Cosmopolitan City

Chicago has more Germans than any other city except Berlin and Hamburg; more Poles than any other city except Prague; more Irish than any other city except Dublin; more Scandinavians than any other city except Stockholm, and more Jews than can find in Palestine.

Harlan Handicapped.

The majority caucus in Chicago is on a fierce tide. The personality of Harlan, republican and Judge Dunne, democrat, is such as to attract large followings and create much interest.

Mr. Harlan, has the backing of a large element of the business men but lacks the endorsement of the friends of Judge Sears, and F. R. Carter whom Mr. Harlan helped to defeat for the majority by his entering the race as an independent republican, when those gentlemen were strong as regular republican nominees to defeat the Harrison crowd.

It is not unlikely that many republicans will improve the opportunity to now settle with Mr. Harlan.

When they needed him he was assisting the opposition, and Chicago voters do not forget easily such matters.

MANOVED BY THE CARS

Miss Carrie Lohman, a young lady known to many of our people, having made her home in this village for some time, met with injuries at Algonquin last evening which may prove fatal, and should she survive, render her a cripple for life.

Miss Lohman lately secured employment in the watch factory at Elgin and left this village on the Crystal Lake local train yesterday afternoon to go to Elgin.

At Algonquin station she transferred to the Northwestern passenger and in ascending the coach platform missed her footing and fell under the trucks.

The train, it is said, had started. The wheels passed over the lower portion of the body, severing the right limb below the knee and crushing a portion of the left arm. Other portions of the body were badly lacerated.

Advices from Algonquin this morning stated that the young lady was alive but that small hopes were entertained for her surviving the injuries.

Entertained at Ravenswood

Occasion being a dinner given by Mrs. Austin and Miss Cora Higley in honor of the Thursday Club of Barrington and a few invited friends.

The home was prettily embellished with roses and carnations and a warm welcome greeted each lady entering the house.

A savor in the shape of a heart of shanook was presented each lady in remembrance of the coming day.

At 12:30 the company was tendered an elaborate repast served at long tables lighted by green candles and artistically decorated in honor of Fred's patron saint.

The menu included many delicacies.

After dinner the company spent a merry half hour in trying to decipher a menu card printed on a leaf of shamrock.

Mr. Fackelman secured first prize and Mrs. Shipman second.

Saturday Flower Sale

Over 150 varieties of wreaths, foliage, flowers, mourning flowers, etc. Better and larger bunches than we have ever before sold. Choice bouquets per bunch.

C. F. Hall Co. Dundee.

Deserve Censure.

It is not to be wondered at that the suburban justice shops of Cook county are so roundly censured by the press and public. A great many of them deserve trimming good and proper.

Just think of a man holding the office of justice who only thought is the "stuff there is in it" to use his expression.

Dozens of some hustlers now in office and some of these retired, show almost flagrant abuse of their position.

It has been discovered that in many cases the justice has not been present when the case was called; that a clerk or hiring of someone called the case appeared for the plaintiff and entered a judgment, the defendant failing to appear.

That sort of court work is certainly of an order to call for censure from the press and public and farther the expulsion from office of any justice who practices the same. It may be sharp and cunning to the official who indulges in it, but it certainly does not help his reputation or the name of the town in which such justice is treated.

A justice of the peace should have sufficient strength of character to reject propositions made him by a coterie of Chicago leeches calling themselves attorneys who take advantage of his inexperience in ways that are dark and tricks of the pettifogger.

No one knows what those fellows resort to until he has had experience as a justice.

Incredible Brutality

It would have been incredible brutality if Chas. F. Lemberger, of Syracuse, N. Y., had not been the best he could for his suffering "My son," he says, "cut a fearful gash over his eye, so I applied Bucklen's Arnica Salve, which quickly healed it and saved his eye. Good for burns and ulcers too. Only 25c at Barrington Pharmacy.

Members of the High school are arranging for a minstrel show to be given in the near future. If the boys cannot produce a better entertainment than the one given here by a Chicago set last Saturday evening the public don't care to witness it.

