will be carried away and cherished. Never forget you are a part of the town, and that your deportment helps to make up the stranger's estimate of the place. If you have the means, invest in something that will give somebody employment.

Do not kick at a proposed improvement because it is not at your door. A town that is always improving is also spreading itself out. If a man starts a project, encourage him. Don't be afraid to thrust your hands into your pocket to help a public enterprise. More towns have been killed by such refusals than in any other way. The citizens of any prosperous town are always public-spirited and united. Stand together, work together for the interests of the whole town. Always stand ready to do your part. Don't grumble and spend your time prophesying failures, but help to make every enterprise a success, be it great or small. Be energetic and enterprising and your example will be imitated.

The C. & N. W. officials being requested to place some needed public improvements at the station here, replied that the improvements could not be made this season, but would probably come in the near future. The officials recognize the need of these improvements, but cannot put them in at present.

The garden cultivated by Henry Volker, corner of Liberty and Elm streets, is the envy of all who view it. It was planted much later than other parcels of land on the North side and badly washed by the heavy rains in May but excellent care has developed it into what is termed by many "the best garden in the village."

A FINE ENTERTAINMENT

Mae Lane Spunner's Class in Elocution Pleases Large Audience.

The recital given last evening at the M. E. church by pupils of Mae Lane Spunner was one of the best ever presented to a Harrington audience; the program the most varied and a credit to the instructor. The audience filled to its capacity and an overflow crowd filled the lobby.

The program was original with Mrs. Spunner and was a high credit to her abilities.

The Grecian drills and pantomimes with musical accompaniments by the seniors were examples of artistic skill and grace, but the juniors are worthy of special mention for so perfectly carrying out their difficult parts.

Constance Purcell, Frances and Leona Dolan, the little folks on the program, gave their numbers in a manner to win hearty, deserved compliments and applause. Their work marks for them a bright future.

Mable Schindler, Alma Hawk and Lizzie Brandt gave readings which were pleasing.

Several out of town pupils assisted in the program, and the numbers by Misses Addie Filbert were exceptionally well given. Miss Hancock, in recitation of "Story of Some Bells," attracted decided applause, as did also Miss Lund. "A Great Record of Bad Luck," by Miss Brockway, was a very clever reading.

The entire program was one of exceptional merit and demonstrated the thorough instruction of the pupils in elocution. The entertainment marked the closing of the term. The fall term opens September 4th.

PRETTY HOME WEDDING.

Miss Ida Hutchinson Becomes Mrs. H. T. Graham.

Wednesday afternoon, June 21, at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chester Hutchinson, of this village, the solemn vows were taken which united Miss Ida Hutchinson to Harry T. Graham, of Wauconda. R. L. Kelly, pastor of the Baptist church, performed the ceremony in the presence of only relatives of the contracting parties.

By the marriage of Miss Hutchinson, Barrington loses one of its most estimable and highly esteemed young ladies, and the younger society circles a most loved member. Perhaps no young lady in our village can count more steadfast friends than her whom Harry Graham takes to her Wauconda home, and she will be missed by a large circle who, while they regret her departure, are pleased that her future has been linked to so worthy a young man as the one she has chosen.

Harry T. Graham, who has won this popular lady, is a gentleman of the highest character, strong business ability and great ability. Smith-Stroker.

Miss Anna Stroker and Mr. Bert L. Smith were married at the home of the bride in this village last Wednesday afternoon, June 21, 1905. Rev. G. S. Young, of the Methodist church, performed the ceremony. Both of the contracting parties have grown up from childhood in this place, and are well and favorably known to the people of this place and vicinity. The bride is a young lady of excellent qualities, and a graduate of Palatine high school. The groom is the eldest son of A. L. Smith, and popular among the young men. He holds a good position with the Hartman Trunk company, of Chicago.

Insects Threaten Trees.

Owners of beautiful shade trees which line the streets of this village are at a loss to account for the pest which has attacked the maples and box elder trees, and gradually sapping the life from the branches. It is feared that whatever the pest is that it may spread to other trees and entirely destroy them.

Along the entire length of the main branches and twigs the bark has been raised. From this a brownish, sticky, cotton-like, sticky substance, which is filled with eggs of an insect, but what it is seems a mystery to all, and none can indicate the cause to a certainty.

