Huge Task.

It was a huge task to undertake the cure of such a bad case of kidney disease as that of C. F. Collier, of Chicago, Ill., but Electric Bitters did it. "The Confederate Spy"

A five act military drama demanding a large stage, many scenic properties and much costuming is considerably too much for an amateur company to undertake and especially when it attempts to present it without stage scenery. The framing of a picture is what often gives it a finishing touch just as scenic properties and costuming add to a play. Therefore to attempt to present "The Confederate Spy" at Old Fellows' hall Tuesday evening, under so many disadvantages, called for more than ordinary management and unlimited patience. However, the drama was presented to an audience which crowded the hall to much more than its seating capacity and many were turned away unable to gain admittance.

The entertainment was given under the auspices of the W. R. C. for the benefit of the Soldiers' monument fund and the management in charge of Mae Lane Spomer who had assistance in stage and property preparation.

The cast was made entirely of local talent, a number never having appeared on the boards before, but not one need feel ashamed of the portrayal given their parts. Those who attended expecting to witness the production given like only of Lincoln J. Carter's big star, gave it their full and deserved notice. The drama was produced as well as conditions would permit.

Miss Brockway as Mrs. Waterman gave her part in an excellent manner. Miss Jennie Fletcher as Miss Bradley, a Southern belle, was by her personal charms adapted for that character, and her part though difficult was most acceptably played.

E. L. Wilmer as Sockery, the German, was the humorist of the play, and he did not fail to convulse the audience.

Bert Gloske the Confederate spy, Ben Schroeder and Irwin Landauer as Federal agents, Aeneas Hawley as a Confederate colonel, were transformed into soldiers who executed their parts well.

Geo. W. Spooner impersonated a character for which he was very well equipped—officer Mulgarry of the Fourth ward. George had the Irish brogue and the readiness for a police officer.

Miss Nellie Hicks in her always chosen character, that of an Irish maid, was pleasing and her part well given.

Members of the G. A. R. post and an awkward squad helped to give the play its military color.

The Four S. quartette rendered additional songs and the Barrington band furnished instrumental selections. Mrs. Myrtle Bennett gave an excellent reading, which all appreciated.

Considering what the management had to contend with and that the drama was the most complete ever attempted here, it was acceptably produced and deserved the patronage accorded it.

Mrs. Banta and Miss Banta were guests of the club. The ladies accepted an invitation from the club of Arlington Heights to be present at their meeting Saturday, June 3rd.

Mrs. A. W. Meyer will entertain the club next Thursday.

Law was Violated.

There is considerable comment in relation to the overcrowding of Old Fellows' hall last Thursday evening. That the hall was filled to what is known the danger line is a fact, and that it should not be allowed again is also correct.

A gentleman calls attention to a village ordinance relating to the seating of public buildings, and the same should be taken into consideration by those who have the arrangement of the seating of such buildings.

While there is no danger of a collapse of Old Fellows' hall there is danger there, as in every other public building. Some idiot might raise a cry of fire and cause a panic or something might happen on the stage to cause a desire to get out of the hall; therefore, two aisles should be kept open and free of chairs or any other article to block the passageway. The ordinance referred to reads as follows: Sec. 7, chap. 2.—No chairs, stools or seats of any description shall be placed or permitted to remain in or across the lobby, aisles or passageways in any hall or other public building, when the same is occupied by the public, under a penalty of $25 for each and every violation of this section.

Memorial Day

May 30, the day set apart to do honor to the memory of our soldier dead, was observed here by the G. A. R., the W. R. C., children of the public school and a large number of citizens. The usual program was carried out, parade of veterans and school children to Evergreen cemetery where the ceremonies of decorating graves of departed comrades took place. This occurred in the forenoon.

In the afternoon exercises were held at the platform erected on South Hawley street near Grove avenue. Music was furnished by a quartette and the Barrington Cornet band. The invocation was offered by Rev. Stanger of St. Paul's church and the address by J. W. Cecil of Chicago. It is the opinion of many that the oration by Mr. Cecil was the best heard here in a number of years.

The Kicking Coterie

There is a disposition on the part of a certain collection of individuals to belittle every entertainment, farce, comedy, literary, etc., given by local talent. These self constituted critics labor under the impression that they

Young delivered an excellent oration and paid high tribute to those who went out in defense of their country. After the exercises in the church the procession, headed by the Palatine Military band, marched to the cemeteries, where the pupils of the schools laid flowers upon the grave of each hero laid to rest. STRIKES CHECK CHICAGO TRADE

Spread of Labor Troubles Is Worst Feature in Business Situation.

CROP PROSPECTS REMAIN GOOD

Farm Work Is Showing Rapid Recovery From Effect of Recent Heavy Rains—Grain Shipments Exhibit Loss of 7.4 Per Cent.

Chicago dispatch: Dun's review of local trade conditions in Chicago has this to say of the present situation. "The worst feature of the business situation is entirely due to further spreading of labor troubles. With the struggle now carried into productive branches and enforced idleness probable among large bodies of workmen obstruction becomes intensified and requires prompt relief."

"Except the local disturbance trade generally exhibited a strong tone throughout the Chicago district and the indications are good for continued industrial prosperity with the present difficulty removed."

"In actual results the week's progress affirms the inherent strength of commerce. Money remained in fair demand and bank exchanges made the largest gain during this month as compared with a year ago."

Production Is Large.—"Production in the leading branches is without diminution and new commitments were made to a satisfactory extent. Wholesale transactions reached a fair volume in staple merchandise, deliveries were larger and State street activity was stimulated by better demand for seasonal goods."

"Country orders have been very encouraging, farm work showing rapid recovery from effect of recent heavy rains, crop prospects remaining good and merchandising expanding."

"Western railroad traffic sustains exceptional magnitude, earnings steadily exceeding those of a year ago. Heavy movement of manufactured materials, raw materials and general merchandise provided most of the tonnage. Marketing of grain has declined 22 per cent, but this is due to temporary causes. Shipments from this port were 7.4 per cent smaller than for corresponding week of 1914 and live stock receipts were slightly lower, but the output of provisions was heavier and stocks suffered some reduction."

Hides and Leather.—"Receipts of hides, 2,888,184 pounds, compared with 2,518,137 pounds a year ago. Shipping demand weakened in heavy hides and skins in demand and prices, with deliveries still large. Receipts of lumber were 52,343,000 feet, against 41,268,000 feet last year, and general demand was good for yard stocks. Building work has not been interfered with and the value of new construction authorized largely exceeded both previous week and year ago."

"Crop reports played a strong part in the markets for the two leading cereals, and these being mainly unfavorable and the May options much oversold it was not found difficult to manipulate sharp advances in quotations."

"Live stock receipts were 201,094 head, compared with 256,586 a year ago. Shipping demand weakened in heavy hogs and hogs and sheep found ready absorption. Compared with the closing a week ago prices are unchanged in oats, rye, corn and sheep, but are lower in cattle 5 cents per hundredweight, and 7 1/2 cents and pork 15 cents, and higher in wheat 3 1/2 cents a bushel and in corn 9 cents."

