Death of Mrs. B. C. Reynolds.

Died at her home in Palatine at 3 o'clock Wednesday morning, June 17, 1903, at the age of 92 years, 11 months and 13 days.

Mrs. Reynolds was born at Wallingford, Rutland county, Vermont, on July 4, 1810; she was married May 3, 1835, to Benjamin C. Reynolds, and came to Illinois in 1857. She lived in Illinois until 1867, and then moved to Boone, Iowa, where her husband died, July 8, 1891.

In the fall of 1891 she returned to Illinois, and has lived at Palatine since that year.

Her remains were taken to Boone, Iowa, where they were laid to rest beside those of her husband.

She leaves but one son, several grand children, and three great-grand children to mourn her death.

Some of the Orations.

The following are extracts from orations delivered at the commencement exercises of the Class of 1903.
Lack of space prevented the publication with the general program in last issue:

HENRY C. SCHROEDER.

"What Shall We Do With the Trusts?"—The power to combine is one of the results of human development. The human race has acquired the capacity very slowly and will never relinquish it. There is nothing inherently immoral in combination and the greatness of the combination does not make in unjust or dishonest.
The combination of a thousand million dollars is no more immoral than a combination of a thousand dollars.
A combination is immoral when its spirit and conduct are unjust. But a combination may be dangerous, though it is not immoral. Whenever the effect of a combination is to give it the monopoly of any important article of commerce it is a peril to the community, but if the article of commerce is essential to human happiness; for example, food, fuel and light, then the monopoly is very dangerous."

THOMAS H. PUTNAM.

"The Constitution and the Flag."— The axiom, "The government should depend upon the consent of the governed" is an admirable one, but only when applied to a people capable of self-government. The Supreme court based their decision on this principle.
The constitution grants to every state, but not necessarily to a territory, a republican form of government. But what are the Philippines? They are no part of the United States. How can they be? How are they represented? Then how do the laws of the United States extend over them unless by particular provisions? By the laws of England, when possession is taken of territories the king has power of legislation until parliament shall interfere, and congress has the same power in this case, and the Philippines are governed by congress as they see proper.

ROSE K. CONVERSE.

"The State and the Child."—The Illinois factory child, trained neither in the school-room nor workshop, promises in coming maturity to be little more than an addition to the mass of wretched, helpless, unskilled labor.

Illinois has permitted children to work who could not read in any language. She demanded no educational test, such as is demanded in twenty other states.

There are now twenty thousand children under fourteen working in Illinois, mainly in Chicago.

Unfortunately the census has not been taken in such a way as to show the light we need on the extent of child labor in the United States.
Wherever any exceptional decrease has been noted, it has taken place in spite of the underlying tendency which forces the children to work at the earliest possible age. Therefore, with all these results, is it not advisable for every state to enforce most stringent laws to protect these young children?

MARY F. L. HOFFMEISTER.

"The Clash of Races in America."—
The past few months have been full of fresh discussions of the race problem, and there yet exist a few traces of sectional animosities, but it seems to be the nature of all moral movements to create a current in the opposite direction, and it ought not, therefore, to appear surprising that the strong movement in the south toward the education and elevation of the African race should be accompanied by a passionate protest against anything which looks toward either a recognition of the gains the negro has already made, or towards a still further enlargement of his opportunities.
But still the conditions surrounding the negro to-day are the most promising and hopeful of any ever known to him. The opposition, the contradiction, or, as our subject terms it, the clash of races is far less severe than formerly.

The Chronicle's Opinion.

Like a faint echo from the misty past comes the news that the Honorable William A. Northcott has triumphed over the insurgents in the supreme body of the Woodmen at Indianapolis. It recalls that fateful day when a band of Iowa revolutionists of the same organization besieged Mr. Northcott in the railroad station at Fulton, Ill., their purpose being to get possession of the archives of the order. The entire Illinois National guard was mobilized to rescue the beleaguered statesman, who was discovered under the floor of the coal shed when the military arrived. Since that time such divinity hath hedged the Honorable W. A. Northcott that treason can but peep at what it would.
He is the whole thing in the Woodmen. Indeed, he is the Woodmen.—

ATTRACTED A CROWD.

The Game Between Unions, of Chicago, and Forbes' Americans.

Perhaps the largest number of people who ever attended a game of baseball at Lake Zurich assembled at Oak Park grounds Sunday afternoon to witness the contest between the colored team from Chicago—the Unions —and the well-known local aggregation—the Americans.

The colored boys have a reputation for fast playing, and it was expected they would make the Americans do some tall hustling. They did, but went down to defeat by a score of 11 to 4.

The Americans put up a strong battery and outfield, the Unions showing several weak spots in the line-up.
There were several features in the game, particularly Hutchinson's fielding and Redazelle's pitching for the Americans, and Huskile's work behind the bat for the Unions.

The following was the line-up of the teams:

UNIONS.	POSITION.	AMERICANS.
Armitt	2d base.	Bremmer
Ford	Left-field.	Hutchinson
Spence	3d base.	McCarthy
Huskile	Catcher.	Filbert
Street	Center-field.	Eaton
Gitton	Right-field.	Flood
Peters	1st base.	Slade
Smith	Pitcher.	Redazelle
Brown	Short-stop.	Sherring

Score—Americans, 11; Unions, 4.
Time of game, 2 hours. Attendance, 700.

"Never too late to mend" may apply to some things, but if your horse has a cut, a gall or a sore of any kind, the quicker you apply Cole's Veterinary Carbolisolve the better. It cures quickly and never leaves a scar. Guaranteed. 50-cent and $1.00 cans. Sold by all druggists.

SOUND ARGUMENT.

On the Question of Settling the Race Problem.

It is sickening to see newspapers and statesmen and sociologists and preachers putting on big glasses and the general expression of the owl and setting themselves to the study of the
"race problem."

It is nauseating to see them set about the study of this alleged problem by traveling in the southern states and collecting the opinions of "colonels" and "professors" and others to the effect that the negro is not fond of work; that he is inferior to the white man in reasoning power; that miscegenation in the south has ceased, and that, perhaps for that reason, the negro is grossly immoral—much more so than the Caucasian;
that the negro has no creative faculty,
and so on indefinitely as though all that had anything to do with the case, says the Chronicle.

All this goes upon the assumption that there is a problem as to what to do with the negro—whether to send him to Africa or to hades—and that we must find out wherein he differs from the white man before we can solve this problem.

There is no such problem. There is no race problem at all before the American people at the present time, but there is a political question respecting the negro. He had been declared a citizen and clothed with the rights of a citizen by the constitution of the United States. The question is whether the constitution in this respect shall be set at defiance—whether citizens shall be robbed of their constitutional rights and nothing done about it.

Wants $10,000 Damages.

The Chicago papers of yesterday contained the following: Frank O.
Willmarth of Barrington, who was defendant in a divorce suit that attracted considerable attention recently, was sued in the circuit court Wednesday for $10,000 damages by H. W.
Zemansky, 3233 Indiana avenue, who charges him with assault.

Zemansky owns the building where he lives and rented a flat to Will-marth's divorced wife, Willmarth it is said, went there May 5 and after displaying a revolver threatened to shoot his former wife. Zemansky was aroused by the disturbance said to have been made by the defendant and upon going to find out who was causing it was assaulted, it is alleged, by Willmarth.

CLOUDBURST BLOTS OUT TOWN OF HEPPNER, OREGON

Fully Five Hundred Lives Lost—Calamity Comes Almost Without Warning—Many of the Bodies Will Have To Be Burned With the Debris.