This pest seems to have located in the southern portion of Illinois only, as nothing of the kind is reported from the central or southern portions of the state.

A Bad Scarf.

Some day you will get a bad scarf, when you feel a pain in your bowels, and fear appendicitis. Safety lies in Dr. King's New Life Pills, a sure cure for all bowel and stomach diseases, such as headache, biliousness, constipation, etc. Guaranteed at the Harrington Pharmacy; only 25c. Try them.

BISHOP W. F. HEIL, of Chicago District Evangelical Church, who will be present at Camp Meeting during closing days.

Sunday, he having accepted a call to Oklahoma.

Wm. Tidmarsh is making strenuous efforts to organize a juvenile military band in our village. We see no reason why his efforts should not meet with success, as the boys are deeply interested, and Mr. Tidmarsh is a very capable instructor.

To Aid the Village.

It is not the size of a town, but its character, that makes it a desirable place to live in, says an exchange. A life and prosperous town may live and prosper and yet be small. Every citizen in a town should be interested in its prosperity. One of the ways to help a town is to speak well of it. Another way to help your town is to do all you can to beautify it. Beautify your own property all you can, then do all you can to beautify your street. Be friendly with everybody and courteous to strangers. Your civility will help to make good impressions, and best, and conveniences are all that could be asked. The program prepared is full of entertaining and instructive features for both old and young, and will be presented by a large number of ministers of the district, and other workers in the cause of Christianity. Bishop Heil will be present from Thursday June 29, to close of the meeting.

Will Enjoy a Vacation

Robert L. Kelly, who serves the Baptist society as pastor, will go to Minneapolis, Minn., next week to enjoy a vacation. Mr. Kelly will be missed by the members of his congregation and many friends whom he has attracted from among our people by his pleasing manner, congenial disposition, and liberal ideas on all topics of public discussion; by his logical, impartial way of presenting theological truths.

His friends wish for him a pleasant sojourn from study and work and a safe return to his duties here.

He had missed the picture from its place upon his hearth at Barataria; but, knowing there were others like it, he had no thought that he was looking upon what had been his own.

Presently, with a sign indicating respect, Jackson handed the last paper to Claiborne, and leaning forward, with his elbows upon the arms of his chair, said, his voice showing more of contempt than anger, "Most edifying assortment of reading, to be sure, Capt. Laffite. Are these all—these four papers, two of them addressed to you, Capt. Percy's instructions to his subordinates, and the proclamation to the people of this state?"

"These are all, general; and they contain all the information within my power to give you now," Laffite replied.

Claiborne began to refold the papers, while the general turned to Laffite.

"It is a fine offer you have received—all you can possibly desire."

"I wish—will take, nothing that England can ever have to offer me," Laffite added, with sudden fierceness. "I hate the nation, and its ways. Nothing could induce me to accept, now or ever, any terms from the English."

The first unguarded evidence of anything like cordial liking now manifested itself in Jackson's face. Yet there was nothing of this in his voice as he said, "May I ask, then, Capt. Laffite, if possibly some motive of personal revenge brought you here tonight with a renewal of your offer?"

Laffite's face flushed through its swarthy tints; then it paled, and grew stern.

"I understand that you needed soldiers—most of all, artillerymen; that you also needed arms—cannon and muskets. I came to offer all I have left of men and resources, for your use, and that of Louisiana. I ask no pay for myself—only for my men, if —glancing at the clock on the mantel quite aware—"It is late, and I must return to headquarters. I shall look for you to report to me at nine in the morning, to talk over matters in detail. I must know precisely as to the amount of your force, and there are other things about which I wish to consult you. I understand that no man is so familiar as yourself with the country from the south end and southwest of here. Is this true?"

"Yes, general, as I think I may say without egotism."

"So I supposed; and I shall have some questions to ask of you in regard to it. My knowledge of the country is not entirely complete, and I wish to obtain all possible information respecting the roads and waterways."

"I shall be happy to serve you, sir, to the best of my ability; and I thank you, gentlemen—both of you, for the favor you have shown me."

