of the Lower World, and is connected with two caves, which are filled with debris.

COMPARE RAILWAY CASH AND CROPS

Government Bulletin Gives Occasion to Study Some Interesting Figures.

ROCK ISLAND TONNAGE LARGE

Earnings in Passenger and Freight Departments Show a Handsome Increase Over Last Year—Burlington, Cedar Rapids and Northern Gains.

New York dispatch: The week's issue of the government crop report, with its favorable indications of the probable outcome of the growing crop, brings up again the question of the effect on railroad traffic of last year's irregularity in the crop harvests and of the changed conditions now present in a bountiful harvest, particularly in corn, in which the output last year was deficient.

The question may be studied to some purpose in the recently issued annual reports of the Rock Island, and the Burlington, Cedar Rapids and Northern—two roads whose primary traffic rests upon western agricultural conditions.

Rock Island's Percentage.

The Rock Island reports 17.43 per cent of its tonnage in four of the principal cereal crops, and the Cedar Rapids and Northern has but 31 per cent of its total freight tonnage in the same crops, wheat, corn, oats and barley. The best earning portions of each road intersect in a grain state like Iowa. Each also extends beyond the limits of that state, the Cedar Rapids and Northern into Minnesota, and the Rock Island having long lines through Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma to El Paso.

Interesting Figures.

The total operated line of the Cedar Rapids and Northern road is 1,299 miles, mostly in Iowa, where the Rock Island has 1,178 miles. It has also 1,124 miles in Kansas, 250 miles in Nebraska, and 287 miles in Missouri, making 2,839 miles in the four states which were most materially affected by the corn shortage of last year. This total is about 70 per cent of the Rock Island aggregate operated mileage as reported in the last annual report.

With such a record of grain traffic and of mileage in four states in which the yield of corn is reported by the government as falling from 860,700,000 bushels in 1920 to 467,290,000 in 1921, or over 45 per cent, the records of earnings and traffic made by these two companies is obviously of considerable present interest.

Earnings Increase.

The bearing is direct on the general question of the relation between the yield of crops and agricultural prosperity and the unbroken growth of railway revenues. Despite last year's heavy reported loss in the yield of corn in the states named, each company reports material increase in gross and net earnings for the last fiscal year, without very much change in operated mileage. With the Rock Island the increase runs up to 3,021,150 in the year to April 1, or 11.9 per cent over 1921, the largest increase reported by the company in any one year. Increase in gross earnings reported by the Burlington, Cedar Rapids & Northern to December 31 last is $512,400, or 10 1/2 per cent.

Analysis of Receipts.

Similarity in the changes in earnings and traffic reported by each company does not extend much beyond these figures of large increases in total receipts. The Rock Island owes over half its enhancement in revenues to increase in passenger business, which yielded $1,630,150 additional revenue, a gain over the figures of the previous year of 25 1/2 per cent. On the other hand, the Burlington, Cedar Rapids & Northern reports the largest share of its earnings, or $347,000 out of the total increase of $512,000 as due to increased freight traffic.

Rates Average Better.

Enlarged business accounted for all of this gain, as the average of freight rates shows no change in the year. On the other hand, approximately $920,000 of the increase in the Rock Island's freight revenues appears to be due to the better average rates reported, leaving only $412,000 as due to increased business. The addition of certain new road to operated line accounts for some of this latter gain.

THE PROOF OF THE POET.

Evidence Presented Was Sufficient to Carry Conviction.

The young men who were camping in the cabin on the shore of the lake were moved, in their youthful good humor and folly, to give a breakfast to some of their friends from the neighboring cottages and the hotel. The meal was an al fresco one, but the cabin was turned over to the feminine guests for the purposes of investigation. The ingenue explored with characteristic thoroughness before breakfast was served, and in the middle of that meal she fixed one of her hosts with her soulful gaze and said:

"It's all too lovely for anything—the lake and the hill and the fish! To think that you caught it yourself! But the loveliest thing of all is what I've found out about you, sir," and she nodded at him with an air of great wisdom. He blushed and sputtered as though he were choking on one of his own fish bones and murmured:

"Hope it was nothin' dreadful, I'm sure. You know, we're all just batching it down here, and our housekeeping—our housekeeping—"

"Oh, it had nothing to do with housekeeping," declared the ingenue, with pretty disdain. Every one was listening, so she addressed them all. "What do you think?" she said. "I've found out that he's a poet—a poet, mind you!"