Although confined to his bed, he was animated and cheerful in demeanor, and his physicians were proportionately hopeful. Wednesday forenoon, however, a change for the worse suddenly developed. The baron became very weak, and was afflicted with severe pains in the region of the lungs. Medical aid proved futile, and Thursday night he passed into a comatose state. When death came he was unconscious. The family was at the bedside at the last moment.

supplemented by the dispatch from Lieut. Gen. Linevitch, telling of the demoralizing effect of the naval disaster on the army.

Though the city is tranquil, Gov. Gen. Trepoft is continuing his precautionary measures. Five regiments of troops were hurriedly brought to the capital and the police reserves are held on duty.

Alarmist rumors are afloat as to the disaffection among the marines and sailors quartered here and the workmen are again muttering about a general strike.

All the ministers with the exception of the ministers of war and marine unanimously favor the conclusion of peace.

No trouble is anticipated in meeting the payment of the indemnity, as financiers who were willing to lend money for a continuation of the war are ready to accommodate Russia if money is needed for the purpose of concluding peace.

The Interborough company is controlled by August Belmont and it runs the Manhattan elevated and subway lines.

Mr. Morton announced more than a week ago that he was resigning the cabinet and setting his hand to private life. It was said at the time he made this announcement that he was to become identified with the Gould street railroad interests, but this was denied.

Paul Morton, as vice president of the Santa Fe Railroad company, made a great reputation for himself as a financier and a business man.

Officials of the Interborough company, who were asked about the report, refused to confirm or deny it. Secretary of the Navy in Washington would say nothing.

MUST PAY MILLIONS IN TAXES

New York Franchise Corporations Are Hit by Supreme Court.

New York special: Millions of dollars of taxes in arrears will be paid as a result of the decision of the supreme court of the United States upholding the tax on the values of corporation franchises.

The taxes constitute a direct attack upon the special franchise law of the state of New York of 1899, passed when Roosevelt was governor.

The law subjects to a system of general ad valorem taxation the special and local franchises of the public utilities, such as street-car, electric light and telephone plants occupying the public streets.

The taxes were argued for the corporations by Ellis Root and W. D. Guthrie and for the state by Attorney General Meyer and Louis Marshall.

A note for $200,000 was given by the National Electric company of Minneapolis which is now in the hands of a receiver. It was indorsed by Frank G. Bigelow and discounted at the St. Paul bank. On March 23, it was presented for payment, but protested as non-payment.

The established following Bigelow's big defalcation. The note was drawn Jan. 23 to run four months.

Had Observed It. There had been a brilliant company at the home of a society leader, a woman whose husband, while a very worthy man, was not a man of great wealth than for his mental attainments.

"Well, Abern," she said after the last visitor had gone and they had down to talk of the day. "It was a complete success, wasn't it?"

"Sure," replied her husband. "Did you notice Prof. Muchman?"

"He was the only one who looked around his neck, wasn't he?"

"Yes, I heard him talk, didn't you?"

"Oh, yes, I heard him."

"What an astonishing vocabulary he has!"

"Well, that may be what it is," said Abern, doubtfully, "but from the way he held his head I should judge it was a caricature."—Youth's Companion.

"You see, Madam, how it goes," he said to her. "My customers are particular, and it is my pleasure to get them exactly what they demand. Yes, sonny, plainly to the boy, 'You shall be attended to at once.'"

"His wife said 'I ought to send the same kind of butter,'" reiterated the boy. "Some of pop's relations has just come to visit, and ma says that they stay long it won't be her fault."

An Oakland lady who has a taste for good literature, tells what a happy time she has on "The Road to Wellville."

"I drank coffee freely for eight years before I began to perceive any evil effects from it. Then I noticed that I was becoming very nervous, and that my stomach was gradually losing the power to properly assimilate my food. In time I got so weak that I dreaded to leave the house for so much as to go to the store, and the miserable condition of my nerves and stomach, I attributed the trouble to anything in the world but coffee, of course. I dosed myself with medicines, which in the end would leave me in a worse condition than at first. I was most wretched and discouraged—not 20 years old and feeling that life was a failure!"

"I had given up all hope of ever enjoying myself like other people, till one day I read the little book 'The Road to Wellville.' It opened my eyes, and taught me a lesson I shall never forget. I bought a box of Postum Food Coffee, and began to drink Postum Food Coffee. I noticed the beginning of an improvement in the way I felt, and my system, after only two days' use of the new drink, and in a very short time realized that I could go about like other people without the least return of the nervous distress that formerly gave me so much trouble. In fact my nervousness disappeared entirely and has never returned, although it is now a year that I have been using Postum Food Coffee. And my stomach is now like iron—nothing can upset it!"

"Last week, during the big clam-bake in San Francisco, I was on the ground, and without the slightest fatigue, and as I stood in the immense crowd watching the great parade that lasted for hours, I thought to myself, 'This strength is what Postum Food Coffee has given me!'"

CHAPTER XXV.

LaRoche, after the departure of Gen. LaRoche, permitted himself the solace of tarrying an hour or so longer, although he exchanged scarcely half a dozen words with Madeleine de Caneau, as they, with Laxalle and Harold Stewart, sat on the broad veranda.

He was unaccountably anxious and depressed; there seemed to be something in the air about him that set his nerves a quiver, and filled him with strange feelings.

It was after three o'clock when, with a reluctance of which his manner gave no hint, Laffite rose and signified that he must be going.

"Will you not come again soon?" asked Laxalle, a new wistfulness showing in her face and voice, as he extended his hand to her.

Laffite's only reply was a smile; and turning to say adieu to Madeleine de Caneau, he saw that she had left the veranda, and was standing on the lawn, some little distance from the house.

She was looking off toward the woods, and said, as Laffite passed beside her, "There is the man from whom grandpère rented Kanachana, sitting under a tree with his gun."

"He expects to see me before I go, and is waiting for the opportunity," Laffite explained, his voice softening as it always did when addressing her.

The violet eyes and the dark ones looked into each other; then a shapely brown hand possessed itself gently of a small white one.

"Oh, Captain Jean, I am so sorry—so very sorry! Will you not say that you forgive me?"

She spoke impulsively, in a half-whisper, and the other small hand was now laid over the back of the brown one.

Her look and words, the faint pressure of her fingers, sent a wild joy through his veins.

"God in heaven bless you for those words. Only there can never be any forgiveness between us, save as you may give me Heaven, by forgiving me. Try and trust me, child. Try and believe that I am not the monster you have thought me. Do this, and you can save me from what has been an earthly hell."

She looked startled, but the glad light shone in her eyes, and she was aware that she was not offended by his passionate pleading.

"Adieu, now," he whispered, bending so close his breath stirred the bright hair rippling over her forehead. "Adieu, and God's angels keep you."

"He was gone, but her hands still tingled from his still thrilled her ears. His tone voice still thrilled her ears.

With a joyously beating heart that made her inclined to weep as well as sing, the girl ascended with feet steps to the veranda and fed to her room, locked the door and threw herself upon the bed.