The sudden business of Laffite's firm voice was the only indication of his pent-up feelings, as he added, "To-night, Gen. Jackson, I thank you in words; but I hope to soon manifest my gratitude in a more substantial form—one that shall cause you no regret for the justice you have shown to Jean Laffite of Barataria."

He left them, his departure being as rapid and quiet as had been his appearance; and Jackson, turning to Claiborne, said, with a smile of grim satisfaction, "I believe that we can save New Orleans; and if we do, by the Eternal, a good share of the credit will belong to the men whom I called 'pirates and robbers,' and approved of your hanging!"

CHAPTER XXVIII.

The December sunshine lying about La Tete des Eaux gave a warmth and brightness that would have made the season of the year scarcely to be realized by one born to New England's ice and snow; and the cold breeze

"But how can such a thing be possible?" Laffite began when Madame Rieffet, having recovered herself, interrupted with: "Tell us all about it, Philip. How could he know Napoleon, and where did you hear such an improbable story?"

"From himself," was the laconic reply, accompanied by a look of great satisfaction.

The general was filled with exultation at his ability to give his sister, who had frequently expressed her dislike of his intimacy with Laffite—a place of information which he was a shipper of the illustrations. General place the Baratarian leader in a position second only to him whose acquaintance he could claim.

"I cannot credit such a thing," she declared.

"You could, and you would, had you been where I was, to hear what he said to Gen. Jackson. It came about in this way: A week or ten days ago, Laffite rendered an important service, of a private nature, to Claiborne, and the governor urged him to name someone as a reward for his services. What Laffite asked was a picture of Napoleon, which he was to have properly, although he was not aware of it at the time. It had been looted by one of our men during that September attack on Barataria, and Claiborne had rescued it, being about as mad over Napoleon as you, yourself, sister mine; and Laffite had this hanging on the wall of the governor's study."

"The other day, at headquarters, I was present when Jackson and Laffite were having a conference, during which the general spoke of the matter, and Laffite upon the sentimental price he had named for so valuable a service; he added that probably, like all Freshmen, he made a 'pot of male Madonnas' out of Napoleon's."

"If I wish you could have seen Laffite's face when he answered, 'I reverse him as the man I have known and loved since I was a young boy, and who has been as truly my guardian angel as any good Catholic could pray for. Holy Mother to be! And I wish you could have seen Jackson's face as he heard it.'"

Madame Rieffet gasped, and the two girls exclaimed in amazement. "It was in France, then, that Capt. Jean knew him?" Madame said wondrously.

"Naturally, Louise, as Napoleon has never been in this country." The general now consulted his watch, and added, "I must be off; and, by the way, let none of you mention the surprising fact that I have just related, as it might not be pleasing to Capt. Jean. He said no more than I have repeated, and was unmistakably averse to enlarging upon the subject."

"He always seems averse to talking of himself, or of his past life," Laffite said, as if thinking aloud, while they rose from the table; and Madame Rieffet remarked rather severely that it was perhaps because there was some distance between his past and that which it might be which had made him leave France.

The look of resentful indignation which this uncharitable comment brought to Madame de Casereau's face was softened somewhat when the general, laying a hand on either of his sister's plump shoulders, said, as he kissed her cheek, "For so naturally kind of heart as you are, Louise, it is curious what wrongful things you occasionally think in regard to other people."

After he was in the saddle, and the ladies were standing on the veranda to see him depart, he warned Laxalle that, for the present at least, she should confine her aquatic excursions to the immediate vicinity of the plantation. Then, observing the perturbed expression his words had brought to Madame Rieffet's face, he added that they were not to worry about the English; the other were not at all likely to appear in the neighborhood of Lake Borgne.

Conductor Has Reward Coming. The combination of strike, rain and crowded surface cars has been hard on women and children who must travel up and down town. A mite of a girl wood in the rear of a third-class street car, then for more than an hour on Wednesday night, trying to get a car up town. Finally a blockade caused a car to stop near her. The ladies were standing on the veranda to see him depart, he warned Laxalle that, for the present at least, she should confine her aquatic excursions to the immediate vicinity of the plantation. Then, observing the perturbed expression his words had brought to Madame Rieffet's face, he added that they were not to worry about the English; the other were not at all likely to appear in the neighborhood of Lake Borgne.