Adjutant Albrecht, of the Salvation Army brigade, now conducting meetings here, was called to Ohio Wednesday by the death of his mother. The brigade will remain here until next Tuesday evening. The meetings are well attended and much interest is shown.

Supervisor Denison, Huntington of Elia township has announced himself as a candidate for chairman of the Lake county board of supervisors the coming year. Mr. Huntington has served his township for nearly 20 years and his chances of securing the coveted position appear very good.

A company of young men from Chicago styling themselves "Serenader Minstrels," appeared before a large audience at Old Fellows hall last Saturday evening. The entertainment, if it may be called such, was without a feature deserving mention unless it was the number rendered by the quartette.

The friends of Rev. J. G. Garth will be interested to learn that he successfully passed his final examinations at the University of Chicago. He will graduate with the class that finishes its work April 1. It is understood that shortly Mr. Garth will return to California. There is a possibility of his accepting a call from a prominent church in one of the cities of his native state to become its pastor. Mr. Garth will supply the pulpit here April 8.

The qualification for political office should be fitness for the position. Voters who are patriots will wish to choose as officeholders the best qualified men, whatever may be their financial social conditions or standing and whether they may happen to reside. It is a grave wrong to support openly, or tacitly, for public office an unfit person because of claims of standing or locality.

The board of education has placed about the contract every safeguard, and the construction will be strictly up to the specifications as to all materials and workmanship.

Next fall our people will have the privilege of pointing out to visitors, not an old barracks of a school building but one strictly modern and up-to-date credit to the district and monument to the progress and enterprise of our village.

T. C. O.

Abel Hamd O'Connell T. C. O. 210 held an interesting session at his own chamber last night at which time eight pilgrims were fed, their thirst quenched, and the impressive degree conferred.

The journey through oriental scenes was one long to be remembered by those who investigated the deep mystery of it was a "paper pilgrimage," but none the less, this ritual was with very life-like demonstrations of the natives of Turkey and Arabia.

At the session George Oils was elected to the board of managers and Lawrence Dunlap, a lately decorated prince, exalted G. A. W.

An exchange says that a young man named Anderson was fined $25 and costs for calling a young lady "a bird" on the street at Rockford. He had called her "an old hen" he would, no doubt, have been hanged.

Gray-Donlea

At Woodstock, Wednesday, March 15, Miss Nellie Gray and Henry Donlea both of Barrington were united in the bonds of matrimony. After the ceremony they departed for a short visit with relatives in central Illinois.

The parties to the contract are known to every inhabitant of this village and vicinity, having made this their home since childhood.

The bride is the youngest daughter of Mrs. Catherine Gray, and sister of Mrs. Robert Purcell. She is a lady enjoying a wide acquaintance and large circle of friends.

The groom is one of the most popular men of our village, having served a number of years as village trustee, and for a long time identified with the politics of the village. He is a valued member of the Social and Athletic club and friends are legion.

They will reside for the present at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Gray, on East Main street.

The "Poverty School" held in the M. E. church parlor last Saturday evening was a success in every way. Although disappointed by the unavoidable absence of those who were to have taken part in the program, the deficiency was supplied by the vigilance of "Judge Gough" who fined all offenders to the full extent of the law. The total receipts amounted to about $25.

Good Stock Pays.

The dairy bred cow producing from 2000 pounds to 3000 pounds of milk per year, would certainly pay more for the grain she consumed than the scrub that produces perhaps half that amount of grain. It costs no more to feed the dairy bred cow than it does to feed the scrub, and the profits are not to be compared.

Chooses Qualified Men

Tomorrow afternoon the voters of Cuba township will assemble in caucus to place in nomination township officials to be voted for on April 14th. The collectorship is the only office for which there appears to be any particular longing on the part of any one.

The announced candidates are J. E. Hollister and Henry Kirsner from the east end and Conrad Kraus from the north and west end of township. It is said that two dark horses will be in the ring before the nominations for that office close. It should be remembered that one justice of the peace one constable should be allotted to the village. The business of the township will be advanced by such action. Place in nomination for every office to be filled the best and most capable men who are willing to serve. Don't present a position to any man who, after election, refuses to do the duty for which he is chosen.