She was laughing, but with tears crowding to her throat, and trying to get into her eyes, where, for appearance's sake, she did not care to have them show.

She did not ask herself what it was, what it meant, or what it might mean, to her life. She knew only a half-delirious joy, such as never before had come to her.

Ah, how (as she now admitted to herself) she had missed him out of her life—her brave, handsome Captain Jean! How she had missed his chivalrous, protecting friendship—the latent strength and decision showing in all he did and said! How she had missed the gentleness and reverence with which he always addressed her—the kindly deeds he was always striving to do for her.

The sun was nearly two hours high on the following day when the boat bearing Laffite back to Grande Terre stole out from the wooded mouth of the Bayou.

Looking toward the island, Laffite noticed an unusual volume of smoke lingering above the tree tops, and wondered why the men had so much fire at this hour of the day. There, turning his eyes to the east, he saw a fleet of vessels apparently going down the gulf. While the boat sailed down the island's shore the smoke against the southern sky showed more dense, and Baptiste, pointing to it, said, "That smoke looks to be no innocent camp-fire or chimney smoke, my captain."

Laffite was about to reply, when the boat came abreast of an opening in the trees, through which some of the buildings were seen to be on fire.

A chorus of exclamations and exclamations broke from Baptiste and the crew, and one of the latter cried out, "This is the work of those cursed English!"

Laffite raised his hand to command silence.

"Yonder vessels did it, rather than the English," he said, in a voice husky with rage, as he pointed to the disappearing fleet.

"And they are flying the United States flag!" shouted another of the crew, who had taken the spyglass lying near him and was looking through it.

"Shall we venture to land, my captain?" ventured Baptiste.

"Draw closer," said Laffite, turning to the crew, who were staring with fury-filled eyes at the seemingly deserted island. "Draw closer, and I will signal. But be in readiness to turn about, in case I wish to head for Shell Island."

He waited until the boat was nearer the shore, and then, arching a hand over his lips, sent a water-bird's shrill call ringing out twice over the water.

Not ten seconds passed when a similar call came from the island, followed by the appearance of a figure upon the edge of the timber.

It was Noto, who waved his arms wildly and came scrambling down to the beach.

In a most dilapidated fashion and accompanied by hysterical sobbing, Noto told all that he knew of a story which, for bad faith and harsh proceedings, was a story of the most revolting kind.

"If any harm comes to him we'd better join the English, and help them New Orleans," said one, as they watched Laffite back pulled up the stream.

"Caramba!" growled a Spaniard. "It is to the cutting of the illustrious Governor's throat I would prefer to give my attention."

"So would I," declared a Yankee, lounging next to the last speaker. "It is the governor's fault that Grande Terre was attacked. Captain Laffite said so."

"Aye, we all know that," affirmed several voices, and Noto, unable to endure the hint of harm coming to his master, rose from his place on the edge of the group and stole away to join Scipio and Juniper, who were sitting by themselves before the door of Laffite's cabin.

But here he found the same topic under discussion, for Scipio was saying to the younger negro, as if in reply to an assertion the latter had made, "Zey all so-dam! Zey Angli-an, yey Mexican, too-so-dam! Yey Juniper, of zat to captain he come back nevalr, den yo' detable, Zey git yo' to choke w'is rope, round yo' neck of zat yo' low dey protection of is captain!"

Representative Ketch of Kentucky tells of a considerable judge in his state who passed a sentence on a man convicted of murder. The judge said, "Mr. Dodson, the jury says you are guilty of murder, and the law says you are to be hanged. It is my wish that you and all your friends on the river to know that it is not I, but the law, Mr. Dodson. At what time, sir, would you like to be hanged?"

The prisoner made answer that it was a matter of indifference to him and that he was prepared to be swung off at any time. The judge continued: "Mr. Dodson, it is a serious matter to be hanged. It will happen to you, and you will have to hang four weeks from to-day at 12 noon, but you may have a good dinner first."

Engineers Find Bearings in Fog.

"When I was a guard," said Mr. Richard Bell, M. P. yesterday, "I could sit in my van with my eyes shut and tell where the train was at any moment. Working one section continuously one gets to learn the rhythmic song of the round and how it varies at each signal box, station, curve, gradient, tunnel and bridge."

The sixth sense, which is more than a matter of instinct, is of the utmost value to a driver during fog. Denied the use of his eyes, he still does not lose his way when he is on a familiar road.

A driver cannot learn a new road when he is stoking, which should occupy all his time. He should always be allowed to travel as third man on the footplate, untroubled by work, and able to keep his eyes on the rails and ears open, so he would learn the road.—London Daily Mail.

had escaped; but the former had seen Pierre, who appeared to be wounded, carried to a boat, and taken out to the ships.

It was not until some time after this that Laffite gathered a reliable account of the affair, and knew the reason for this mysterious descent upon Barataria. The facts were these:

Beluche had been received amicably by Governor Claiborne, who, after reading Laffite's letter, setting forth in detail the recent offer from the English, listened to all the Baratarian messenger had to say, and informed him that he must, before deciding upon a reply, consult with certain other officials. He then, however, while treating Beluche and Lopez with perfect courtesy, held them as prisoners.

The conference, in pursuance of invitations similar to that received by Gen. La Roche, was held promptly, and a large majority of its members having refused to believe the truth of Laffite's statements, Governor Claiborne, although himself in favor of accepting the Baratarian proposition, allowed the others to overrule him.

The decision was, however, kept from the knowledge of Laffite's adherents, as was also the fact that a large armed force was quickly organized to descend upon Grande Terre.

More bitter than ever before were Laffite's thoughts that night and the following day. All seemed hopeless—so hopeless that, as he reviewed the situation, he became stunned beyond all ability to feel the rage which at another time would have been likely to control him.

But, true to his nature, he did not permit himself to be overwhelmed by the gloom and sorrow that had come upon him. A trusty messenger had been dispatched at once to a point not far from New Orleans. There were those to be relied upon for the latest news from the city; and upon the third day after the attack upon Grande Terre, the messenger returned with information that determined Laffite to proceed there at once.

Pierre was at New Orleans, in goal, wounded; some said mortally, others declared he was dying.

It was Noto, who waved his arms wildly and came scrambling down to the beach.

In a most dilapidated fashion and accompanied by hysterical sobbing, Noto told all that he knew of a story which, for bad faith and harsh pro-

Considerate.

Representative Ketch of Kentucky tells of a considerable judge in his state who passed a sentence on a man convicted of murder. The judge said, "Mr. Dodson, the jury says you are guilty of murder, and the law says you are to be hanged. It is my wish that you and all your friends on the river to know that it is not I, but the law, Mr. Dodson. At what time, sir, would you like to be hanged?"

The prisoner made answer that it was a matter of indifference to him and that he was prepared to be swung off at any time. The judge continued: "Mr. Dodson, it is a serious matter to be hanged. It will happen to you, and you will have to hang four weeks from to-day at 12 noon, but you may have a good dinner first."

Engineers Find Bearings in Fog.