"Mister Conductor," said the child, crying "I'll give you a dollar if you'll let me on."

The conductor grasped the roof of the car, pulled himself up and, standing on the dashboard, lifted the weeping little one into the place he had for her. Then he transferred a nickel from his trousers pocket to the coat pocket where he kept the company's money.

"I want your number," said the girl. "I won't forget you, and I'll em-broider you something nice."—New York Sun.

A Natural Inquiry. The simplicity of some former inaugural banquets is illustrated by an odd story which has been revived and is going the rounds at Washington. It was originally told by Frederick Douglass in his lecture on John Brown.

Just after his first inauguration President Lincoln was one day blacking his boots in democratic fashion when several foreign diplomats were called and taken to the set. One of them remarked, sneeringly: "President, in our countries the chief executives do not black their own boots."

"Indeed?" said Mr. Lincoln. "We are a different variety," whose boots they blacked."

THINK COURT LACKS POMP.

London Tradesmen Make Complaint of Their King.

King Edward's reign has by no means brought joy to the hearts of London tradespeople. A leading trade paper laments in a recent issue the great portion of the treasure of Princess Margaret of Connaught has been purchased in Paris. It states that she will be the first bride of the reigning house to wear any but a British-made wedding dress. The same paper, referring to the evening courts now being held by the king and queen, declares that they are not so good for business as the late queen Victoria's afternoon drawing-rooms, because in the latter the dresses of all who attended were seen, whereas now the debutantes and those presiding them are the only ladies who pass the throne. The majority, therefore, do not trouble themselves about new dresses, as they are not in evidence.

CHAFFEE GOING TO FRANCE.

General Will Witness Maneuvers of That Country's Soldiers.

Lieut.-Gen. Chaffee has given up his contemplated trip of inspection to Alaska, upon which he was to start next month, according to a plan he had when he returned from his trip to posts in the southwestern section of the country. He will accept the invitation of the French government and will attend the army maneuvers this year. This is a trip which will be of great interest to Gen. Chaffee and the French authorities, have expressed much pleasure over the decision of the chief of staff of the United States army to witness the operations of the French army. Gen. Chaffee will be accompanied by Gen. William Crozier, chief of ordnance of the army, and Gen. J. Franklin Bell, the head of the staff college at Fort Leavenworth, and three aides.

NOTED WASHINGTON DIPLOMAT.

Mayor is Tired of His Job.

A delegation of Republican politicians called upon Mayor William B. Hayes of Pittsburg and sounded him as to his willingness to be a candidate again. "Not for me," was the decided reply. "I wouldn't accept this job for another three years if the salary were raised to $50,000 a year." Before he became mayor Mr. Hayes was in the lumber business and he says that that life is strenuous enough for him. He was elected mayor he is appointed a number of his friends to good positions. It seems that about nine-tenths of them have "laid down" on him his troubles have caused him to look to turn white. The mayor is going back to the lumber business just as soon as he can get out.

Gunnery in the American Navy.

A gunner on the United States battleship Kentucky, operating a five-inch gun, has hit a target 2141 feet in size, at a distance of nearly a mile, striking it in one mass. This is only one of his fourteen shots. If the squadron had been firing at an enemy there would have been no enemy in half an hour," said Rear Admiral Robert D. Evans to the press. The gunner is going back to the lumber business just as soon as he can get out.

Russians Honor the Fourth.

Gen. Nelson A. Miles says that, as an incident in all his travels impressed him more than any other, was his while he was in Siberia. "It was on the Fourth of July," said the general, "that our party chanced to be in northern Siberia. The convict life was very interesting, but little did I know that these exile knew of the holiday of our great republic. As we passed along the cells of the prisoners the bars were decorated in not a few instances with red, white and blue ribbons. They were glad to see us, and they were glad to enjoy their blessed privilege."

Making the Best of It.

"But, father, I'm quite old enough to marry," said a young girl. "You're not! You are a mere child." "Why, father, you married when you were two years younger than I am." "What if I did? I was poor and understood that I was poor. You are rich and understand nothing." "Well, father, I might as well confess. I was married yesterday!" "Married? By Jove, that's the best thing I ever knew you to do. Where's the dear girl? Bring her here at once."