A cloudburst swept away the town of Heppner, Oregon, June 14. The wall of water came down the gulches, enveloped the town, and then swept on. It was sudden and short. Willow creek, ordinarily ten feet wide and six inches deep, in less than ten minutes was 400 feet wide and twenty feet deep. The wall of water could be seen coming down the gulch, but it rushed with such rapidity that the inhabitants had not time to get out of its path.

Fully 500 lives were lost.

It is now certain that a great many of the bodies will not be recovered, as they are inextricably mixed up in the debris of houses, which will be burned where it lies as soon as arrangements can be made. The ruins extend for nearly two miles down the bend of the creek.

The property loss and destruction of buildings alone will aggregate probably $1,000,000. This is regard-teen feet high, as a perpendicular wall.

"People did not have time to get from their homes. Those who were on the streets shouted warnings to the people as they rushed madly to the hills for their lives. They did not dare to turn back or they, too, would have been swept away.

"Fathers left wives and children to perish, as they had not a moment to spare. In some cases men returned to save members of their families, but it was too late, and many were carried to their death while returning.

"Those who had reached the banks in safety immediately formed themselves into small rescuing parties and started in to save those that could be reached. Ropes were the only means that we had. Those who were in midstream could easily be seen. Their pitiful cries for help could be heard, but nothing could be done. We these houses were about four or five blocks from the business center. The house of Abram Hamsick was entirely demolished. The Palace hotel was the first building to stem the tide and all the guests were saved, but the houses below that hotel were blown out into the street, overturned and wrecked. The residence of G. A. Rhea was carried away and the entire family, consisting of wife and three daughters and Miss Adkins, a cousin, were lost.

"Mr. Rhea was absent in Portland attending the Masonic convention. C. E. Redfield, whose residence was completely destroyed, was also absent with Mr. Rhea in Portland, and his wife and baby were drowned. A. C. Gieger's house was carried away and Mr. Geiger was drowned. His family is in the east. George Conser's house was next, but the members of the family succeeded in saving their lives by rushing to the upper stories, the house being carried down the creek three-quarters of a mile. When reached by the rescuers they found that the house had been cut in two and Mr. Conser was standing in water up to his neck, holding his wife upon the roof and keeping her from slipping with his outstretched arms. Dr. McSwaid and J. Ayers, who were living in the same residence, were drowned.

"Oscar Miner's house was next demolished and Mrs. Miner drowned. The rest of the family succeeded in saving their lives by clinging to the roof. All of the Wells family except two were lost and the house carried away. With the Wells residence went the house of George Swaggert. Mr. Swaggert's two married daughters were drowned, with their five children. The Mallory house was carried 150 yards and was found lodged against a store and Mr. Malley, a crippled old man, was found safe, holding a baby. Jim Matlock's house was next. Mr. Matlock was drowned, but his family was saved. Dr. Higgs' house also went. Here one left great heaps of driftwood piled higher than the roof of the station and the rescuing parties were forced to demolish these pyramids of timber in order to extricate the bodies which were tangled in the brush. Undoubtedly many of the drowned were carried by the rushing waters down the valley."

ed as a conservative estimate. One hundred and fifty of the best residences were swept from the earth. The debris is piled along the railroad track to the height of freight cars.

Heppner is the county seat of Morrow county, Ore., and had about 1,250 inhabitants.

The entire residence portion of the town was destroyed; but the business houses, being on higher ground and being generally built of brick and stone, were not so badly damaged.

The school house and court house, which stand on a side hill, were saved, but two churches, the Methodist and Presbyterian, were completely demolished.

John Kornan, the telegraph operator, died heroically with the raging waters surrounding the station. He stuck to the key and sent news of the disaster to Lone, warning people to flee there, thus saving hundreds of lives. He and his wife were drowned together.

N. I. Tooker of Portland, who was at Heppner when the cloudburst swept it away, gives a graphic description of the terrible affair. He said the rushing torrent came at 5:30 o'clock in the evening, when most of the inhabitants were at their evening meal.

"All were taken so suddenly and without warning," said Mr. Tooker, "that nothing could be done to save those who were caught in the rushing waters. Homes, stores and buildings in the main portion of the town were torn loose and driven onward, one jam causing the water to pile into another, and then sweep away again, causing more buildings to go."

"From the time the flood came until it went into the regular channel of the creek, flowing through the town, it was about two hours. It was about 5 o'clock when the first storm started to gather in the west of the city. It was a small, dark cloud at first, but it rapidly grew worse, accompanied by heavy wind and lightning.

"It was undoubtedly the last heavy crash of lightning that caused the water to fall in such an immense body. It struck fairly in the canyon of Willow creek, six miles above the town, and there was no warning until the mighty wall of water had reached town.

"As it came rushing down the creek bed it tore away everything, trees, boulders and earth. When it reached the town the water was more than fifcould only stand and see them go to their death.

"Leslie Matlock, a young man, was the hero of the day. When the flood first came he mounted a horse and rode at breakneck speed down the canyon in front of the rushing water to notify the people of Lexington, a small town nine miles below.

"He arrived at Lexington just a few minutes ahead of the flood. The people were warned and immediately left for the hills. When the flood had passed only two houses were standing."

David McAtee, a business man of Heppner, whose residence is on a bench above Heppner, was an eyewitness of the cloudburst disaster.

"On Sunday afternoon," said Mr. McAtee, "there had been a pretty severe rainstorm accompanied by much wind and lightning. I was standing in front of the house and noticed that a cloud of remarkable denseness approached the top of the hill on the east side of the canyon. I turned for a moment, when a roar caused me to look again at the hill. I saw a wall of water, whose height I would be afraid to gauge, rushing down the mountain, carrying immense trees and timbers on its crest and tearing the very rocks from their foundations.

"The terrific storm struck the upper part of the town first. The residence of Thomas Howard was the first to fall and his entire family was drowned. In the Krug home also every person was drowned, as was the case in the Hale and Saling residences. All of child was drowned, but the rest of the family escaped. Mrs. Elder was drowned in her residence. The houses of Mr. Boyd and Mr. Walton were also destroyed and both families lost.

"Mr. Barton succeeded in saving all persons in his residence, although they were badly bruised. The house itself was washed away.

"Perhaps the greatest loss of life occurred at the Heppner hotel. This house, which was run under the management of Jones & Ashbaugh, was carried away. The proprietors themselves were saved, but their families are among the dead.

"The houses of Ben Patterson, Mr. Dunn and Mr. Noble were entirely demolished and all persons in these three families drowned, as were the families of James Jones and Henry Blair. The barn of Dr. Swineburn and the big livery stable of Whittles & Meadows were entirely destroyed. E. J. Farnsworth and Philip Cohn were also drowned.

"Around the depot the rising water bargain,

Mrs. Curtis and child, Mrs. Nora Adkins, baby of J. K. Carr, Mrs. Dave Hamilton and two daughters, Mr. and Mrs. James Jones and two daughters, Harry Handley, wife and child, Bertha Frislow, Mrs. Lumshea, James Willis and two children.

In addition to the foregoing are twenty babies and strangers that were not identified.

Another Whistler Anecdote.
James McNeill Whistler's portrait of Carlyle is owned by the corporation of Glasgow. Shortly after it was finished a committee from the corporation visited Mr. Whistler, intending to purchase the wonderful painting. They wanted to know about the price, which the artist had announced as 1,000 guineas. "Didn't you know the price before you came here?" asked Whistler, blandly. "Oh, yes, we knew, but—" "Then let's talk about something else," interrupted Whistler. The canny Scots bought the picture and—trust them—got a

A Story of Cromwell's Time

"Now, indeed, you pierce my heart. You at his mercy! It is an intolerable shame! It will make me cry out, even when I sleep! I shall die of it. You! You to be at his mercy—at the mercy of that Puritan braggart. Oh, I cannot endure it!"