"When I was a guard," said Mr. Richard Bell, M. P. yesterday, "I could sit in my van with my eyes shut and tell where the train was at any moment. Working one section continuously one gets to learn the rhythmic song of the round and how it varies at each signal box, station, curve, gradient, tunnel and bridge."

The sixth sense, which is more than a matter of instinct, is of the utmost value to a driver during fog. Denied the use of his eyes, he still does not lose his way when he is on a familiar road.

A driver cannot learn a new road when he is stoking, which should occupy all his time. He should always be allowed to travel as third man on the footplate, untroubled by work, and able to keep his eyes on the rails and ears open, so he would learn the road.—London Daily Mail.

BRIDGE OVER MISSISSIPPI TRIUMPH OF BUILDER'S ART

Bridge building on the Mississippi river has never been attended with so many distinguishing features interesting to workers in many lines as has the new structure at Thebes, Ill., which was opened to the traffic of five railroads May 25.

This bridge forms a new and great gateway from Chicago to the southwest.

It has cost $3,000,000. It has cost sixteen human lives. It has required three years to build it.

It is built at a grade of only one-half of 1 per cent.

It has no draw and clears boats at high water mark.

It is four miles long counting the approaches in both states.

It is the only bridge that took its steel superstructure from two floating trains of ten and twelve cars each.

It is the only bridge that built its pneumatic caissons on barges whence they were launched into the river.

It is the only bridge that was built by a special company formed of five general managers of five great railway systems.

Its grade is such as to make it advantageous to double St. Louis south-western freight across the Mississippi, and to route the use of 12,000 barrels of cement. It used up 14,000 tons of steel. The double track may be crowded with the heaviest locomotives its whole length without taxing its capacity.

It has replaced one of the old Illinois towns and caused a new one to be built in Missouri.

It has caused the building of an Illinois railroad 129 miles long at a grade of but seven feet to the mile.

It is approached by one road that is required to pass around a loop twenty miles in circumference in order to reach its level.

It is a triumph of engineering skill. The low grade of the bridge is its predominant feature. Before it was built the bridge at Memphis was said to be the lowest on the river. It is 1 1/4 per cent on one side of the river and 1 1/4 per cent on the other side.

The Thebes bridge has been built and approached at a grade of one-half of 1 per cent. Both of the St. Louis bridges have steeper grades.

It is claimed that on account of this grade freight will be diverted from Memphis and St. Louis; that the great bulk of the southwestern lines of the Gould system will be brought across at Thebes, and some of the southwestern freight destined for St. Louis will cross the river on the new bridge.

Up on the east side of the river in Illinois and then be sent back into Missouri at East St. Louis.

TO TEACH KING OF SPAIN.

American Youth Chosen as Instructor for Morocco.

Ralph Hay of Lancaster, Wis., not yet quite 18 years old, has an engagement to become a member of the household of the king of Spain and to be the king's American instructor.

Ralph is the son of a buyer and shipper of stock. He graduated at the high school at Lancaster last year.

He has been employed for nine months as an assistant with the Live Stock Commission company of the Chicago stock yards. He had studied Spanish a little and there met with the assistant consul of Spain, with whom he studied more.

He also met a Spanish count who was looking for an American to go and instruct the king in American ways and business. The count was favorably impressed and recommended the

LAURIER A GREAT STATESMAN.

Capacity of Premier of Canada Undervalued.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, premier of Canada, is frequently referred to as perhaps the greatest statesman in all the British empire, regarded either as a statesman or as a public speaker or authority on international usage.

Tall, thin and straight as an arrow, with countenance mild, serious and sympathetic and a large, well-developed brow, indicative of strength of mind and resourcefulness of purpose.

the Canadian prime minister, when he rises to address a public gathering, at once commands attention. His father was a poor sawyer on the parish of St. Lin, where Sir Wilfrid was born in 1854. This is a Scotch settlement, and from a schoolmaster and merchant of that nationality the youth learned the achievements of the liberal party in Great Britain.

He frequently declares that much of his success is due to the lessons drawn from what he heard from these two men in his boyhood days.

Great French Foreign Minister.

M. Delcasse, the French minister of foreign affairs, is now in his fifty-third year. His appearance is not at all striking, except possibly for the negative reason alleged by M. Rochefort and the caricaturists, though when the pasting editor of the Transatlantic describes him as "a small, thin, insignificant little fellow, there is obvious exaggeration. Little in a nation not noted for stature M. Delcasse is conspicuously small. But on this other he is wiry and tough.

His round head, close-cropped hair, keen eyes, reticent nose, bristling mustache and locked mouth are those of a fighter, and, moreover, his whole appearance suggests a man capable of much toil.

Germany Going to Canada.

N. Krausmann, an expert connected with the agricultural department of Germany, is in this country investigating conditions among his countrymen. He says the more desirable German immigrants are not settling in the United States, but are going to Canada. This is the promise on which he has been deceived by land boomers, who have sent all sorts of high-sounding literature to German homelands and urged the immigrants to come.

He adds that the promise on which he relied cannot be redeemed. As a result Germans of the better agricultural sort are going to Canada, and some time must elapse before confidence can be restored.

WORTH KNOWING.

The average consumer of baking powder does not know that a reaction occurs in the process of baking. Food prepared with a cream of tartar baking powder does not contain any cream of tartar. A loaf of bread made from a quart of four leaved with cream of tartar baking powder contains forty-five grains more of Rochelle Salt than is contained in one of the same weight of bread made with cream of tartar baking powder. Some eminent Boston physicians testified against the healthfulness of Rochelle Salt.

Therefore, why should the consumer pay forty-five cents per pound for the cream of tartar or Trust baking powders when the best baking powder in the world can be made to retail at twenty-five cents per pound (the price asked for Calumet Baking Powder) and leave a fair manufacturer's profit?

The manufacturers of Calumet Baking Powder have for years made a standing offer of One Thousand Dollars for any substance injurious to health found in food prepared from it. However, if you buy Calumet Baking Powder is entirely free from Rochelle Salt, alum, lime or ammonia.

An Item of Strength.

George Ade was talking about some buildings that had collapsed half-finished in Chicago.

"They were put up," said Mr. Ade, "by builders of a type too familiar to us in America."

"I once heard of two of these builders who, over a glass of beer, met and talked together like this:

"Jones, you always have better luck than me."

"Better luck? How so?"

"Why, how else do you account for my new houses blowing down in last week's wind, while yours weren't harmed? All were built the same—same woodwork, same mortar, everything."

"Yes," said the other builder, "but you forget that mine had been prepared."

ULCERS FOR 30 YEARS. Painful Eruptions From Knees to Feet Seemed Incurable—Cuticura Ends Misery.

Another of those remarkable cures by Cuticura, after doctors and all else had failed, is testified to by Mr. M. C. Moss of Galveston, Texas, in the following letter. For over thirty years I suffered from painful ulcers and an eruption from my knees to feet, and could find neither doctors nor medicine to help me, until I used Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills, which cured me in six months. They helped me the very first time I used them, and I am glad to write this so that others who suffer as I did may be saved from misery."