WHY EYESIGHT FAILS.

INFERIOR ARTIFICIAL LIGHT FREQUENTLY THE CAUSE.

Illuminants of the Past, One and All, Have Serious Defects—Acetylene Gas, with its Clear, Unwavering, Yet Soft Flame Cannot Hurt the Eyes.

Chicago, June 30.—No one can go into a school or meet a group of children on the street without noticing how large a number of them wear spectacles. The proportion seems to increase yearly, and there are many more who ought to wear glasses. The experience of one teacher might be duplicated by the scores. She knew Alice was inattentive and she thought she was unusually stupid, she said so to the principal and sent a note to the mother, requesting that the child be helped at home if she wished her to keep up with her class. One day after a blackboard explanation, the teacher called upon the child and found that she had not seen what had been written. She was kept after school and by dint of much sympathetic questioning Miss C. found that Alice had never been able to see what was put on the board and that her head had ached so often and so hard that she frequently failed to hear what was said.

Such a condition may be caused by lack of proper food, but in our American homes it is usually due to the poor quality of the artificial light. The yellow, insufficient light of the ordinary kerosene lamp, which is a chimney, is about as bad for the eyes as can be imagined. The flickering light from a coal gas jet is but little better. The electric light, however, brilliant as it usually is, has an unsteadiness due to variations in power, and a glare peculiarly trying to the delicate nerves of sight. The comparatively dimly illumined acetylene produces as nearly perfect an artificial light as has yet been found. It gives a clear white, unwavering light, very soft and perfectly soft, and nearly like the rays of the sun that even colors appear as in daylight.

Fortunately, acetylene is very easily and cheaply produced, and the simple apparatus necessary can be purchased and installed in the home at a moderate cost, and the acetylene can be piped to convenient points in the house where a light is needed. It is lightweight and extinguished and used exactly like common city gas.

Acetylene is rapidly coming into common use in homes, churches, schools and institutions of all kinds, and it is reasonable to expect that as its use in the home increases, there will be fewer defective eyes, particularly among children. Poor eyesight and the many ills resulting therefrom will undoubtedly be much reduced by the use of this new illuminant.

RAILWAY RATE LEGISLATION.

At the biennial convention of the Order of Railway Conductors recently held at Portland, Oregon, resolutions were unanimously adopted voicing their sentiments as to the effect of proposed railway rate legislation on the 1,300,000 railroad employees, whom they in part represented. These resolutions "indorse the attitude of President Roosevelt in condemning secret rebates and other illegalities, and commend the attitude of the heads of American Railways, who, with practical unanimity, have joined with the president on this question." They then respectfully point out to Congress the "inadvisability of legislation vesting in the hands of a commission power over railway rates, now lower by far in the United States than in any other country," because such regulation would "result in litigation and confusion and, finally, tend to enforce reduction in rates, irrespective of the question of the ability of the railroads to stand the reduction, especially in view of the increased cost of their supplies and materials." They further pressed against such law being given to the present Interstate Commerce Commission because "the proposed legislation is not in harmony with our idea of American jurisprudence, inasmuch as it contemplates that a single body shall have the right to investigate, indict, try, condemn and then enforce its decisions at the cost of the carriers, pending appeal, which is manifestly inequitable."

The conductors base their demand for only such legislation if any, as would "secure and insure justice and equity and preserve equal rights to all parties concerned." It was on the low cost of transportation "is the result of the efficiency of American railway management and operation which have brought the country through constant improvement and development of territory, while at the same time recognition has been given to the value of intelligence among employees in connection with their methods, where high freight rates and lowest wages to employees obtain."

In pressing their claim against legislation adverse to their interests, they point out the fact that "the freight rates of this country average only two per cent of the cost of articles to the consumer, thus making the freight rate so insignificant a factor in the selling price that numerous standard articles are sold at the same price in all parts of the country."

Cartoonist Retires.

Sir John Tenniel, the famous cartoonist of London Press, has just passed his eighty-fifth birthday. After drawing for Punch for half a century, he hadly been a week's intermission. Sir John retired in the unobtrusive manner which is characteristic of the man, and the cartoons have no longer the familiar monogram, "J. T."

