It is a case of dine at the German Pavilion and die at the exposition. In a beautiful Moderne Krust building adjoining Das Deutsche Haus the best frod and the highest prices on the grounds are to be found, the table dhots lunch and dinner costing two and three dollars, respectively. There makes a leaf to the service, and at least one smell should be a least one smell should be taken at the Tyrolean Alps, either outdoors or in the gorgeous dining-room in the mountain-tide. The best French restaurant is at Paris, on the Pike. Lower in prices and in every way admirable are the two restaurants confucted by Mrs. Horei in the pavilions of Cascade Cardens. The seast one has waite wallers and beer. For a bit of lunch Germany, France and England all offer delicious pastry in the Agricultural building. These are not free ads, but time-saving tips for the traveler. There are no end of restaurants of tall purses on the grounds. I tried nine of them and nowhere found the prices more than they ought to be corlocating no one need pay any more at St. Louis than he feels that he can