A bill has been introduced in the Illinois legislature which changes the time of holding township elections from spring to fall, and coincident with general elections. The bill provides that supervisors shall have a four-year term, and that highway commissioners shall serve six years.

CHAPTER XIV.

The island of Grande Terre, off the coast of Louisiana, runs parallel with the mainland; and at its western end is a secure harbor, reached by the Great Pass of Barataria, whose water is from nine to ten feet in depth.

Here, on Grande Terre, were sold the captured cargoes and prizes; and people from all parts of Louisiana came hither to purchase them, with no apparent attempt or desire to conceal the object of their mission.

Jean Lafitte was, with Pierre, sitting in the dining-room of his own house, of which, however, the latter was nominal master.

"And so Laro is dead, and the Harra do Hiorro in English hands," Pierre was saying.

"Tell me of thy plans, and what is to become of the lovely Senorita Laro."

At this, Jean, putting aside his former mood, sketched out clearly all his intended operations, telling in detail of his interview with Philip La Roche, who with his widowed sister, Madame Rieffel, would take the Spanish beauty into their charge.

It was now some two months since the governor's edict had been issued against the introduction of African slaves; and he had followed this by an address "To all whom it might concern in the territory," stating that it had come to his knowledge that well-kid plans existed to defeat and evade this edict by way of Barataria; and, as Jean now learned from Pierre, a rumor was afloat that the governor contemplated setting a price upon the head of Jean Lafitte, smuggler, slave-trader, and pirate.

"It is only a rumor as yet," answered Pierre, with an air of anxiety; "and, together with the stories of bad feeling growing between these states and England, it gives the people a little of the excitement they ever seem to crave."

"Will you promise to do this?"

"I wish there would be war declared against Great Britain!" declared Jean, with sudden animation, as he nodded his acquiescence in Pierre's reasoning. "She has been sneaking around this country ever since she was whipping here, trying, without appearing to try, to obtain another hold upon it. She never seems to really know when she is well thrashed."

"It was now Pierre's turn to nod."

"If war came," continued Jean, his eyes sparkling as if with satisfaction at the idea, "do you know I think I should go to the governor and offer all I have for his assistance?"

"Ah," said Pierre, with a slight elevation of his heavy eyebrows.

"Yes; for you and I, with our men, could then fight like any respectable citizens in defense of our country against the English."

"That might be," was Pierre's speculative remark. But his tone changed as he added, bending his eyes, filled with a menacing look, upon Jean's impassioned face, glow with a new and better enthusiasm. "And England hates Bonaparte."

"Hates—yes; but fears, as well. Oh, if I can but help her, I will. I hate my enemy, I shall feel, in doing for it, the greatest happiness I ever knew."

Pierre whistled softly, and reaching for a flagon of wine, filled two glasses.

"Here, Jean," he said, lifting one of them, "let us drink to the overthrow of English power in any land wherein we may abide, and long live and prosperity to him you love."

Up the stream of live oaks, upon whose branches the gray most draped silences looking ghostly in the twilight, he passed to the pillared portico of the count's residence, and, as was his privilege, entered its wide door unannounced.

The low streaming of a guitar from a nearby room drew his footsteps toward it, and he was soon standing on its threshold.

No candles were lit, but a woman's white drapery gleamed from the farther end. In an alcove, a windowed arched doorway looked out to the western sky.

"Ah, that is pleasant for me to hear and to know, Captain Jean," she replied, with childlike frankness, releasing her hand and laying it on his arm. "But," now with some anxiety, "how can you ever be able to do much for me, should I need you? It is long since I have seen you, or know where you were; and now you tell me you are here but for a few hours, and will then go away again, I know not where."

Although seemingly "twist smiles and tears," she spoke with an arch naivete that affected Lafitte most curiously.

"You know Jean, the one called a witch, your grandpère's fave!" he inquired with apparent irrelevance.