Just like the Old Folks.

GLIMPSES OF ROTHSCHILD.

His Fortune Was Heavy Burden to Baron Alphonse, French Banker.

The late Baron Alphonse de Rothschild of Paris, French banker, was a man of great culture as well as a worthy representative of his family as a financier, says the New York Times. He was also interested in sports, particularly racing.

There have been two attacks upon the French Rothschild. The first was in 1818, when the father of Baron Alphonse, being besieged by peasant revolutionists, received them and offered to give his visitors what was due should he divide his fortune among the people. He calculated that they should receive 5 francs each. The peasants left the old baron in peace.

The second attack was upon Baron Alphonse. It took a more courteous form. In September, 1885, a letter was sent him containing an explosive that would go off when the letter was opened. The baron, who was in Paris, and the letter was opened by a clerk, a Polish Jew, M. Jodkowitz. He was thrown down by the detonation, but not seriously injured. Curiously enough, M. Jodkowitz was at the time in charge of Baron Alphonse de Rothschild's charitable disbursements, which benefited the deserving of all faiths.

Notwithstanding all his wealth and influence, Baron Alphonse was an unhappy man. He found pleasure in his family life, in art and in music, but the care of his great fortune was a heavy burden. A visitor once asked him if he was in such a mood as that he asked if he were ill.

"I am not ill; I am crazy," was the reply.

"I will never believe that you are crazy until I see you throwing your money out of the window," said the visitor.

"Ah!" said the baron, exhibiting a threatening letter. "I am crazy because I do not throw my money out of the window."

The baron had one strong superstition which he could not overcome, and that was that the number 13 was unlucky. When he was married he chose as his residence the hotel in the Rue St. George, in Paris, which had been the property of M. Pesceatore. The residence bore the number 13. When the baron saw the number he refused to enter the house until it was removed. When letters came addressed with the old number he refused to open them, and he offered 15,000 francs to the municipality, to be distributed among the poor, if the number were changed. The offer was accepted, and "11 bis" was substituted.

The baron lost an eye in 1893 while on a hunting expedition through the carelessness of one of his guests. Being a strikingly handsome man, he felt the disfigurement keenly and said he would rather have had the top of his head blown off.

HAMMERING CURE FOR FAT.

How Mallets Helped Stout Man to Reduce His Weight.

THOMAS BURNETT Baldwin of the Pennsylvania railroad, a member of the New York Yacht and other clubs, who formerly was very stout, returned to New York from Europe the other day looking as athletic as a football player, says the New York Times. When Deputy Collector John Castree Williams asked Mr. Baldwin how he reduced his weight, the railroad man smiled and said:

"I invented the remedy myself and here is the prescription: Every night for months, when I went to bed, I had three or four blankets around me. Then I lay flat on my back. Near by I had two big mallets such as marble cutters use. Taking a mallet in each hand, I began to pound myself and kept it up for half an hour or more. Then I removed the blankets and went to sleep. The mallets, not the blankets, did the work. I only used the mallets to lessen the force of the blows. It is a fine remedy and is just as good for rheumatism as it is for undue fat."

Japanese Post Cards in Battle.

A collector of post cards in St. Petersburg writes, according to the Philadelphia Public Ledger, that all the soldiers in the Japanese army are supplied with very peculiar post cards. These cards are surrounded with an artistic mourning border, printed on a piece of white silk, and are worn by the Japanese soldiers on their chests. Before going to the war they were given the post card the name and address of the person to whom they wish the information of their death to be sent. In case of death on the field of battle, the post cards are stamped with the seal of the regiment, certifying the death of the bearer, and are sent to Japan.

A Novel Invention.

The Easthampton (N. Y.) Star notes that an Easthampton man of an inventive turn of mind is at work upon a mechanical device which when placed upon a vehicle will indicate by a signal upon a moving table the contour of the road over which the vehicle is drawn. He hopes by his invention to be able to demonstrate to motorists the danger of traveling at a speed greater than eight miles an hour over the roads.

Watch and Clockwork in a Fish.

Colonel S. P. Bartlett, Illinois fish company, has received a letter from G. Burdett of Florence, on the Illinois river, in which the writer states according to a Quincy (Ill.) dispatch to the Chicago Record-Herald, that he recently caught a catfish weighing eighty-seven pounds, in the stomach of which were found a watch, two pairs of sleeve buttons and a quart coffee pot made of tin.

A SPIRITUALIST MECCA.

A lot of Church Expected to Make Leroy, Ill., Headquarters of Cult. A Spiritualist church is soon to be erected at Leroy, Ill., at a cost of $25,000, says a Bloomington (Ill.) dispatch to the Chicago Record-Herald. The money is provided for in the will of J. T. Crumbaugh, a wealthy banker of Leroy, who died recently, aged eighty-seven. The will is dated four years ago.

The bequest is in the form of 1,100 acres of the richest farm land in central Illinois, worth $200,000, from which the income is about $10,000 yearly. The amount remaining after the church has been built will be used for the furtherance of the spiritualist belief.

While at present there are only about 100 members of the denomination in Leroy, it is believed that the Crumbaugh church will make the town the headquarters of the cult in the United States and that finally it will become the Mecca of believers from all parts of the world. Spiritual provision is made that no part of the land shall be mortgaged or disposed of, but it is left "forever and ever" for the uses mentioned.

Mrs. Crumbaugh is an ardent Spiritualist and will see that the will of her husband is carried out both in letter and spirit. Spiritualists say that the bequest of Mr. Crumbaugh is the result of direct inspiration from departed Spiritualists, and that the Crumbaugh will be directed, just as the Leland Stanford, Jr., university was founded, under inspiration, as alleged, of the spirit of Senator Stanford's only child.

The will also provides for the erection in Leroy of a free public library, and further provides that after her death Mrs. Crumbaugh's part of the estate, amounting to $100,000, shall be used to Spiritualist uses.

TRIBUTE TO OUR WOMEN.

Physically and Intellectually They Lead the World.

Helen Jager, special correspondent of the Age, Melbourne, one of the largest dailies of Australia, accompanied by her three-year-old daughter Carmen, recently reached New York on a mission that will take her practically around the world before it is completed, says the New York American. Her itinerary includes a visit to the interior of Russia to learn the true conditions among the czar's subjects. She also plans a personal interview with the pope.

"The people of Australia and especially the women, who now enjoy equal suffrage with the men, are greatly interested in the American women," she says. "Many conflicting stories are written about the American women—some of them are grotesque caricatures and so my paper sent me here to study them and tell of their life and advancement, political and otherwise. 'I have written back that the American women are not intellectually and physically the finest women of the world and slightly in advance of their sisters in Australia, who are easily in advance of the women of the remaining nations of the world. I am delighted with the results of my visit and have slowly traveled across the continent in order to study the women of different sections.'" without ceremony the erection of a log hut at Valley Forge on the site of one of the original huts built and occupied by Washington's army and not far from the home of Senator Knox, says a special dispatch from Norristown, Pa., to the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

The timber, some of which has been cut, will all be taken from the historic ground, much of it coming from the land donated by H. Heston Todd of Fort Kennedy to the promoters of the Washington Memorial chapel, from which it is not far distant. This hut will be built after the manner of those constructed by the New Jersey soldiers and not reared without a foundation, as were the huts of those soldiers from North Carolina, where the suffering was the greatest from exposure.