ROYAL WEDDING IN ENGLAND.

Ceremony Unites Dynasties of Sweden and Britain.

Princess Margaret, of Connaught, eldest daughter of the duke of Connaught, was married June 15 to Prince Gustavus Adolfus, eldest son of Crown Prince Gustavus of Sweden.

Princess Margaret.

All the arrangements were made under the personal direction of King Edward.

The scene in St. George's chapel was brilliant. Shortly after the guests were seated the bridegroom made his appearance, accompanied by his supporters, Princes Eugene and William of Sweden. The bridegroom was followed by the royal party, including King Edward, Queen Alexandra, Princess Victoria, the crown prince and crown princess of Sweden, the duchess of Connaught, and the prince of Wales.

The bride, on the arm of her father, was met at the entrance by the lord chamberlain, and the bridesmaids, Princess Patricia of Connaught, her sister, Princess Victoria of Battenberg, Princess Mary of Wales, and Princess Beatrice of Saxe-Coburg. The archbishop of Canterbury, assisted by the bishop of Oxford, read the service of the Church of England.

The wedding dress was a cloud of pure white Irish point lace, poised over white satin and strewn with a profusion of orange blossoms and myrtle. The corsage was cut low, and there was the regulation court train.

After the ceremony the members of the royal families returned to the castle where luncheon was served.

The bride and groom left Windsor for Chesham. They will spend the first part of the honeymoon at Salpham grange, the seat of Countess Grosvenor, afterwards proceeding to Ireland.

TALKS TO VASSAR STUDENTS.

President Taylor Makes Vigorous Attack on Evil.

In his baccalaureate sermon to Vassar students President James M. Taylor deplored the popularity of literature which militates against the marriage law, upholds divorce and even favors too free a notion of morals as one of the dangers of the age. Another subject on which he expressed himself vigorously was the action of congress in voting money for sectarian schools among the Indians. He declared that the state must not be allowed to recognize any church as such. The graduates were advised by Dr. Taylor to set themselves against such union of any kind between church and state. At the same time he maintained that education without a spiritual side and dead moral lessons, a failure and absence of religious teaching in the public schools a danger. Ethics and morals, he said, could be taught without introducing religious discussion.

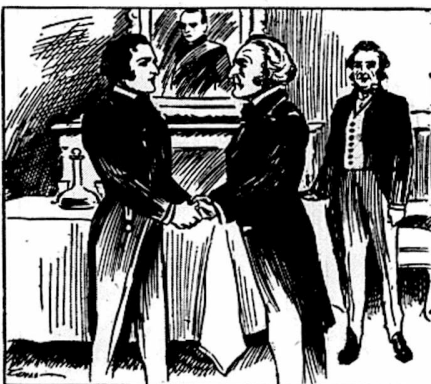

Memento of Mother-in-Law.

A question of identity yesterday in the Children's Court brought out a peculiar bit of evidence. The witness, a middle-aged man, produced from an inside pocket the silver nameplate of a coffin. The evidence was accepted as conclusive.

"But why do you carry that thing?" asked the Justice.

"Well," said the witness, "you see, she was my mother-in-law. She committed suicide. I had her cremated after her friends had put her in the coffin."

Extended both hands, which Laffite grasped cordially.

you will; if not, then I will try to take care of that, as they are your eyes, and my out pay. The one thing I demand is what I have stated already—a full pardon for my men and myself—a pardon for all offenses or alleged offenses against the laws of this state or of the United States."

"Assuming," said Claiborne, "that everything is as you say, and that your proposition is accepted, what security have I, as governor of this state, and responsible, not only to its people, but to the President, that you will fulfill your agreement?"

Jackson, with an impatient glance at Claiborne, started to speak; but he checked himself and instead answered coldly, "My personal manhood and honor. Ask any merchant of New Orleans with whom I have had dealings if ever I failed to fulfill my obligations. Ask any bank in New Orleans if my paper has ever been dishonored. No man, woman or child, white or black, who knows my name, but will tell you that I always keep my promises."

"Well answered!" And Jackson, every vestige of reserve now swept away, arose from his chair, and coming around the table, extended both hands, which Laffite grasped cordially.