"You see that I endure it very complacently, Mata. The man behaved as a gentleman and a soldier. I have even taken a liking to him. I have also paid back his kindness; we are quits, and as soldiers, friends. And I can assure you no one's honor suffered, mine least of all."

But Matilda was hard to comfort. Her last interview with her lover was saddened and troubled by this disagreement.

This, then, was the end of the visit from which she had expected so much; and one sad gray morning in November they reached London.

Matilda said to herself in the first hours of her return that she would not see Jane, but as the day wore on she changed her mind. So she wrote and asked her to come, and Jane answered the request in person, at once. Her admiration for her friend's beautiful gowns and laces and jewels, and her interest in Matilda's descriptions of the circumstances in which they were worn, was so genuine, that Matilda had forgotten her relation to Lord Neville, when the irritating name was mentioned.

"Did you see Lord Neville in Paris?" Jane asked.

"No," Matilda answered sharply. "I did not see him. He called one day, and had a long talk with Sir Thomas but aunt had a headache, and I had more delightful company. He prevented my seeing the Queen of Bohemia on my return, because he offered to attend to my uncle's business at England—of depreciating a regular ministry (for what need of one, if all men could prophesy?) and of opposing learning and education, he declared the salvation of the nation lay in resigning the trust committed to them into the hands of the Lord General Cromwell. The motion was seconded by Sir Charles Wolsey. The speaker left the chair, and followed by a majority of the members, went to Whitehall, and there and then they wrote out their resignation.

No serious opposition was made. Some thirty of the members remained in the House "to protest," but Col. Goff entering with a file of musketeers, the argument was quickly closed. Three days after this event a new Council of State resolved that his Excellency be chosen Lord Protector of the three nations, and on the sixteenth of December he was installed in Westminster Hall.

"And you would think that he had been publicly scorned instead of publicly chosen," said Israel to his wife. "He looks miserable; he is silent and downcast, and talks much to himself. Yet he is in his right place, and the only man in England who can save us from anarchy. Martha, his Excellency and her Highness desire your company, and that of Jane, to the ceremony. You will go?"

"I had better stay at home, Israel. I cannot 'Your Highness' Elizabeth Cromwell. Jane will go."

"And you, too, Martha. I wish it."

"I never go against your wishes, Israel—at least not often."

So it happened that on the sixteenth of December, Mrs. Swaffham and Jane were dressing for Whitehall. Mrs. Swaffham was nervous and irritable; nervous, because she feared her gown was not as handsome as it ought to be; irritable, because she felt that ting is bad for you every way. Why will you do it?"

"How can I help it, mother?"

Then Mrs. Swaffham looked at her daughter's white face, and said, "You know, dear, where and how to find the comfort you need. God help you, child."

And oh, how good it was to the heart-sick girl, to be at last alone, to be able to weep unwatched and unchecked—to shut the door of her soul on the world and open it to God, to tell Him all her doubt and fear and lonely grief. This was her consolation, even though no sensible comfort came from it—though the heavens seemed far off, and there was no ray of light, no whisper from beyond to encourage her.

At nine o'clock her mother brought her a posset and toast, and she took them gratefully. "Is father home?" she asked.

"Yes, Jane. He came in an hour ago with Doctor Verity."

"Have they any word of —"

"I fear not. They would have told me at once. I haven't seen much of them. There were lots of things undone, and badly done, to look after."

"If Doctor Verity gives you any opportunity will you speak about Cluny, mother?"

"You know I will. He and others will, maybe, have time for a word of kindness now. Now Cromwell has got his way, there will be only Cromwell to please, and surely a whole city full can manage that."

"I don't suppose he has ever thought of Cluny being so long over time."

"Not he! He has had things far closer to him to look after."

"But now?"

"Now he will inquire after the lad. Doctor Verity must speak to him. Dear Jane, do you suppose I don't see how you are suffering? I do, my girl, and I suffer with you. But even your father thinks we are worrying ourselves for nothing. He says Cluny will walk in some day and tell his own story—nothing worse than a fit of ague or fever, or even a wound from some street pad; perhaps a heavy snowstorm, or the swampy Netherlands under water. Men can't fight the elements, or even outwit them, dear. Mother is with you, Jane, don't you doubt that," and she stepped forward and clasped the girl to her breast.

Jane's supposition that Doctor Verity would be with her father and that their talk would be only of Cromwell, was correct. Mrs. Swaffham found the two men smoking at the fireside, and their conversation was of the Man and the Hour.

"I am sorry for Oliver Cromwell. Such a load as he has shouldered! Can he bear it?" said Israel.

"Through God's help, yes; and ten times over, yes! He is a great man," answered the Doctor.

"I think more of measures than of men," continued Israel.

"Very good. But something depends on the men, just as in a fire something depends on the grate," said the Doctor. "Oliver will do his work, and he will do it well, and then go to Him who sent him. Verily, I believe he will hear the 'Well done' of his Master."

"And then?"

"The Commonwealth will be over. The soul of it will have departed—can it live afterwards?"

"If I survive the Puritan government," said Israel, "I will join the pilgrims who have gone over the great seas."

"I will go with you, Israel, but we will not call ourselves 'pilgrims.' No, indeed! No men are less like pilgrims than they who go, not to wander about, but to build homes and cities and found republics in the land they have been led to. They are citizens, not pilgrims."

At these words Mrs. Swaffham, who had listened between sleeping and waking, roused herself thoroughly. "Israel," she said, "I will not go across seas. It is not likely. Swaffham is our very own, and we will stay in Swaffham."

KNOWN HIS OWN TERRAPIN.

Virginian Identified It by Its Peculiar Expression.

"Tidewater Virginia," said Mr. E. L. White of Lancaster, Va., at the Shoreham recently, "is the most delightful and wonderful country in the world. Everything that heart can wish or the appetite can fancy is produced from the fertile fields and the great rivers that traverse them on their way to the bay. Nothing ever surpassed her oysters, her fish, her ducks, her diamond-back terrapins."

"The terrapin farming," he continued, "is a remarkable business and very lucrative. But it requires a large outlay of capital and a great deal of labor. Each owner of a 'farm'—as the little water front fenced in for the purpose is called—zealously guards his domain and resents the slightest encroachment by a neighbor or stranger. And a curious thing about it is that these men engaged in the business have learned to know their own terrapins by the expression of their faces. Not long ago a negro boy was arrested in one of the lower counties in the Rappahannock river for stealing a 'diamond back,' and he was convicted upon the testimony of the owner, who swore point blank that the said terrapin was his, and was stolen from his 'farm,' because he recognized the aforesaid terrapin by its individual expression of countenance, which he had studied for years."

"He stated also that all his terrapins had the same smile and gentle look out of the quiet eyes; that he would know them at once anywhere among all the terrapins of the world. I tell you, sir, Tidewater Virginia is a wonder."—Washington Post.

Hot Water Stops Business.

The Citizens' national bank of Alton has a peculiar affliction since the high water filled its cellar. The water, which ran through the sewers into the cellar, became heated by a public-heating system of pipes, and was raised to boiling temperature. The bank became almost untenable, as the hot water is seven feet deep. It was necessary to shut down the public-heating system because of the peculiar plight of the bank.

MAYOR AND COUNCIL RESIGN

License Men Quit Office Because Citizens Vote Against Saloons.

Mayor A. J. Hardin and three members of the city council of Cobden have resigned their positions, and the city is without a city council or executive head. The city, at the annual election, voted out saloons, and as the expenses of government and improvements have been met by the revenue derived from licenses the new mayor and council, although avowed license men when assuming their positions, found an empty treasury and a city indebtedness. Since then the debt has increased, and seeing no way in which to remedy matters, and refusing to grant licenses after the will of the people was expressed, resigned. A special city election will be held to elect a new government, providing men can be found who will accept. It is possible that the saloon question will be again submitted.