"Yes, of course," answered Rose, surprise showing in her voice. "She is a dreadful-looking old woman, with big black eyes. At first I was afraid of her, but now I am not, for she knew and loved my mother, and has talked to me of her."

"So? Well, that is quite as it should be. And now, little Rose," again taking her hand, "remember all you wish I say to you now. Should you ever wish to tell me anything, or need any service you think I can render, all you need do is to tell Jean, and then allow three days to pass in which to write to me from me. Will you promise to do this?"

He bent toward her with an earnestness in his manner that caused her to wonder at the time and afterwards.

"Yes, I promise, and I thank you," she answered softly, and left him.

A few moments later the Count de Caseneau entered the room and greeted Lafitte with a cordiality he accorded to few men, but the island Rose did not return.

WRITTEN BY MARSHAL BLUCHER

Interesting Letter From Great Soldier to His Wife.

There has just been discovered in the family archives of a landowner in Mecklenburg a hitherto unpublished letter written by the celebrated Marshal Blucher to his wife on the eve of the battle of Waterloo. The letter is written in a simple, soldierly and spelling peculiar to the old soldier, which, however, are partly lost in the following translation from the German.

Comptence, June 17, 1815.

"Here I sit in the room in which Mary Louisa spent her bridal night. It is hard to believe anything more beautiful than Comptence. What a pity that I must part from here tomorrow, because within three days I must be in Paris."

"If possible, and most probable, that Bonaparte will be handed over to me and Wellington. Do not think I can do anything better than to have him shot. This would be a service to mankind. He is a scoundrel, a scoundrel; everybody hates and despises him."

"I believe this will all be over in a short while, and then I shall have home. There are many pretty things here, but I must not take anything away."

"BLUCHER."

—Dundee Advertiser.

Hard on Foreigners in Mexico.

"Once while sojourning in the City of Mexico I happened to call upon a friend at one of the principal hotels of that capital," said Representative Southard of Ohio.

"While in his room I noticed a very fine revolver, and making some comment upon it, he picked it up and began to explain how, although it was of single action, he could fire it as fast as though it were double action. In some way his hand struck the hammer, and he was so excited that he fired a second my friend turned deathly pale and became so agitated that he could scarcely speak."

"Having noticed that the bullet struck a rug and took a downward course, I didn't see and cause for excitement, and, lifting up the rug, showed him where the lead took lodgment. He became calm pretty soon, and then he explained his agitation. 'Had that bullet gone into the count, all the hotels down there open into a court, the lead of the floor, and it struck any Mexican, my wife would not have been worth a ten-cent piece. I have lived down here long enough to know how swift is the punishment meted out to foreigners, even in case of accident, where a native is injured. Indeed, had I been unfortunate enough to have caused the death of one of them, it is quite probable that you, as well as myself, would have been executed. The fact that you had nothing to do with the shooting would have been of no avail, for your presence here would have been condemned you.'—Washington Post.

Three Balls and Out.

"So you refuse to give me the money," said the pedagogue son of a wealthy man, to his stern parent.

"Not another cent of my hard-earned coin for you."

"Then here goes," cried the youth as he seized a silver-mounted pistol from his father's desk.

"Unhappy boy!" exclaimed the old man as he sank helplessly into a chair. "What would you do—take your life?"

Not so you could notice it," replied the wayward offspring as a diabolical grin chased itself over his forehead.

"Yes, he was killed by a blow from a policeman's club."

Puck.

Not to His Taste.

Visitor—And are you unhappy?

Illinois Legislature

RUMPS OVER HARD ROADS.

Members of a joint legislative committee who are providing a penitentiary sentence of from one to ten years, as the original bill, the new measure fixes a graduated scale of fines for corporations, ranging from $100 to $2,000 for the first offense, from $1,000 to $10,000 for the second and $10,000 for all succeeding offenses. Officers of corporations offending may be fined from $200 to $1,000 and imprisonment in jail not to exceed one year.

This provision was made in preference to the heavier penalty at the suggestion of Gov. Denen, who thought it would be easier to convict an offending corporation under this method than it would if a heavy prison sentence were attached.