The unfortunate seemed threatened with immediate destruction by suffocation, but his guests were all absorbed attention. So were his fellow hosts. "Why, how did you find him out?" queried the crowd. "Scraps of verse? Or a poem in a magazine and we did not see it? Or what?"

"Oh, she's just chaffing you," gasped the miserable wretch.

"Chaffing, indeed!" said the ingenue. Not at all. No, I didn't find anything like that, but I found a rhyming dictionary with his name in it!"

FOOLED BY CABBY'S DEVICE.

How the Willy Driver of a New York Hansom Stimulated Trade.

The young man walked by the hansom drawn up in front of an up-town hotel, took a quick look at the interior of the vehicle, hesitated for a moment, and walked on a few paces. He halted on the edge of the curb and seemed to be considering some deep problem. The driver perched on the back of the modern chariot was scanning the horizon in search of a prospective fare.

The young man gulped down a swelling in his throat and approached the hansom from the rear. He took another glance at the interior of the vehicle and asked nervously:

"How much to—er—the Grand Central depot?"

"Dollar and a half," said Cabby, with due disregard to legal rates. "All right. Go ahead, quick," said the young man, clambering into the hansom.

Arriving at the depot the young man nervously thrust the fare into Cabby's hand and disappeared in the big waiting room.

And Cabby surveyed the interior of the hansom and smiled. From one of the capacious pockets of his coat he produced a cheap wallet stuffed with paper and bound by a stout elastic. This he deposited carefully upon the seat in plain view of passers-by.

"That's the fourth sucker to-day," he soliloquized, as he clambered to his perch. "Them pocketbooks cost me a nickel apiece, an' it's considerable trouble to stuff 'em and make 'em and make 'em look natural—but they do bring trade. Geddap!"

MANY ARE KILLED IN RAIL WRECKS

Trolley Accident in Virginia Due to Carelessness of the Motorman.

FREIGHT TRAIN BREAKS AWAY

Three Die as a Result of "Cut" of Cars Running Down a Steep Grade and Over a Trestle Near Georgetown, Ind.

Three persons were killed and forty injured in a trolley collision on the Bay Shore terminal line just beyond Norfolk, Va. The cars were shattered and telescoped and between them were wedged the bodies of a motorman and a passenger.

The dead are: Charles B. Golden, Linwood Fentress, William S. Yandle.

Among the injured, many of whom were sent to their homes in carriages, was a party of relatives of Major L. T. W. Waller of the marine corps.

Motorman Was Careless.

The wreck occurred in a clear space. Motorman Yandle of the outbound car, passengers say, was talking to a woman and passed the switch where he should have waited for the car from Ocean View. When he saw it the cars were within a few feet of each other. The car from Ocean View was under control, but the one from the city dashed into it at full speed.

Many Cut by Glass.

The motorman whose carelessness caused the collision tried to jump, but was caught on the platform gate. The woman to whom he was talking was taken unconscious from the debris that pinned down Motorman Yandle.

The cars were crowded and a panic ensued. Many persons were cut by flying glass.

THREE ARE KILLED.

Fourteen Cars Loaded With Wheat Are Demolished.

In a disastrous freight wreck on the Southern railway near Georgetown, Ind., the following were killed: Dudley Cox, "Red" Duval, Menso Ross. The injured are Harry Goodall, George Meyers.

Fourteen box cars loaded with wheat, together with two locomotives, were tumbled over a trestle into a ravine and fell forty feet. All were demolished.

Two sections of the through freight were coming east and the first section had stopped at Duncan to switch, leaving a "cut" of cars on the main track. There is a heavy grade at this point and by some means the cars broke away and rolled down the track, gaining momentum at each revolution of the wheels. Just as the runaway cars were approaching the trestle the second section, drawn by two big engines and the crash occurred a moment later.

Both Duval and Cox went down with their engine. Ross was on one of the runaway cars and was crushed beneath it. Engineer Goodall and Fireman Myers, in charge of the other engine, jumped and were fatally injured. There was great difficulty in extricating Myers. His voice could be heard for hours and it took several to locate him.

FATAL TRIAL RUN.

Alton Engineer's First Outing Ends in Locomotive Explosion.

One man was killed and four were injured when the boiler of a big engine on the Alton railway blew up near Rush Hill. The dead: H. O. Markwell. The injured: G. J. McMahon, M. C. Page and L. C. Shallenberger.