Mrs. Swaffham and Jane were glad to return home.

The Hague for him, and for this interference I do not thank Lord Neville."

"Nor I," answered Jane. "Had he not gone to The Hague he might have been in London by this time."

Jane had risen as she said these words, and was trying on her bonnet, and Matilda watched her with a curious interest. "I was wondering," she said slowly, "if you will be glad to marry Cluny Neville and go away to Scotland with him."

"Oh, yes," Jane answered, her eyes shining, her mouth wreathed in smiles, her whole being expressing her delight in such an anticipation. Matilda made no further remark, but when Jane had closed the door behind her, she sat down thoughtfully by the fire, and stirring together the red embers, sighed rather than said:

"Why do people marry and bring up sons and daughters? This girl has been loved to the uttermost by her father and mother and brothers, and she will gladly leave them all to go off with this young Scot. She will call it 'Sacrifice for Love's sake'; I call it pure selfishness. Yet I am not a whit whiter than she. I would have stayed in Paris with Rupert, though my good uncle was in danger. I think I will go to my evening service," and as she rose for her Common Prayer, she was saying under her breath, "We have left undone those things which we ought to have done, and we have done those things which we ought not to have done. And there is no health in us."

CHAPTER XI.

Oliver Protector.

The popular discontent with the rapid and radical reforms of the saints' Parliament was not confined to the Royalists; the nation, without regard to party, was bitterly incensed and alarmed. Cromwell was no exception; the most conservative of men, he also grew angry and restless when he saw the reign of the saints beginning in earnest.

Soon the anger outside the Parliament House rose to fury. Doubtless Cromwell had foreseen this crisis. Certainly a large number of the members were of his way of thinking, and on the twelfth of December, Col. Sydenham rose, and accusing the members of wishing to put a Mosaic code in place of the Common Law of

The Royal Tragedy at Belgrade.

The frightful royal tragedy so lately enacted in Belgrade was not an unnatural or yet a wholly unexpected outcome of the turbulent and scandalous conditions which have existed in Serbia almost continuously ever since that little Balkan state acquired its independence from Turkey. Ever since 1805, when the Servians rebelled against the abominable and intolerable misgovernment of the Turks, they have been the prey of two peasant dynasties, the Karageorgievichs and the Obrenovitchs, who have in turn ruled over them as chiefs, princes or kings, beginning with Karageorg (Black George), a peasant who headed the first insurrection against Turkey in 1805 and who appears later to have either betrayed his country to the Turks or to have been defeated by them, and Milosh Obrenovitch, a rich swineherd, became leader of the Servians and founded the Obrenovitch dynasty, to which the late unlamented Alexander belonged. In point of merit there seems to be very little difference between the two houses.

Having swapped Karageorgievichs for Obrenovitchs, the Servians have now swapped back, putting Peter Karageorgievich, a descendant of the original Black George, in the place of the degenerate and profligate Alexander, who was the last of the Obrenovitch line. His father, the unregenerate Milan, an exile from Serbia, alone remains of the Obrenovitch family.

During his comparatively short reign Alexander twice abrogated the free constitution of his country and installed ministers not representatives of the majority of the skuptschina, or chamber. In many ways he rendered his person and his government obnoxious.

The violence of the revolted troops, who probably by their acts represented closely the popular will and who seemed to have killed about everybody they could find in the royal palace, including Queen Draga and several ministers, is the product of a long accumulation of the forces of resentment and rage. The misbehavior of the murdered king and queen was quite sufficient to account for the angry and murderous revolt against them.

Whether or not the Servian people will be any better off under their new-old dynasty remains to be seen. Apparently the bloody coup d'etat meets the approval of the Servian people.

At all events the country cannot be worse off under the Karageorgievich dynasty than it was under the Obrenovitch dynasty. Prince Peter, the new king, may or may not be any more estimable in morals than the Obrenovitchs have been. However, he is a man of much ability and great wealth. He was educated at the French military college of St. Cyr and served with credit as a captain in the French army in the war with Germany. He is possessed of great personal courage and will probably make a strenuous and self-willed king. He is a protégé and practical vassal of the Russian czar, and he is a son-in-law of the Prince of Montenegro, a close friend of Russia. Russian influence has heretofore been largely exerted in his behalf.

Without doubt Belgrade will continue to be the center of active intrigues, Russian and anti-Russian, just as Sofia and Bucharest will continue to be like centers. That is the destiny of the capital of a Balkan state. Undoubtedly also the Russian intrigues will gain by the presence of the new monarch while his term lasts.

It does not follow, however, that Belgrade will be more of a storm center than it has been or that the change wrought by the assassins will put in greater jeopardy the peace of Europe.

If King Peter rules his people, who are a sturdy and liberty-loving race, with intelligence, liberality and justice and avoids the excesses and indiscretions of his predecessor, the shocking tragedy at Belgrade, in which the new sovereign appears to have had no direct complicity, is not likely to have any material effect on the politics of Europe outside the Balkans.

A New South American Alliance.

The report comes from Buenos Ayres that the Argentine Republic, Chile, Brazil and Uruguay have formed an alliance to help each other in case any European power should threaten their sovereignty, to advance diplomatic intervention in case of conflicts between European nations and any South American republic not included in the alliance, and to observe, with other South American republics, a policy calculated to prevent conflicts.

While there is very little likelihood that any European power will ever threaten the sovereignty of any South American republic, the alleged alliance would undoubtedly serve a useful purpose by its second and third provisions. It at least indicates that the South American republics are rather more inclined than formerly to settle their disputes without resort to arms. A long step was taken in this direction when Argentina and Chile lately agreed to bury the hatchet and reduce their armaments. During the past few months several disputes between other South American republics have been settled by arbitration, and the recent tendency has been all in the direction of peace and good will.

The recent Venezuelan incident has somewhat intensified the previously existing Spanish-American resentment against Europe and naturally served to draw the South American republics closer together and convince them of the identity of their interests.

South American history does not furnish precedents for enduring alliances even in the face of common danger, and it is possible that the contracting parties to the proposed compact are overestimating their own strength of purpose as well as exaggerating their peril. Certain it is that they need have no fear of European sovereignty, as the Monroe doctrine will amply protect them against any such emergency. If, however, they choose to get together for a better understanding in their relations with each other, such an alliance as the one suggested will prove of value. It certainly could not be inimical to the United States, whose only desire in the premises is that they live in peace and prosper.

Professor Bailey's Study of Suicides.

Perhaps something more than morbid interest attaches to the suicide statistics lately prepared after thorough investigation by Professor Bailey of Yale university, as they possibly point to some general conditions to which sociologists may address corrective attention. Working on a basis of 10,000 suicide cases, covering the period of 1897 to 1901, Professor Bailey finds that 7,781 of these were men and 2,219 women. Nearly half of the total, or 4,807, were married. Of the remainder, 4,054 were single, 679 widowed and 198 divorced, the marital condition of 262 being unknown. Professor Bailey found that more single, widowed and divorced women commit suicide than men in like condition, while married men are more prone to take their lives than married women. The largest percentage of suicides occur between the ages of thirty and forty years, followed closely by the preceding decade of life, two-thirds of the suicides being found between twenty and fifty years. Of the total 32 per cent found death by means of shooting and 27 per cent by poison, much smaller percentages choosing drowning, cutting, gas, jumping, hanging, etc. He points out that despondency is the leading motive, claiming about 20 per cent of the victims, while business loss, ill health and insanity account for about 13 per cent each, followed in order of frequency by disappointment in love. It is noted that suicide on account of alcoholism is seventeen times as common among men as women.