Canal Lecture on Panama Canal.

A good lecture of considerable interest was the discourse on the Panama canal delivered recently in a Vermont town, says the Boston Record. The lecturer was a drummer, and he had been holding forth at the hotel on Panama and the tropics to such an extent that the managers of a church festival hit on the brilliant idea of asking him to tell the church folk about the canal. The drummer accepted—he could not help it—and this is his lecture on the Panama canal.

"As I came into this church I noticed a ditch in the street, evidently for water pipes or something. Just imagine that ditch 200 times as wide, 200 times as deep and forty-seven miles long. And there you are. Good night."

Society in Laos.

Electrified Laos are among the latest French colonies, says the New York Post. The Laos are made captives of an electric current and placed in a galvanic bath. Under the influence of a current of about three volts they become coated with an exceedingly delicate metal surface, the colors of which and other properties can be regulated at will. The coating is so fine that not the slightest irregularity can be noticed, and the Laos remains perfectly soft and flexible. It makes no difference whether gold, silver, copper, bronze or other metals are employed.

Jap-a-Lac

Lamoy & Co. have added to their line of paints a complete line of Jap-a-Lac. It is made in the following colors: Oak, walnut, mahogany, cherry, malachite green, ox-blood red, brilliant black, dead black, natural ground, gloss white, flat white, empire blue. It is sold in any quantity from one-half pint to ten gallons.

Jap-a-Lac stains and varnishes by one application, and is the most durable finish on the market; also the best possible finish for all kinds of interior wood-work, where extreme durability is required.

It is a great restorer of old wood-work, as it covers up all marks, scratches or disfigurements, producing a brilliant and beautiful finish, and can be successfully applied by an inexperienced person. It is not affected by hot or cold water, nor by soap and water, and does not mar white nor show level marks when used on floors.

IT WEARS LIKE IRON.

The Use of Words.

Periodically one brings up the idea that the average person uses but a very few words. Within a few weeks the collection of words which the contemporary young man has at his command has been stated at sixty-five or less. There are words in plenty if people wish to master the use of them. A very large vocabulary is not needed for fluent and correct speaking and writing. It has been said that educated people do not use for ordinary communication over ten words, a number which looks small expressed in figures, but is large when the words in common use are counted. Many, very many, words are repeated again and again in the same sentence, it is said that when a person has made a choice of a word to convey a certain meaning it is all right to stick to it and use it again and again. It is certainly a large lot of words a good way is to set to work and memorize and then use them in writing and speaking over and over until they become fixed in the mind. It is a task of labor, but has its advantages.

Gorky, the Russian revolutionary author, reads in the Russian language only, but it is said that he has read as much English literature as nine out of ten educated Englishmen have read in English. He read Shakespeare at fifteen years of age, when a cabin boy on a Yalta steamer. He rejects in English literature everything tinged with asceticism or Puritanical restriction on human joyousness. For Bret Harte, Kipling and Mark Twain Gorky has unbounded praise.

HOW ROYALTY WEDS

Nuptials of Germany's Future Ruler and Duchess Cecilia of Mecklenburg-Schwerin.

Having a Mind of His Own, the Young Prince Chose His Own Bride, but His Royal Father Selected Her Trousseau.

Both Bride and Bridegroom Excellent Equestrians and Fond of Outdoor Sports. Young Frederick William a Performer of Feats of the Wild West Order.

By FREDERICK SIEGEL
THE marriage of a crown prince is an event of sufficient importance to make the subjects of a monarchy sit up and take notice. Especially is this the case when the bridegroom is the prospective emperor of Germany and king of Prussia. Therefore, when it was announced that on June 6 Frederick William, ground that he himself was too poor to do it the nuptials became more pronounced, and there were indications that the till would be fought in the Reichstag.

Once a "Tomboy."
Of the high contracting parties to this alliance not very much is known concerning the young duchess who thus becomes the prospective empress of all the Germans. She was born Sept. 20, 1884, is a sister of the reigning grand duke of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, is closely related to the grand ducal house of Russia, is heiress to a very considerable fortune in her own right, is a Protestant and a devoted sports-woman. She is said to have been something of a "tomboy" in her younger days, indulging madly over the ducal estates at home and not infrequently playing merry pranks on the staid and respectable people who had her education and bringing up in charge—in fact, a very lively and human duchess, who insisted on her God given right of being a child despite the restraints of royal red tape. She plays tennis very well, even beating the crown prince, who considers himself no mean hand at the game.

The father of Cecilia was the late grand duke, who broke his neck in a rather ungraceful fashion by jumping, falling or being pushed, as the case may be, from a rather high parapet of his palace.

Lively Times for the Kaiser.
The Grand Duchess Anastasia, the mother of Cecilia, is not popular around the German court, even her prospective son-in-law having expressed himself as not being especially enamored of her. There is believed to be some little coldness between the emperor and the grand duchess, owing partly no doubt to an incident that occurred in Italy not long after the engagement between the crown prince and the Duchess Cecilia was announced. The young prince went to meet at Florence, and the

One evening during his early boyhood William discovered an opera hat worn by a guest and was greatly amused by the manner in which it fitted and unfolded. A few days later the court chaplain called wearing a shiny new silk tie. The boy tried the experiment on this. As it did not fold well he placed it in a chair and commanded his younger brother, Eitel Fritz, to sit on it, and this folded the hat up very effectively. The chaplain kept his ruined tie as a memento of the occasion.

Whipped For Exercising His Prerogative.

At another time the Kaiser found his eldest son cutting one of his younger brothers. When ordered to stop the boy said bristly:

"Leave me alone. I am the crown prince of Germany, and I have a right to whip whom I please."

"Very good," replied the father, "but I am the emperor of Germany, and I have a right to whip the crown prince," which he proceeded to do in a very thorough fashion.

The court chaplain, he of the smashed hat, one day said that all people are sinners. "Father may be," said the boy, "but mine is not."

Fond of Dare Devil Feats.

Frederick William was born May 6, 1882. A few years ago he was a student in the famous University of Bonn, where he had some trouble with the professors because he failed to drink the required number of steins of beer. But he made up for his defects and in other ways came up to specifications, so he was voted a good fellow. He spends most of his time riding and shooting and is an expert horseman. He has won many prizes riding and has brought down on his head the royal displeasure of his father by his dare devil feats. At one time he tied one of the army officers for first prize in a vaulting and obstacle race, but generously relinquished his share of the winning. At another he leaped his the eldest son of the Kaiser, would wed Duchess Cecilia of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, the whole world was reasonably certain that the ceremonies would be the most spectacular seen in Europe for some years. The fact that the nuptial knot would be tied in the magnificent new cathedral fronting the Imperial palace, Berlin; that the ceremonies would cost at least a half million dollars; and that they would be attended by representatives of more royal houses than have been gathered under a single roof in many a day added interest to the occasion. All this delighted the soul of the young prince's imperial father, who planned the ceremonies even to the minutest detail, and who is universally recognized as somewhat in the spectacular line himself.