Shallenberger had been sick and was making a trial run to see if he was able to resume work. He will probably die.

MUST MAKE ANNUAL REPORTS

Illinois Law Regarding Corporations Allows No Evasion.

Springfield, Ill., dispatch: The law providing that corporations organized under the laws of the state of Illinois must make annual reports to the secretary of state, and providing for a cancellation of charters of corporations failing to make reports is mandatory, and the secretary of state has no discretion in the matter. This is the interpretation placed upon the law by Attorney General Hamlin, in response to numerous inquiries directed to his department.

HE TIPPED A DUKE.

Robert Barr's Great Generosity Was Not Accepted.

When I said I never gave a tip, writes Robert Barr, I ought perhaps to add that once upon a time I offered one, which, to my surprise, was not accepted. I engaged to write for an American paper some articles on the London parks, and I asked a friend how I could get accurate information regarding them.

"Nothing simpler," said the Englishman. "Drop a line to the ranger of Hyde park, and he will set you right." I wrote a courteous note to the ranger, and told him I did not mind parting with a dollar or two if he could put me in the way of writing an interesting article. My communication was ignored. I again consulted my English friend, and told him the amount proffered.

"That was very generous of you," he said, sarcastically, "and I am amazed your munificence has not yet met a readier response, for the ranger of Hyde park is his royal highness, the Duke of Cambridge, uncle to the queen, and I am sure his expenses must be large!"

What an Almanac Did.

Mathews, Ark., Aug. 25th.—Mrs. Lee S. Sanders of this place tells how an almanac saved her life.

"I have been troubled a great deal with my kidneys all my life and was constantly growing worse.

"I chanced to get a copy of Dodd's Almanac for 1903 and in it read some stories of how Dodd's Kidney Pills had cured many very bad cases of Kidney Trouble.

"My husband bought a box and I began to use them and in a short time we were surprised and delighted at the wonderful improvement in my case.

"I am now as well as anybody and I can not say too much for Dodd's Kidney Pills. It was a lucky day for me when I picked up that almanac.

"I believe Dodd's Kidney Pills will cure anyone who suffers with Kidney Trouble."

Oldest of English Inns.

The village of Norton St. George in England has little to boast of in a general way, but its inhabitants are proud of their inn at which they periodically slake their thirst. This claims to be the oldest licensed village alehouse in England, the license dating from 1397. Its appearance is eminently picturesque, each story overhanging that beneath, while the front is broken by bay windows, a porch and a flight of stone steps leading to a doorway in the wall, says a London paper. At the back are more quaint doors and windows, a turret built against the wall and inclosing an outside stair, while in the yard still remains a portion of the old gallery which in the middle ages was found in so many hostleries. Most of the front is timbered. Each gable is surmounted by a curious chimney.

Woman on War Office Staff.

One of the women who went as nurses to the front in South Africa has been appointed to the staff of the English war office. She has a private office and a separate little sub-department of her own, having charge of the affairs of the army nursing staff. This is the first time a woman has held any position on the staff of the war office.

Why "Scottish" Is Preferred.

The vexed question as to why the inhabitants of Scotland prefer the use of the adjective "Scottish" to "Scotch" is thus answered by a Scot: "The reason is that Scottish is the right and 'Scotch'—which is a pure Anglicism—is wrong."

And It's True, Girls.

"Why," asked the fat passenger, "does an engineer always call his engine 'she'?"

There was a moment of silence; then the man on the wood-bog said something about "her headlight," which was followed by a hollow groan all along the line.

"Because," ventured the tall, thin man, "the more you throttle her the faster she goes." But this was barred out under the rules.

The man with the sample-case suggested, "Because she was the mail," but everybody said, "Ah, there!" so sarcastically that he apologized.

The cross passenger said, "Because there was so much bustle and bang about her." And he was fined cigars for the crowd on the spot.

And the discussion might have lasted longer had not the love-smitten youth in the corner chirruped:

"Because we couldn't get along without her."

A Slight Diversion.

One of the newest and best of the many "exam" stories going around at this time of year is credited to Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University. A student in one of the preparatory schools was asked to mention the distinctions between major and minor chords. His reply read:

"Far be it from me to encourage such invidious distinctions. Let us rather devote our attention to the causes that led up to the Thirty Years' Wars."