While it may be impossible for any human agency ever to combat successfully the suicide evil save by persuasion of individuals, the deductions to be drawn from such investigations as that of Professor Bailey may develop lines of inquiry and corrective influences which will possibly lessen the now alarming number of cases of self destruction.

Dr. Holmes' Table Talk.

At table Dr. Holmes was unflaggingly vivacious, ready at repartee, as witty as Lowell without Lowell's audacity at punning and for the immediate moment as wise as Emerson. Underwood, in his monograph on "Lowell, the Poet and the Man," has by some lapse of memory misquoted a passage of words that took place between Emerson and Holmes at one of the early Atlantic dinners. The conversation was upon the orders of architecture. It was Emerson, not Holmes, who had been saying that the Egyptian was characterized by breadth of base, the Grecian by the adequate support and the Gothic by its skyward soaring. Then it was Holmes, not Emerson, who flashed out instantly, "One is for death, one is for life, and one is for immortality." I did not hear this, but it was repeated to me at the time by one who did.—J. T. Trowbridge in Atlantic.

Huge Stones From the Moon.

In a catalogue of Mexican meteorites prepared by M. Antonio del Castillo one mass is mentioned which exploded in the air and fell in widely dispersed fragments, portions of it being found in three places at the angles of a triangle whose two longer sides were some fifty-five and thirty-five miles in length. In one of these places two plates of stone were discovered, lying about 250 yards apart, which had evidently once formed one huge block. Measurements and estimations place the combined weight of the two blocks at eighty tons. In this one shower of "moon stones," according to M. del Castillo's paper, not less than 3,000 tons of rocks fell.

Opportunities.

However a man is gifted, whether for active enterprise of thought or charity, there lies around him a world of opportunity. So far behind are we socially, morally, intellectually, that one might be forgiven if he supposed the world were made but yesterday and nothing had yet been done. Does no ambition fire us to help the despairing, starving, sinking people around us? If a few more years be added to our life, would we not strive to put something right, to sweep out some little corner, to awaken some soul to see and rejoice in the growing light?—Good Words.

Bird Superstitions.

In many parts of England there are curious superstitions about birds. The stonechat, for instance, is believed to be continually chatting with the evil one, so it is held in bad repute, and as the raven commonly impersonates his sable majesty it is ranked in the same category of evil birds. Sometimes, however, the raven's appearance, so it is held, forebodes a death.

THE SCOLD'S BRIDLE.

Brutal Punishment to Which Women Were Once Subjected.

The brank, or scold's bridle, or gossip's bridle, was neither more nor less than a muzzle. It was in general use in Great Britain from the sixteenth to the eighteenth century, and in Scotland as well women were muzzled for certain offenses, some at least of them more imaginary than real. The instrument of torture, even a dog's leather muzzle, is uncomfortable; how much more the scold's muzzle? It consisted, according to a high authority, Mr. W. Jewitt, of a kind of crown or framework of iron, which was locked upon the head, and it was armed in front with a gag, a plate or a sharp cutting knife or point, which was placed in the poor woman's mouth so as to prevent her moving her tongue, or it was so placed that if she did move it or attempt to speak it was cut in a most frightful manner. With this cage upon her head and with the gag firmly pressed and locked against her tongue the miserable creature, whose sole offending perhaps was that she raised her voice in defense of her social rights against a brutal and besotted husband or had spoken honest truth of some one high in office in her town, was paraded through the streets, led by a chain by the hand of a bellman, the beadle or the constable or chained to the pillory, the whipping post or market cross, to be subjected to every conceivable insult and degradation, without even the power left her of asking for mercy or of promising amendment for the future, and when the punishment was over she was turned out from the town hall or the place where the brutal punishment had been inflicted, maimed, disfigured, bleeding, faint and degraded, to be the subject of comment and jeering among her neighbors and to be reviled by her persecutors.—Fireside Magazine.

Cures For Insomnia.

To an overworked little woman who suffers from insomnia an old doctor delivered himself as follows:

"Shun all the devices one hears so much about, such as counting up to 5,000. They are maddening. Never take night baths if their action is too stimulating. Go in for a few physical exercises, including deep breathing. After the exercises walk backward on tiptoe round the room until forty or fifty steps have been taken. When in bed, relax the body completely. Take long, slow, deep breaths, and if you must think of something imagine yourself surrounded and supported by a soft, strong, gray cloud which is bearing you off to slumberland. Drinking a glass of warm milk just before retiring sometimes hastens the trip."—New York Press.

Queer Looking Worms.

New Zealand, Australia, the Samoan and the Solomon islands as well as portions of the Hawaiian group are the homes of various species of worms with thick, heavy bodies and with a well defined neck connecting the body with a head that is a startling reminder of that of the monkey. In the Sandwich Islands they are called "me-ta-lu-ki," which means "creeper with a child's head." An old New Zealand legend says that at one time they were of immense proportions and threatened the extinction of all human life on the islands.

ORDINANCE NO. 180.

Providing for the Construction of Sidewalks Along the Various Streets in the Village of Palatine, County of Cook and State of Illinois.

Be It Ordained by the President and Board of Trustees of the Village of Palatine:

Section 1. That all sidewalks, which shall be ordered by the president and board of trustees of the village of Palatine, shall be constructed under the superintendence and to the satisfaction of the committee on sidewalks, and subject to their approval, and shall be built, except as hereinafter provided, of the width hereinafter specified, and shall be constructed as follows:

The inside line of every sidewalk shall be twelve (12) inches from and parallel with the line of the lot along and in front of which the said sidewalk is to be constructed. That portion of the street upon which the said sidewalk is to be laid, shall be brought to a grade eight (8) inches below the established grade of such sidewalk, and such space so excavated shall be, at its base, of a width of four (4) inches more than the concrete portion of the sidewalk, and shall incline upwards and evenly on both sides, to the concrete outer edges of said sidewalk, and with a slight depression in the middle of such excavation. Such space shall then be covered with a layer of common gravel four (4) inches in depth, and above this shall be a layer of coarse gravel two (2) inches in depth, and upon such coarse gravel surface there shall be laid concrete two (2) inches thick and with a gradual slope of one (1) inch to the center of said sidewalk. The said concrete portion of such sidewalk shall be of a uniform width of four (4) feet and eight (8) inches, except as is otherwise provided, and shall be rolled and shall make a hard, uniform surface at the established grade of such sidewalk. All concrete is to be of first-class tar and asphalt concrete. At all street corners such sidewalk shall project five (5) feet and (8) inches beyond the lot line. The sides of the said sidewalks are to be faced with strips of sod at least six (6) inches wide.

Section 2. All sidewalks laid or constructed along and in front of business property shall be of the construction and dimensions herein described, except that the concrete portion of such sidewalk shall be of not less than five (5) feet in width from the outer edge of steps leading into such business buildings, and as located in accordance with the written permission of the committee on sidewalks.

Section 3. The owner of any lot or piece of ground fronting on any sidewalk to be constructed under the provisions of the ordinances of the president and board of trustees of said village shall be allowed thirty (30) days after such ordinance thereof providing shall be published in which to construct the said sidewalk along side of his lot or piece of parcel of ground and thereby relieve the same from the special tax provided to be levied thereon for the construction of the said sidewalk.

When any owner shall so construct the sidewalk along his lot or piece of parcel of ground, such owner may substitute cement in the place of the material above provided for, but in all other respects the said sidewalk must conform to the provisions of this ordinance. Whenever any such sidewalk shall be constructed by the owner of the lot, piece or parcel of land fronting such sidewalk, such construction shall be under the superintendence and to the satisfaction of the committee on sidewalks, and must conform to written specifications filed with, and approved by the said committee on sidewalks.