The expenses of the affair were to be paid, of course, from the public treasury. In addition, polite hints were sent out to the various provinces and municipalities that they could show their loyalty to the reigning house by making presents, which is the very nature of the case would have to be costly. There has been more or less murmuring because of all this, even going so far in one instance as to precipitate a case in court to prevent this diversion of the public revenues. When it was learned therefore that the Kaiser would ask a state appropriation to support his royal son and heir on the kaiser ordered the grand duchess to accompany her daughter. Not being accustomed to taking orders, Anastasia politely declined, whereupon the crown prince was summarily ordered home. Some friction also occurred over the ordering of the trousseau. William II. insisted on attending to all these little matters, a procedure that the bride's mother resented. As a result of all these things it was declared at one time that the Grand Duchess Anastasia would not attend the marriage of her daughter.

Proposed Over a Cup of Tea.

These and many other escapades, such as falling in love with Miss Gladys Deacon, the American beauty, then with an American chorus girl and others, are said to have created a marked coolness between the crown prince and his father. The effort to find the young man a suitable wife was prosecuted long and unavailingly until he solved the question himself by choosing Duchess Cecilia, to whom he proposed over a cup of tea. English princesses and others were canvassed, only to be rejected. At one time Emperor William ordered his son to marry Princess Thyra of Denmark.

Popular Youth Devoted to Sports.

Concerning Frederick William, his life from boyhood is known even to minute details. A very human, amiable, modest sort of a boy, not over-bright, but given to wanders feet and having a will of his own. Not especially prepossessing in appearance, but of a susceptible nature, he has had numerous affairs of the heart. Popular withal, as prospective rulers usually are. An accomplished horseman, a fair linguist and quite the gentleman in instinct and training. Even his written sentimental poetry of not very high grade and plays on the violin but not like a Paganini. Well-trained as a soldier, devoted to sports, democratic and affable, and yet conscious of his position. Altogether a likable young man of at least average quality and attainments.

Now that the wild oats are sown, however, the German people believe that with his marriage the young Hohenzollern, who will become Emperor William III. if he lives will settle down into a sedate husband and later a model ruler. He has never shown the grasp and intellectual qualities of his father, but he is such a very human boy that the folks cannot refrain from liking him.

GOVERNMENT LIGHT.

HISTORIC CHICKAMAUGA PARK ABLAZE WITH ILLUMINATION.

United States System of Lighting Military Parks Pronounced "Gratifyingly Successful—Six and One-Half Miles of Main—Sixty-Five Street Lights.

Chickamauga Park Ga., May 31.—The United States government has here its largest and most successful military park in the world. The military post at the entrance of the historical Chickamauga battlefield where thirty thousand Union and Confederate soldiers were killed in the memorable battle of Sept. 19 and 20, 1862, contains about one hundred buildings, the twenty-five principal ones of which are lighted with acetylene. To accomplish this six and one-half miles of mains and two miles of service pipes are in use, while sixty-five street lamps brilliantly illuminate the avenue leading to the park.

In 1903 the War Department installed a test acetylene plant at Fort Meyer, Virginia. The results were so gratifying and the superiority of the illuminant so evident that the government, March 20, 1904, placed the contract for the Chickamauga plant, in which every citizen of the United States should have his pride of pride.

But the government has not confined its acceptance of acetylene to this military plant and the acetylene plant in Indian schools and other government installations.

Acetylene gas is one of the simplest as well as the most perfect of artificial lights. It is made by the contact of water and carbide, a manufactured product for sale at a nominal price, is absolutely safe and gives a beautiful white light, and is clean, simple and serves. It can be produced anywhere—in the farm house, the village, the town hall, the church—and is so easily maintained as to be practical for all climates.

It is a matter for national congratulation that in beautifying so historic a spot as Chickamauga, nothing but the best has been chosen. The lighting system, has been deemed good enough for the American people.

New Field for Business Woman.

Widow, a specially selected, drift into strange lines of work to make a living for themselves, but there are few who have chosen a stranger occupation than Mrs. Harris of this city. Last winter, when, deserted by her husband she found that she must earn a living for herself and children or become dependent upon relatives who could afford to support her. Her husband had kept a large force of men busy in the boiler cleaning business. His principal partners were steamboat owners and shipbuilders. Mrs. Harris, charged by her absent husband's office, in search for clues to his whereabouts, and in the mail she found many notices to clean steamship boilers.

She was not a woman who was no time to waste, so she called her husband's employees together and told them she was going to continue the business, and asked their loyal cooperation. They were glad to give her, inasmuch as they knew their own livelihood in a measure depended upon her success. She made one of the men foreman and then proceeded to the wharf, where she met the captain of a big steamship, and, after closing a contract, set her men to work. The plucky young woman, after several months of hard work, has never had so much money in her life.—Philadelphia Record.

Are the Packers Receiving Fair Play?

When the Garfield report on the business methods of the packers appeared, after eight months' investigation, it was severely criticized and roundly denounced. The public notice of publicity it is significant that those who attempted to discredit it have failed to controvert the figures contained in that exhaustive document. The public is beginning to notice this omission, and the feeling is rapidly growing that the sensational charges out of which the "Beef Investigation" arose were without foundation. If the official statements of the report are susceptible of contradiction, a good many people are now asking why the facts and figures are not furnished to contradict them. The truth seems to be that most of the charges contain unfounded sensational assertions. A fragment of the report appeared in a recent issue of an Eastern magazine, to the effect that "forty Iowa banks were forced to close their doors in 1904 by the Beef Trust's manipulation." The beef trust, the office of the bank department of the Iowa State Auditor's office, has tabulated the list of banks given in the magazine article and has found that only one bank failed in 1904. A fragment of the report appeared in a recent issue of an Eastern magazine, to the effect that "forty Iowa banks were forced to close their doors in 1904 by the Beef Trust's manipulation." The beef trust, the office of the bank department of the Iowa State Auditor's office, has tabulated the list of banks given in the magazine article and has found that only one bank failed in 1904. The public is beginning to notice this omission, and the feeling is rapidly growing that the sensational charges out of which the "Beef Investigation" arose were without foundation. If the official statements of the report are susceptible of contradiction, a good many people are now asking why the facts and figures are not furnished to contradict them. The truth seems to be that most of the charges contain unfounded sensational assertions. Nearly every farm hand thinks that he receives the smallest wages of any branch of labor. However, the land that is getting $25 per month with board, washing and the keeping of his horse, is better paid than the book-keeper, the clerk or the tradesman who gets $50 per month and has to pay board and laundry out of this.

A Kansas farmer is kicking because he says his daughter a pair of chickens two years ago and promised to feed the increase for four years if she would take care of them. He says she has $64 in the bank and 200 chickens that he had to feed all winter. He also ment on subjects of local importance, a field the daily can never invade.