The measure further provides that any person injured by a combination to fix prices may recover in the circuit court twice the amount of damages sustained. Also that the purpose of a "trust" that has fixed the price may refuse to pay for the goods under this act, without first having brought suit to establish the fact that such a "trust" actually exists.

Want Convicts to Mine Coal.

A trouble making amendment is to be introduced in the house which would make it easier to employ convicts in coal mines, to mine all the coal needed in state institutions. "The board of prison industries," says the bill, "shall procure lands and coal mines as located in the vicinity or as near as possible to state institutions, either by purchase or by eminent domain, and also shall provide for the employment of convicts when not at work in the vicinity of the mines, and there hereby is appropriated $100,000 to defray the cost of this amendment, which shall be paid out of the state treasury."

Senator Templeton introduced a substitute for senate bill 94 providing that upon petition signed by one-fourth of voters, the question whether or not a proposed law shall be submitted to a vote of the people. The senate has passed a local option bill, which had attached to it a referendum clause submitting the act to the voters at the next election. It is to be in force unless a majority of the voters is cast in favor of it.

May Vote on Saloons.

Senator Templeton introduced a substitute for senate bill 94 providing that upon petition signed by one-fourth of voters, the question whether or not a proposed law shall be submitted to a vote of the people. The senate has passed a local option bill, which had attached to it a referendum clause submitting the act to the voters at the next election. It is to be in force unless a majority of the voters is cast in favor of it.

Civil Service in Doubt.

An attempt will be made to get public bill 218, the comprehensive civil service measure for all state institutions and departments, in ahead of the Lindly Cook county measure, which has been introduced. The bill comes up for action. An effort is being made to secure a postponement of action in regard to this bill.

Well Casing.

Senator Pemberton introduced a bill providing that before the casing shall be drawn from any well for the purpose of obtaining oil, the casing shall be drilled into any gas or oil bearing rock. It shall be the duty of any person or corporation controlling such well properly and securely to stop and plug the same.

NERVOUS HEADACHE

Interfered With Her Social Dating and Threatened to Leave Her Mother-in-Law—How She Was Cured.

Every sufferer from nervous headache knows how completely it unites on the duties and pleasures of life. Many a little excitement, or over-exertion, or irregularity brings it on. Sometimes the pain is acute, or the whole head. Again it is like a dull ache, or a heavy weight, or a wedge splitting it open, or a band tightening about it. At one time it it all in the top of the head, at another it is all at the base of the skull.

Most headaches can be traced to some faulty state of the blood. When the blood is scanty or charged with poison, and the digestion is impaired, the commonest results is frequent and severe headaches.

The important thing is to get rid of the diseased condition of the blood that causes the headache by the use of a remedy that will do the work quickly and thoroughly. What is that remedy? The experience of Miss Ellen McKenna forbids the answer to be any other.

"For more than seven years I was a great sufferer from nervous headache and dizziness. My stomach was disordered, and I became so restless that I could not sit still any length of time. Dizziness interrupted my work greatly. At first the attacks were not so severe, but they gradually grew more violent, and finally became so bad that I was unable to do any of my household duties. I was obliged to relinquish my membership in the different organizations to which I belonged."

"I had heard you of that remedy!" "A very simple thing; the call of a member of one of the clubs, who strongly advised me to try Williams' Pink Pills before giving up. I acted on her suggestion at once, and after steadily using the great blood and nerve remedy for two months, my headaches and my dizziness entirely disappeared."

Miss McKenna is secretary of the Associated Ladies' Guild, and resides at No. 48 West Street, Housatonic, Mass. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have cured many hundreds of similar cases, and can be confidently recommended to drive all poisons from the blood and give needed strength to the nerves. Every druggist keeps them.

City and Country Journalism.

Dr. W. H. Lynch of Salem, Mo., praised recently, at the University of Pennsylvania, the newspaper. Dr. Lynch is an educator, and he declared that the newspaper was one of the most powerful educative influences of modern times.