Section 4. Whenever any sidewalk is constructed under the terms of this ordinance then one-third (1/3) of the cost of the construction of a concrete sidewalk in accordance with the specifications herein set forth, along the lot, piece or parcel of land along which the said sidewalk is constructed, shall be borne and paid by the said village, providing that such one-third (1/3) of the cost shall not exceed the one-third (1/3) of the contract cost of the concrete sidewalk for which said village could have constructed the said sidewalk, which payment shall be made upon the order of the president and board of trustees out of the funds of the said village and appropriated for this purpose.

The remaining two-thirds (2/3) of the costs shall be borne by the owners of the lots, pieces and parcels of land in proportion to their frontage on the said sidewalk.

Whenever the said improvement shall not be made by the said owner, it shall be made by the said village and two-thirds of the cost thereof shall be wholly paid for by special taxation of the lot, piece or parcel of land contiguous to the proposed sidewalk by levying such cost upon such lot, lots or parcels of land in proportion to their respective frontages on said proposed sidewalks.

Section 5. The grade for sidewalks shall be established by the president and board of trustees as soon as it is practicable, where such has not already been done, but in all cases where not so established, the grade for new sidewalks shall be that fixed by the president and board of trustees from time to time. It shall be the duty of any person laying or constructing any sidewalk in the said sidewalk to apply for and ascertain such grade. If any person shall build or attempt to build, any sidewalk, or portion thereof, and fail, neglect or refuse, to comply with the provisions of this or the special ordinance providing for such sidewalk, the president and board of trustees shall direct such sidewalk or portion thereof, as the case may be, to be relaid, and in case of neglect or refusal of the person so directed immediately to comply with such directions, the president and board of trustees may proceed as if no sidewalk or portion thereof had been laid.

Section 6. Whenever any sidewalk or portion thereof, shall be required or directed to be laid, the president and board of trustees shall give notice thereof to the owners of the property interested. Whenever any sidewalk shall be ordered by any president and board of trustees to be renewed, and such renewal is to be made by special assessment, or by special taxation, the provisions of this ordinance shall apply, in so far as the same may be applicable.

Section 9. A bill of the costs of any sidewalk not made by the owners of the lots, pieces or parcels of land fronting upon the said sidewalks, showing, in separate items, the cost of grading, materials, laying down and supervision, shall be filed in the office of the clerk of the village of Palatine, certified to by the committee on sidewalks, together with a list of the lots or parcels of land touching upon the lines of the said sidewalks; the names of the owners thereof, and the frontage thereof. Whereupon the said village clerk shall prepare a special tax list against such lots or parcels of land and the owners thereof, ascertaining by computation, the amount of special tax to be charged against each of the lots or parcels and the owners thereof, on account of the construction of the said sidewalks, in proportion to the frontage of each of the said lots on the said sidewalks, which special tax list the clerk of the village of Palatine shall place on file in his office; and the said village clerk shall thereupon issue warrants directed to the village collector, for the collection of the amount of special tax so ascertained and appearing from the said special tax list to be due from the respective owners of the lot, lots or parcels of land touching upon the said sidewalk, and the said village collector shall proceed to collect the said warrant by making a demand thereon upon the owners respectively of the lots or parcels of land touching upon the line of the said sidewalks, if they shall be found in the village of Palatine, and to make return, with the money collected thereon, to the village clerk of Palatine within sixty (60) days from the date of the issue of the said warrants, and such collector shall otherwise proceed in the manner provided for in section three (3) of the act of the general assembly of the state of Illinois, entitled "An act to provide additional means for the construction of sidewalks in cities, towns and villages," in force July 1, 1875.

Section 10. In case of failure to collect the said special tax in the manner aforesaid, the village clerk shall, within one year thereafter, make a report of all such special taxes, in writing, to the county collector of Cook county, of all of the lots or parcels of land upon which such special tax shall be so unpaid, with the names of the respective owners thereof, so far as the same are known to him, and the amount due and unpaid upon such tract, together with a copy of the ordinance providing for such sidewalks, and shall proceed in the manner prescribed by section four (4) of the act of the general assembly of the state of Illinois, entitled "An act to provide additional means for the construction of sidewalks in cities, towns and villages," in force July 1, 1875.

Section 11. That no person shall engage in the business of making or laying cement on concrete sidewalks in the said village, without first having obtained a license as provided in this ordinance.

The president of the village shall, from time to time, grant licenses under his hand and the seal of the said village, to exercise and carry on the business of making and laying cement or concrete sidewalks.

For every license so granted, the sum of ten dollars ($10) shall be paid the village treasurer by the party to whom the license is to be granted, and before the issuance of the same.

Any person who shall make or lay any cement or concrete sidewalk in village, without being duly licensed to perform such work, shall be subject to a fine of not less than five dollars ($5), and not to exceed fifty dollars ($50) for each offense.

Section 12. When any sidewalk in the said village shall, in the opinion of the committee on sidewalks, be deemed to be in need of repairs, the said committee on sidewalks shall cause such repairs to be made, forthwith, and the same shall be paid for by the said village.

When, in the opinion of the committee on sidewalks, any board sidewalk shall be deemed in a condition too poor to repair, then the committee on sidewalks shall recommend to the president and board of trustees that a new sidewalk be ordered.

Section 13. This ordinance shall take effect and be in force immediately on and after its passage and publication as provided by law therefor.

Adopted by the president and board of trustees of the village of Palatine, on the 6th day of June, A. D., 1903.

Wine of Cardui is a regulator of the menstrual functions and is a most astonishing tonic for women. It cures scanty, suppressed, too frequent, irregular and painful menstruation, falling of the womb, whites and flooding. It is helpful when approaching womanhood, during pregnancy, after childbirth and in change of life. It frequently brings a dear baby to homes that have been barren for years. All druggists have $1.00 bottles of Wine of Cardui.

G. A. R. ENCAMPMENT.

Great Preparations on the Pacific Coast for the Visit of the Veterans This Fall.

MUCH ENTHUSIASM IN G. A. R. CIRCLES

The Railroads Have Announced Low Rates

A great deal of enthusiasm is being evidenced in G. A. R. circles concerning the National Encampment at San Francisco in August, and thousands of veterans who have never visited the coast will take advantage of the low railroad rates to the encampment.

The Pacific Coast has always been noted for its hospitality and San Francisco is making preparations for this occasion on a gorgeous scale. The accommodations for guests will be most complete and the railroads have announced low excursion rates to all points in the state to give the veterans a chance to visit the various points of interest.

The passenger department of Chicago & North-Western Railway announces a rate of $50.00 for the round trip from Chicago to San Francisco and Los Angeles, and correspondingly low rates will be made by all lines from other points.

SERVIA TURNS TO NEW KING; WORK OF MURDERERS INDORSED

Rumors that Karageorgevitch Is Not Satisfied with the Situation—Authentic Story of the Assassination Told by One of the Soldiers Who Took Part in the Affair.

The conference of senators and deputies, held at Belgrade, resolved unanimously, that the constitution of 1888 should be put in force, and that Prince Peter Karageorgevitch should be elected king.

It is not certain that Karageorgevitch will accept the crown. The most sensational rumors have been received from Geneva. One is to the effect that the prince demands that before he enters Belgrade all officers concerned in the murders shall have left it, requires an increase in his civil list, and insists that his election must be unanimous.

It is believed that the terms laid down by the prince will be granted, that the assassins will be banished, and that amnesty will be extended to them later.

Prince Karageorgevitch, although little is known of him among the people of Serbia generally seems to have caught the public fancy, and his election will be a popular one.

King and Queen Buried.
The bodies of the murdered king and queen were spurned and spit upon by hundreds as they lay in rude coffins awaiting burial. They were buried body was torn in a barbaric fashion. The appearance of the royal apartments is indescribable. The doors and floors are shattered and the ruins drenched with blood.