The weekly paper can be made very new from a neighborhood standpoint. It can be bright in comment on local affairs and in its discussion of local improvements and local politics. If it is bright in these particular departments, the advent of the big daily at the farmer's door will never drive out the weekly. The farmer may become a daily subscriber for the news of the world, but he will keep the little weekly for his home news. It tells about home folk and their doings, and no other paper, no matter how big or pretentious, can fill the worthy place of the home paper. The farmer knows the country editor; he knows all the people whose names appear in the columns of the home weekly, and he has an interest in their affairs that is larger and more vital than his interest in all the rest of the world. The weekly newspaper is a permanent institution.—Press and Printer, Boston.

No Secret About It.

It is no secret that for cuts, burns, ulcers, fever sores, sore eyes, boils, etc., nothing is so effective as Bucklin's Arnica salve. "It didn't take long to cure a bad sore throat, and it is all O. K. for sore eyes," writes D. L. Gregory, of Hope, Tex. 25c at the Barrington Pharmacy.

Brideless Marriage.

A wedding occurred here Wednesday evening without a bride, or rather, the choice of two photographic samples being given.
The room of a young man of susceptible heart was taken possession of by several friends and decorated for a bridal party. Wedding bells, flowers, and ribbons were in profusion, and rice plentiful.

Upon what grounds such an affair was based is not publicly known, but the suggestion remains, and perhaps one of the investigators may receive her reward. Telephone 281.

IN QUEST OF BIG GAME

Expedition to Africa From Field Columbian Museum.

FOR SCIENTIFIC AIMS, NOT SPORT

Party of Explorers From Chicago Will Be Led by Carl E. Akely, a Well Known Taxidermist—Vernon Shaw Kennedy Will Accompany Him—Expedition Being Formed For the Same Purpose.

The Field Columbian museum in Chicago is preparing a great expedition to explore the heart of Africa and to shoot big game for its collections, says the Chicago Post. The endeavor will be to explore in results the efforts of all scientific expeditions hitherto sent into the dark continent. The museum collectors and explorers will be led by Carl E. Akely of the institution's zoological department, who is recognized as the world's greatest taxidermist, and by Vernon Shaw Kennedy of Chicago. It is probable that Mr. Kennedy's brother will join the party in London. Mr. Akely will take an assistant from the museum with him, and on the coast of Africa a large number of natives will be employed to accompany the expedition as hunters and burden bearers.

The management of the Field Columbian museum is anxious to complete its collections of the big game of Africa before communication with the interior of the continent is made so easy that the animals will become a prey to the English and continental sportsmen.

The Chicago members of the expedition will be sent from America this summer. The exact date not yet having been set. They will go to London and from there will sail for Mombasa, East African protectorate, where the native contingent of the party will be engaged. Mombasa is only a few miles south of the equator, and the members of the expedition will move due west into the interior and will encounter their greatest hardships, due to heat, lack of water and danger from the natives and from wild animals. It was necessary to take along an armed force of sixty men as protection from the attacks of the tribes of the interior. The forthcoming expedition probably will be guarded in a similar manner.

Carl E. Akely, who will lead the party now forming, nearly lost his life on the former expedition in a fight with a leopard. The beast was slightly wounded, and on the approach of Mr. Akely sprang at him and bore him to the ground. He fought with it and succeeded in killing it, but only after he had been badly injured in the encounter. The heat of the climate was such that Professor Elliott's health was undermined, and for this reason the expedition cannot be a member of the coming expedition. Vernon Shaw Kennedy, who will accompany the expedition, is not connected with the Field museum, but he has hunted big game in nearly all countries, doing most of his shooting for the enrichment of scientific institutions.

Speaking of the forthcoming expedition, Mr. Kennedy said: "It should be understood that the African trip is not for the purpose of sport. It is to be conducted strictly for scientific purposes, and the animals that we will be used for educational purposes in the Field museum. We wish to get into the African country, where big game is to be found, before the completion of railroad lines and the influx of gunners scatter or annihilate the great animals."

An English scientific expedition is being formed for the same purpose as that of the Field museum. There will be a rivalry between the two parties in the matter of results. It is recognized by scientists all over the world that before long the African field will be in a sense exhausted. It is believed, however, that there exist in the heart of the continent species of animals and birds as yet unknown. The real scientific rivalry will come therefore perhaps in the line of the discovery of new forms of life.

The members of the African expedition to the Field museum succeeded in finding and in collecting several hitherto unknown species. A new race of hawks was found by Professor Elliott, and in compliment to the benefactor of the Columbian museum the birds were given the name of Field in its Latin name.

Scott's Emulsion is sold in all drug stores. Scott & Bower, Chicago, 1001 North Dearborn, New York, 1001 Broadway, and 211 West 11th Street.

The staff of the Field museum is busy preparing for the forthcoming expedition. The preparations are being made on a large scale. All sorts of material has to be taken to preserve the skins of the birds and beasts.

It is the aim of the scientists to get family groups of the animals. They will be mounted in the museum with just such surroundings as they have in their haunts, and to this end Mr. Akely will make a careful study of the vegetation and of the rock and sand formation of the country traversed. The expedition will be gone for several months, returning to Chicago early next winter.

The latest fad of the very rich fashionable woman is never to carry an umbrella and when caught in a rain with the most expensive clothes and millinery to lose on a sudden take a soaking. To act that way is proof positive, according to "swell" logic, that the being inside of the clothes doesn't care for the expense. It is really a proof of the saying that "the Lord shows his contempt for money by how he gives it to."

The Russian army has a bodyguard regiment composed of giants. Another regiment is made up exclusively of fair haired men, the Guard Chasseurs of dark haired men, and the Pale Guardsmen have for their distinguishing mark a tip tilted nose.

The Mosely commission of English students came to the United States to study our educational system, expecting to find us a nation of rank materialists, and went away convinced that we are idealists, with a disdain of money more unknown in Europe. Commenting upon this verdict, the Saturday Evening Post says that the American passion for money getting is purely idealistic, "love of the game and love of the dollar."

The Home Paper.

The extension of the free delivery system has, indeed, brought the Metropolitan daily to the door of the farmer; but it has at the same time extended the service of the rural weekly. It has benefited both the city and the country paper. Each has its own field, and neither can fill the field of the other. The news of the world is in the city daily; but the news of the neighborhood is found only in the country weekly. Wherever and whenever the country weekly confines itself to its own field it is continuing to meet with success. It is the vehicle of rural news and of live editorial com-

Advertise Liberally.

Publicity brings business. Why, even the bankers, the most conservative business men in the country, are beginning to realize the fact. Manufacturers who do not buy publicity as liberally as they buy other selling facilities will have to take their place in the rear of the procession. Advertising, whether direct or indirect, must be done generously if it is to bring results. The chief thing is to let the world know who you are, what you are and what you are doing, and you cannot do this on a large scale if you stop to take a census every time you fire a volley.—Arthur Warren, Advertising manager Allis-Chalmers Company, Milwaukee.