Finally he told a number of stories about country methods of journalism.

"A country editor," he said, "was appointed, through some misapprehension or other, to the city editorship of a leading daily. The first day of his appointment a fierce fire swept the town—a fire, let us say, like that which devastated Baltimore last winter."

"The managing editor sent for the new city editor and asked him what arrangements he had made for reporting the fire fully and accurately."

"Why," said the new man, "I've made none."

"(None?) said the managing editor. 'Good gracious, man, why none?'"

"What is the use printing anything about a fire like this?" said the city editor. "It's such a big fire that everybody in town will go to see it for himself."—Salt Lake Tribune.

Found at Last.

Aston, Mich., March 12th.—(Special.)—After searching for twenty years from Rheumatism and Kidney Troubles, Dr. James C. Cure of this place has found a complete cure for all his aches, pains and weakness, in Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"Yes," Mr. Cure says, "my rheumatism and Kidney Troubles are all gone and I feel like a new man. Dodd's Kidney Pills did it. Before I used them I was unable to do any work on doctors and one remedy and another. I cheerfully recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills to anyone suffering from Rheumatism or Kidney Trouble."

Fighting at Close Quarters.

Predictions by military experts that improved guns, especially the high-power rifle, would put an end to war through increase of fatalities have turned out false. Men with their hands up do not stop to count the wounded, nor do they expect to make "an uncut without breaking eggs." Again, the experts' theory that rapid fire guns on land would put an end to charges has been exploded. Modern tactics have changed so as to prevent the exposure of men in masses to a storm of leaden hail, but the determination in the human breast to get at the enemy somehow has not been eliminated. Soldiers do not cross the zone in solid lines, but by company and squad rushes from cover to cover.

The attention given by military trainers to the Japanese science of wrestling shows that personal encounters are expected to be a feature in future wars. If daylight charges against modern artillery prove too costly, attacks will be made at night, and night attacks usually carry home and lead to personal encounters. Modern training has aimed to make the soldier an individual agent instead of a machine. The tactics demand that in order to insure efficiency in rushes and on the firing line, and the preparation is just what will be needed in close quarter fighting.

One grave problem in the old style of warfare was to keep the men steady in formation. The tendency was for the individual to break loose and rush ahead, fighting on his own hook. Not being trained to that, he went blind, and the result was confusion in the ranks. The present system of training teaches the soldier when to break loose and what to do alone.

The enormous cost of modern war and the deadliness of new weapons should deter nations from going to war except from the noblest motives. Having a cause which they deem just, men will fight desperately, and a struggle fought to the death under modern conditions will call for close quarter encounters, with bayonet, clubbed musket and hand grenade.

England and Japan.

English government or ministerial organs are vehemently urging a declaration by the powers that be or to be of the attitude to be maintained toward the Anglo-Japanese alliance. It is expected by limitation, so, 1905. It is known to all the world that the suzerainty of Japan over Korea is a breach of the compact with England. The very first article of the treaty of alliance solemnly guarantees the independence of the Hermit Kingdom.

Japan's conduct with Korea can be excused by all nations except Russia and England as justifying the nature of things. England could have found cause in that for terminating the alliance before this date had she been so disposed.

One thing noticeable in the comments of the British press upon the alliance is the exclusive influence awarded that compact in keeping the far eastern war within definite limits. No credit is given to the United States for preserving the neutrality and integrity of China. In fact, the alliance is eulogized as the sole foundation of a localized struggle and the maintenance of the general peace.

American apples continue to hold the market in England in spite of the fact that the house growers have several fine varieties, which are of superior flavor, long keepers, of good size and beautiful to behold. An English authority quoted by United States Consul Swalm at Southampton says:

"The American fruit grower knows how to attract the purchaser by uniformity in size and quality in a way which English growers have hardly begun to learn, and in the big towns in the East the product hardly finds one purchaser at a time a pound where the American fruit finds ten at double the price."

It is not the American grower, but the packer, who sees to it that apples for the foreign market are uniform in size and of fine quality. Doubtless the English growers send everything good, but and indifferent to the dealer, because the fruit makes a poor showing whatever its merit. First appearance is everything.