A new element in the situation is a feeling among the intelligent classes in favor of the abolition of a Serbian monarchy altogether, and the creation of a republic, but it is certain that Austria and Russia would not countenance the creation of a republic.

The government has laid claim to the possessions of the late monarch. It is not known whether he left a fortune, but it is supposed that he had considerable savings, having lived economically during the last decade. It is reported that the greater part of his money was deposited in England, but it is questionable whether the capital would be delivered to the Serbian government. The opinion at Belgrade is that all belongs to the state, even including the king's foreign investments. It is possible that ex-Queen Natalie may also appear as an heiress. Queen Draga was in receipt of 30,000 gulden monthly, and also had great savings, which will be handed over to her three sisters.

NEW KING DENIES COMPLICITY.

Says the Killing Was to Him a Shocking Surprise.

Prince Peter Karageorgevitch, the pretender to the Serbian throne, gave an interview at Geneva, Switzerland, in which he repeated his disclaimer of any complicity, direct or indirect, in the assassination of King Alexander and Queen Draga. He expressed his detestation of the crime, and gave a brief outline of his own political tendencies.

Replying to a series of direct questions, Prince Peter said:

"It is true my partisans have a complete organization in Serbia, with which I am in frequent communication. I know from other sources that the discontent of the Serbian people had reached its height, but I could not possibly have foreseen the events of the other night. I in no way contributed to their preparation, and I took no part, direct or indirect, in them. On the contrary, their perpetration surprised me.

"My opinion of the executions of the king and queen of Serbia is this: I deeply regret that it has been thought necessary to shed streams of blood. I formally disapprove of the violent measures, and I especially deplore that the army has had recourse to such measures—an army which has nobler tasks to accomplish than assassination. It would have sufficed to force King Alexander to sign his abdication.

Ever a Soldier of Fortune.

Since Prince Peter Karageorgevitch has been spoken of for King of Serbia, those who have known for a long time the members of his family and who some years ago knew him as an interesting figure in Paris, are recalling various phases of his adventurous and checkered career. His life has been filled with dare-devil escapades and the ups and downs of a royal pretender and a soldier of fortune. He has been constantly engaged in intrigue, plots, and counterplots for the realization of his royal demands.

The prince received in Belgrade the early education of a prince, but when a boy of 12 he saw the rule of his family terminated and he and his relatives were driven into exile. He entered the lycee of Sainte Barbe, and there qualified himself for the military school of St. Cyr, from which he was graduated a sublieutenant. Later he entered the military staff college, and, graduating therefrom just before the outbreak of the Franco-Prussian war, he eagerly plunged into this conflict as an officer of the foreign legion, which was largely made up of scions of noble houses and adventurous foreigners.

He was in the hardest fighting of the war and took part in the battle of Orleans, where his cousin, Nicolaevich, was killed. He there attracted the attention of Gen. Billot, who made him a member of his personal staff. His conspicuous bravery in the battle of Villersexel brought him the badge of the legion of honor. On the conclusion of the war he turned his attention to Herzegovina's struggle for liberty and took a prominent part in the rising which was the starting point of the Russo-Turkish war. He spent the great part of his fortune in aiding the insurgents.

ACCOUNT OF THE MURDER.

Royal Couple Long Evaded Their Determined Pursuers.

The following is a narrative of the revolution given by men who took an active part in it:

"Army officers to the number of ninety having formed a project of a revolt, among them being delegates from almost every garrison in Serbia and the majority of the officers of the Sixth regiment. Lieut. Col. Mitschitsch invited his comrades to meet in the Kalimagden garden at 11 o'clock on the night of the murder, and there the immediate carrying out of the intended deed was organized.

"At 1:40 a. m. the officers in eight groups went to the royal palace. Each had special directions regarding his part in the revolution. In the palace itself the revolutionaries had two important partisans in the king's bodyguard—Col. Alexander Maschin, Queen Draga's cousin, not brother-in-law, and the king's personal adjutant, Lieut. Naumovitch.

"Two officers of the high military academy appeared at the appointed hour, 2 a. m., at the gate of the palace, where the king's adjutant, Panajotovic, who was in the conspiracy, handed them the keys to the garden gate, which is always kept locked. First, stepping before the guard at the palace, one of the two officers called, 'Throw down your arms.' A fight ensued, with shots from both sides, in which several persons were wounded.

"The revolutionaries then entered the front garden without hindrance and reached the courtyard of the old palace, where Lieut. Naumovitch was awaiting. He opened the lock of the iron door leading to the front room on the first floor. By this it was seen that the palace was carefully closed and that danger was suspected. Hurrying up stairs to the first floor, the revolting officers attracted the attention of the palace attendants and the royal couple by the noise of the shooting. Lieut. Lavar Petrovitch, alarmed by the unwonted hubbub, hurried forward with a drawn revolver in one hand and in the other a sword.

"What do you want? he cried.

"Show us where the king and queen are," came the reply.

"Back!" cried Petrovitch, and at the same moment a bullet stretched him on the ground. The revolutionaries pressed forward, when suddenly the electric light gave out. All stood in darkness. In the greatest excitement, and feeling their way, the revolutionaries climbed the stairs and got into the dark anteroom to the king's apartment. Here they found candles and lit them.

"This seemingly slight circumstance was decisive to the whole action. Without light they could not have found the victims, who fled from their sleeping apartment through corridors and numerous rooms, and might have escaped, but some of the officers with burning candles and others with pistols commenced to search for the royal couple.

"In breathless haste the conspirators ran through the rooms, opened wardrobes, and looked behind curtains, in vain. In the anteroom connecting with the corridor between the old and new palace the sergeant of the gendarmes was sleeping. Awakening, he stepped before the revolutionaries, who felled him.

"At last Queen Draga's servant was found. He wounded Capt. Dimitrevic severely, but was spared because he was needed in finding the fleeing couple. Indeed, this servant showed the officers where King Alexander and Queen Draga had gone to secrete themselves. When he told them this he was shot.

"Col. Maschin now joined the revolutionists and led them back to the sleeping apartment, where the king's adjutant tried to hinder the search. He shot at Lieut. Naumovitch, who fell dead. The others then killed the adjutant.

After a long search a small door leading into an alcove was discovered, but it was found locked. It was broken in with an ax, and here the royal couple were found in undress.

"The older officers first intended forcing the king to abdicate, but the young officers were in no mood to be held back and shot at the royal couple. Nobody knows in the excitement who shot first, but it is generally said it was Lieut. Kistic.

"After the murder King Alexander's body was found entirely covered with blood. That of Queen Draga was badly torn by bullets. The report that the bodies were thrown out of the window into the garden is untrue. The young officers intended to do so, but Col. Maschin prevented it, exclaiming, 'that would be barbarous.'

"All the servants of the royal couple fled when the first shots were heard, with the exception of Queen Draga's servant, who was found dead. At 2:12 o'clock all was over. Col. Maschin issued from the gate of the palace, around which great crowds had collected, and made a speech saying:

"We have now destroyed the dynasty of the Obrenovitches, and have got rid of the dishonorable woman who was the king's evil spirit. Long live Serbia."

"The people responded: 'Long live the army.'

Almost simultaneously with the butchery in the palace the troops endeavored to arrest all the relatives of the queen and those ministers whom the conspirators disliked. Two brothers of the queen, Lieut. Cols. Nikola and Nikodem Lunjevics, were seized and escorted by a detachment of troops from their dwelling to the guardroom of the divisional commander. They were evidently not suspicious of their doom, and were lighting cigarettes when they were shot dead by eight soldiers.

LAST OF THE BOW IN BATTLE.

With the English Civil War Its Usefulness Died Out.

Archery, which for centuries bore so prominent a part in military history, ceased to be practiced, so far as its use in warfare was concerned, before the reign of Charles II, though it found high favor in his time as a healthful outdoor exercise and pastime.