This naive reply was followed by an historical essay for which the young man had carefully prepared himself.

AN ITALIAN CAPTAIN

Cured by Pe-ru-na of Catarrh of the Stomach After Doctors Failed.

Hon. J. D. Botkin, Congressman from Kansas Writes an Interesting Letter.

CAPTAIN O. BERTOLETTO.

Captain O. Bertoletto of the Italian Barque "Lincolles," in a recent letter from the chief officer of the Italian Barque Lincolles, Pensacola, Fla., writes:

"I have suffered for several years with chronic catarrh of the stomach. The doctors prescribed for me without my receiving the least benefit. Through one of your pamphlets I began the use of Peruna, and two bottles have entirely cured me. I recommend Peruna to all my friends."—O. Bertoletto.

In catarrh of the stomach, as well as catarrh of any part of the body, Peruna is the remedy. As has been often said, if Peruna will cure catarrh of one part, it will cure catarrh of any other part of the body.

Catarrh is catarrh wherever located, and the remedy that will cure it anywhere will cure it everywhere.

The following letter from Congressman Botkin speaks for itself:

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, WASHINGTON, D. C.

Dr. S. B. Hartman, Columbus, O.:

My Dear Doctor—It gives me pleasure to certify to the excellent curative qualities of your medicine—Peruna and Manalin. I have been afflicted more or less for a quarter of a century with catarrh of the stomach and constipation. A residence in Washington has increased these troubles. A few bottles of your medicine have given me almost complete relief, and I am sure that a continuation of them will effect a permanent cure. Peruna is surely a wonderful remedy for catarrhal affections.—J. D. Botkin.

This is a case of catarrh of the stomach which had run for twenty-five years, according to his statement, and Peruna has at once come to his relief, promptly accomplishing for him more benefit than he had been able to find in all other remedies during a quarter of a century.

It stands to reason that a man of wealth and influence, like a Congressman of the great United States, has left no ordinary means untried and no stone unturned to find a cure.

If such cures as these do not verify the claim not only that dyspepsia is due to catarrh of the stomach, but also that Peruna will cure catarrh of the stomach, it is impossible to imagine how any evidence could do so.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

If anyone doubts the fertility of Lake county soil, a drive over the beautiful country between Barrington and Grayslake will convince him that the section has been rightly named "the garden spot of Illinois." The farmers in that district are jubilant and well they may be, as crops are excellent and in this season everything has come their way.

Fred H. Frye expects to erect two modern residences this fall. One is to be built on the corner of Russel and Cook street and the other on So. We are informed that J. A. The Ladies' band of this village entertained the veterans and a host of visitors at the Soldiers' reunion, at Grayslake, Thursday, with a choice selection of popular music. Leroy Powers has a fly-catcher that is a dandy. He didn't invent it, but he takes off his hat to the man who did. It is a simple affair and can be used in the parlor or cowshed. It strings the troublesome flies as fast as they come along. It is a novelty. We don't know whether Mr. Powers will sell the useful ornament or not, or where he got it, but it is a fly catcher and a good one.

Why Not More Sociability?
It has been said, and upon investigation we find the statement true, that many of our people are wanting in the main trait necessary to make newcomers in Barrington feel that they have cast their lot among friends—among a class of social, hospitable people. Such statements are not a good advertisement for any village.

A lady who established a home here several months ago, who came here a stranger, tells us that but two people have called upon her, that no representative of a church or religious or civic society has extended to her or her husband the hand of friendship, and adds: "we might as well have located on a desert island as far as the matter of sociability is concerned."

Again we find a family who has resided here for 18 months and to date not a member of the clergy, not a delegate from any of the numerous societies identified with church work has entered that home and tendered to that family a welcome. There are other cases.

There is something wrong. In villages like this the lines of caste cannot be closely drawn without working injury to the present and future welfare of the village. In villages like this there should be no cliques, no factions, no shoddy aristocracy. To be sure the line of morality and good citizenship may be laid, but not before proper investigation. When people come here to make a home they should be given to understand that Barrington contains a class of people who judges none by their dress or bank account.

We cannot expect to attract residents within our borders by acting the part of Pharisees. When a family enters our gates, and are found to be worthy, its members should be so treated that they will find themselves among friends.

If you expect to add to the population of this village you must be cordial to those who come here. Here are societies whose object is to do good; to disseminate principles for bringing together in friendly intercourse the people. Are they carrying forward that work?