Lincoln and Slavery.

President Roosevelt's oftand declaration in a Lincoln birthday speech that Lincoln "fought to abolish slavery" has been followed by a spirited discussion in the press as to the date of the issuance of the emancipation proclamation and the military situation at the time. It has been assumed by some that because the proclamation went into effect Jan. 1, 1863, it was issued at that time. Had the proclamation been delayed until that date it probably would not have been issued until after Gettysburg, July, 1863. At least this is the conclusion to be drawn from the history of the proclamation.

Lincoln's attitude toward slavery is a part of American history, since it is well known that he declared that he would save that institution or destroy it, according as the fate of slavery might determine the fate of the Union. He placed the salvation of the Union above all else. The facts are that during the summer of 1862 Lincoln prepared the proclamation and said that he would issue it upon the basis of a substantial victory. He visited the battlefield at Antietam, Md. (fought Sept. 17, 1862), on the 19th of September, returned to Washington and on Sept. 22 issued the proclamation, which, by the way, did not abolish slavery of profess to do so.

By the terms of the proclamation slavery would cease to exist on Jan. 1, 1863, in those states of the Confederacy which did not lay down their arms and return to the allegiance to the constitution before that date. Those slaveholding states not then separated from the Union, as Maryland, Kentucky, Missouri and parts of Tennessee, Virginia and North Carolina, were not affected by the proclamation and continued to maintain slavery until they abolished the institution by state enactment. Thus it happened that after the proclamation was in effect slaves held in bondage, nursed, fed and otherwise befriended Federal soldiers.

It will be seen that the proclamation applied solely to territory within the enemy's lines, and it remained for the Federal armies to give force to the act by invading and subjugating the slaveholding territory. Before there was a reasonable prospect that the northern armies could and would invade and subjugate the slaveholding territory the issuance of the proclamation would have been quite inhumane. For this reason Lincoln awaited a substantial success at arms.

Whether Antietam was a substantial military success has been disputed. General James Longstreet, who at the time was Lee's most trusted lieutenant, said that Antietam sprang the key of the arch upon which the Confederacy rested. It took place upon northern soil, the same as Gettysburg, and, like Gettysburg, was a repulse of an invading force. On Jan. 1, 1863, when the proclamation became a law of the land, the north apparently had the worst of the conflict. The Confederates had recovered a portion of Tennessee and established a foothold at Vicksburg as the result of...

"SAVED MY LIFE"

—That's what a prominent druggist said of Scott's Emulsion a short time ago. As a rule we don't use or refer to testimonials in addressing the public, but the above remark and similar expressions are made so often in connection with Scott's Emulsion that they are worthy of occasional note. From infancy to old age Scott's Emulsion offers a reliable means of remedying improper and weak development, restoring lost flesh and vitality, and repairing waste. The action of Scott's Emulsion is no more of a secret than the composition of the Emulsion itself. What it does it does through nourishment—the kind of nourishment that cannot be obtained in ordinary food. No system is too weak or delicate to retain Scott's Emulsion and gather good from it.

We will send you a sample free. The druggist who gave me the sample of Scott's Emulsion told me that it was the best thing he had ever seen. Scott & Bowne, Chemists, 409 Pearl St., N. Y.

War Poem by the Mikado. The emperor of Japan from his early youth has always been an enthusiastic lover of war. He has been so since the day that he was crowned emperor. He has a wonderful facility of improvisation, and the number of short verses and stanzas composed by him is said to amount to thousands. Recently one of the leading dailies in Tokyo published his most recent composition, which has to do with the war. This translation is taken from the Japan Gazette:

The flower of youth will bravely forth. And fighting still, they will not yield. While sword with foam from south to north. And feeble age must till the field.

Our people's prayers with hopeful heart. In full sufficiency approach. Must answer first in whole or part. Our cause above be surely blessed.

This trouble state on sea and land. We must defend our land and sea. The reason why our men understand. But crave with all fraternity.