Charles I, himself skilled in the use of the long bow, appointed two special commissions to enforce the practice of archery; but with the civil war the art died out.

In that terrible struggle bows and arrows, weapons that had won so many fields, took no part, except to a small extent in the guerilla warfare carried on against Cromwell in the Scottish highlands, where they were carried by fighting archers for the last time.

The use of the bow in battle had continued long after the invention of gunpowder in 1320. It is recorded, for instance, that in 1572 Queen Elizabeth offered to place 3000 archers at the disposal of Charles IX of France.

Mrs. Laura L. Barnes, Washington, D. C., Ladies Auxiliary to Burnside Post, No. 4, G. A. R., recommends Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"In diseases that come to women only, as a rule, the doctor is called in, sometimes several doctors, but still matters go from bad to worse; but I have never known of a case of female weakness which was not helped when Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was used faithfully. For young women who are subject to headaches, backache, irregular or painful periods, and nervous attacks due to the severe strain on the system by some organic trouble, and for women of advanced years in the most trying time of life, it serves to correct every trouble and restore a healthy action of all organs of the body.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a household reliance in my home, and I would not be without it. In all my experience with this medicine, which covers years, I have found nothing to equal it and always recommend it."—MRS. LAURA L. BARNES, 607 Second St., N. E., Washington, D. C.—$5000 forfeit if original of above letter proving genuineness cannot be produced.

Such testimony should be accepted by all women as convincing evidence that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound stands without a peer as a remedy for all the distressing ills of women.

The national sport—base ball—is not dying out. Interest in the game is by no means confined to city folks. This was illustrated by the large attendance at the game played at Lake Zurich Sunday afternoon. Every village in this section sent a delegation and the farmer boys and their girls were there in force. The money flowed through the side entrances of buffets there like oats through a threshing.

Only immediate relatives will be present at the ceremony, but a large number of our people have been invited to a reception to be held from 4 to 8 p. m., same day.

Headaches from House Paints.
At this season, when houses are being painted everywhere, a great many headaches are suffered by those who have to breathe the fumes of paint. A preventive of these headaches was indicated by a painter yesterday. "If your bedroom is painted," he said, "and you sleep in it while the walls are wet, or if your sittingroom is being painted and you work in it, a headache is almost inevitable and with some persons this headache is so serious as to confine them to their rooms for several days. Such illness might be easily avoided. In the newly painted room a basin of milk should be placed. The milk somehow will deaden the paint's odor and, since it is the odor that causes the illness, no headache will ensue. After a few hours the milk will have a distinct smell of paint about it. A basin of water in a fresh painted room is another good preventive of odors and of headaches. The water, after a little while in such a room, acquires an oily scum."

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES

Barrington High School of 1903, at Salem Church Last Evening.

The graduating class of 1903, Barrington High School, numbered ten, consisting of seven young ladies and three young men. Commencement exercises were attended by a large gathering of relatives and friends.

The class colors, green and white, predominated; the decorations of ferns, palms and flowers, while above the graduates a large floral semicircle displayed the class motto, "The Ropes of the Past Ring Out the Bells of the Future."

Great credit is due the young people and their instructors for the competent manner in which the orations were delivered, as clear enunciation, easy gestures and sufficient volume of voice were particularly noticeable.

After the opening musical number rendered by Sears' Barrington orchestra and the entrance march played by J. I. Sears, Rev. Fidler offered the invocation. The orations were delivered in part as follows. Time forbids an extensive review:

Cora W. Jahnke in "Illinois—Her Place in the Nation," compared the greatness of our state in rapid development with that of other states. Each point of excellence was drawn out, and our great men, wealth, political influence and school system cited.

"The Future of the American Negro," was discussed by Florence W. Peck—telling that the color question is one of the greatest before the American public today. The centuries of preparation of the two races have been so different that the idleness and lawlessness of the Negro produced by his ignorance is mostly the white man's fault. Better the right of franchise to an educated Negro than to an ignorant white.

"Problems of the Future" by Fred W. Hobain showed, despite the many marvelous inventions and discoveries known, how mysterious are very many things as yet. Gravity, electricity, astronomy are not understood. The questions of political and social life prominent in these times were ably mentioned.

That America is the home of free womanhood was told by Bernice A. Hawley in "The Woman of the United States." The American woman is one of the country's chief possessions to admire—for her happy disposition and optimistic views are encouragement to man in days of trouble. The respect granted our women proves the high character of our men.

Good advice, which we all might follow, was presented by Ruth C. Myers in "The Art of Living." The ability to control our tempers, to overcome little annoyances and to strive to resist others, forgetting self, are some of the recipes for peace and contentedness. Our characters are influenced by our ability to enjoy little things and see silver linings through clouds.

An excellent view of the monopoly situation of the times was given by Fred H. Palmer in "Trusts and Their Control." The widely varied opinions of trusts is current concerning the rights of organized co-operation, and some of the acts seem robbery, although within the law, but when the nation finds out what it wants on this question, it will get what it wants.

"The Value of a Thought," by Alma K. Stiefenhofer said, meditation to be a sure means to great results. Many striking illustrations of accomplishments produced by deep thought were recalled to mind, and we were advised to learn to think for ourselves, to develop original thought and depend less on thoughts of professional men. Education is worthless unless the power to think is developed.

The peace and prosperity open to all in America is such that no other nation can give. The wide, liberal views of American minds were spoken of in "The America of To-day," by Rose M. Volker. Although it is a country of daily work, from which none are exempt, yet the privileges of American citizenship extend such advantages that to dwell here is compensation. Nothing stops American progress and our precedents in colonial government are worthy of imitation. We have free school, free thought, free ballot and free religion.

"Labor," by George R. Landwer, told that while machinery has facilitated the work of mankind, yet our social questions, our labor disturbances and rise of class prejudice have arisen from the greater amount of time given to become dissatisfied. The day when the employer uses altruism towards his employes and the laborer seizes all the advantages of his industrial environment to better himself will be a time of better faith between capital and labor.

That all civilization is based on Christianity was maintained by Lydia H. Sodont in "The Influence of Christianity on Civilization." All undertakings have a leader and the coming of Christ and the ministers He gave us, has been proof that under His guidance the world has become civilized. The arising of heathen nations in past and present times to enlightened conditions has been caused by the spread of Christianity.

The presentation of diplomas to the class finishing the grammar school work was conducted by Rev. Tuttle whose talk was replete with good advice and wishes. Nine girls and five boys comprised the class.

A very sincere and touching lecture was delivered by Prof. F. E. Smith as he offered the graduates their diplomas.

Ten years ago this class entered school as Prof. Smith entered upon his educational work in Barrington and it was a fitting coincidence that their work in the High school should end together.

The orchestra music was greatly enjoyed as was also the singing by the Ideal Quartette of Chicago. The selections were heartily encored.

Child Labor to End.

Hundreds of children will be thrown out of employment July 1 when the act regulating the employment of children, passed by the last legislature goes into effect. Boys and girls under 16 years of age who are now employed at night will have to quit work or seek work which can be done in daylight. Employment of children under 14 years of age is prohibited under any circumstances and the system of affidavits will be much more elaborate than hitherto, as not only the parents but also the school teachers are required to certify to the child's age.

The law is a good one and should be rigidly enforced.

Social Clubs as Dramsops.

The State Supreme court has decided that social clubs which dispense intoxicating liquors must take out a liquor license.

The logic of the decision is invulnerable. If it be lawful to impose a license tax upon a liquor vender who publicly vends in his own name and for his own individual profit it must be lawful to impose an equal tax on an association of individuals who vend liquors to themselves and others for the pleasure or profit to be derived from the business.