Are the churches doing what is expected of them in this direction? If a social strata has been defined; if the Creator intended this particular spot for a selected few, put out the "standing room only" sign.

If you desire to erect a Chinese wall around the village and keep upon the outside those who seek a place to live, to worship, to educate their children, deny them sociability and hospitality and your desire will be gratified.

The policy adopted by the pioneers of this section was a good one, and it is good now. Welcome costs nothing to bestow and creates at once a favorable impression. If you have an aristocratic feather in your bonnet pluck it out as you don't need it.

There should be no ground for such complaints as call forth this article, still, we regret to say that the complaints are well founded. Find the cause and apply the remedy.

Obituary.

Amalie Sophia Reeck, wife of Geo. Reeck, residing in Barrington township, 3 1/2 miles south-east of this village, died August 26, after a prolonged illness caused by appendicitis.

Mrs. Reeck was born at Laszbruck, Dutchy of Lippe, Germany, July 4th, 1835. She was twice married, the name of her first husband being Schraeder, whom she married in 1857. With him she lived 25 years, and nine children were the fruits of their union, one of which survives. After twelve years of widowhood she married, in 1895, George Reeck.

She was a member of the Lutheran faith and the funeral service was held from St. Paul's church in this village this Friday afternoon, conducted by Rev. Alfred Menzel.

J. C. Frederick Hauschild, residing on Station street, near Hough street, died Tuesday, August 26, after an illness of about seven months. His death was due to a combination of diseases.

Mr. Hauschild was born at Riechenburg, Pomann, Germany, September 13, 1839, and came to America in 1882, settling on a farm near Dundee, where he lived until a few years ago when he took up a residence in this village. He was married twice, his first wife departing this life in 1885. One son by this wife survives. Some years ago he married his second wife, a Mrs. Scharf, whose family consisted of eleven children. The wife survives him.

The funeral was held Thursday at 1 o'clock from St. Paul's Lutheran church, of which faith he was a follower. Rev. Menzel officiated.

Golden Wedding Celebration.

On Monday evening Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Powers and Mrs. Leroy Powers of this village attended a double wedding at the home of their friends, Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Bliss, 921 Kimbark Avenue, Chicago. The occasion was the golden wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Bliss and the marriage of their granddaughter, Miss Bessie Scoby.

Just 50 years as near as possible from the time of the marriage of the grand mother the grand daughter took the same solemn vows, the ceremony taking place at 9 p. m. in a parlor banked with a wealth of choicest flowers. The grandmother was 71 years of age and the grand daughter 19. The gifts of Mr. and Mrs. Bliss were befitting a their anniversary—costly and many—while those showered upon the young bride were numerous, beautiful and substantial. The occasion brought together a large concourse of relatives and friends.

Mrs. Fred Wagner Injured.

Mrs. Lizzie Wagner, wife of Fred Wagner, section foreman on the E. J. & E. road, had a narrow escape from instant death Monday evening. Mrs. Wagner was driving home from Chicago Highland, when the king bolt of the wagon slipped from its place allowing the vehicle to run against the horse. The animal plunged forward overturning the wagon and throwing Mrs. Wagner upon the ground with much force. She suffered severe injuries about the head, one rib was fractured and her left arm broken in two places. She struck upon her head and left shoulder and when picked up it was thought her collar bone was broken and that she was injured internally. Parties residing near went to her assistance and she was taken to Mr. Custer's house where her injuries were dressed. The attending surgeon says her condition will permit removal to her home on Cook street in this village about Sunday or Monday.

Prof. Horn's School of Music.

Prof. Charles S. Horn has returned to Barrington and on Monday, Sept. 8, will reopen his studio in the Gieske building for the instruction of pupils in vocal and instrumental music.

Prof. Horn needs no introduction to our people. He has demonstrated his ability as an instructor on brass and reed instruments by the proficiency shown by the M. W. A. band and the Ladies' band, two talented organizations of our village. A number of pupils here, in vocal and piano instruction have progressed rapidly under his perfect method of teaching.

During the summer Prof. Horn has filled an important position with DeBaugh's renowned band at San Souci park Chicago, and was offered flattering inducements to go on an extended concert tour with that organization, but his many friends in this vicinity prevailed upon him to continue his excellent work here.

During his absence Prof. Horn has taken instruction under competent teachers. His school opens Sept. 8. Consult him as to terms.