Claiborne's manner underwent a marked change, although it was still somewhat formal as he said, "Capt. Laffite, I cannot do otherwise than believe you to be sincere, and to admire the motives which have led you to take this most honorable course. I am pleased to be able to recognize in you a good and loyal citizen, and my resolution against you will be revoked in the morning. Meanwhile, in token of amity between us, here is my hand, sir."

Laffite, after a moment's hesitation, took the extended hand, and bent his head with a courteous nod as that which had marked Claiborne's former manner.

He then, evidently determined not to accept the governor's attitude as a criterion for his own, said, with increased friendliness, "Capt. Laffite, I shall commend you to the President, by the next post, and furnish him with a full statement of this matter. But" stirring among the trees would have been the fresh breeze of early fall, turned by the sun to dew that drenched the grass and few fallen leaves.

Gen. La Roche was hurrying through the park, his saddle horse, in charge of a mounted negro, pawed impatiently as he stood waiting for his master.

La Roche had returned home only the day before, to brief visit, and to assure himself that all was well with his household, consisting now of his sister, Laxalle, and Rose de Casereau.

Even at this, the last hour of his stay, some of the items of news he had brought from the city were being discussed and enlarged upon.

"A curious change of affairs," remarked Madame Rieffet, "that Gen. Jackson brought. He is well, much to the Baratarians, who, only last September, were denounced by him, as well as by every one else."

The general laughed. "Well—yes, in September they were 'pirates,' and 'hellish banditti'; but in September they are privateers, and their leaders are gentlemen. Yet I can assure you that they are brave fellows and tremendous fighters, and the men needed now to help save New Orleans."

Then, while folding his napkin, the general said animatedly, "How could I have forgotten to tell you how well he was about to start them. It appears that Capt. Jean has the honor of a personal acquaintance with Napoleon."

"What?" chorused the three amazed hearers; and Madame Rieffet murmured, in an awestricken tone, "Capt. Jean knows the French emperor?"

La Roche nodded.

"But he is emperor no longer, my dear, nor was he such when Laffite knew him."

Death of Lyman Peck

Lyman Peck was born in Steuben, county, N. Y., August 31, 1827 and died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Wm. Nason at Palatine, Ill. on March 20, 1906. Mr. Peck was converted in the early days of his youth and had been, united with the Methodist Episcopal church and never lost faith in his God.

On June 20, 1850 he was married to Annand Dohell, who preceded him to the heavenly home a few weeks ago. Two daughters were born to them, Mrs. Sadie Nason and Mrs. Jennie Taylor, who with their families and many relatives and friends mourn his departure. In 1853 the deceased came west and a few years later settled in Palatine where he has since resided.

After the death of his companion and wife he seemed to lose interest. In the temporal things of life and after a brief illness passed to his reward. Mr. Peck was a hard working man and strove with energy against many adversities.

The funeral service was held at the Methodist church on Thursday afternoon Rev. W. H. Smith of Park Ridge preaching the funeral sermon, and Rev. Young the pastor, assisting. The remains were laid to rest beside his departed wife in Hillside cemetery.

Cannot Do So Now

A Chicago paper lately contained a most severe criticism of the actions of suburban justices of Cook county, and cited one instance where a justice had disposed of 39 cases in one hour giving judgment in favor of a Chicago collection agency, plaintiff. In 26 cases, and issuing immediate executions in all of them.

"That was a pretty good hours' grind but a blot in Police Magistrate Morrison's possession shows a better grid than that. Several years ago a Chicago collection agency started 49 suits before the magistrate then in office on a certain Thursday morning, making the annuities in each case returnable the following Tuesday at 3 o'clock a. m. Judgment was rendered in favor of the agency in 47 of the suits; a nonsuit was taken by the agency in one suit because the defendant was in court and ready for trial, and one suit was dismissed. Not a witness was sworn, not a word of evidence heard. The agency was the "whole thing," and the time taken up less than one hour.

There was nothing irregular in the proceedings. The law allows of just such court work but it is not every magistrate who will show such partiality.

That same agency is now giving no small amount of attention to the selection of justices in the suburban district this spring. The only chance for the agencies and loan sharks is to get hold of a justice whom they can use.

Louisa Nieder, of Bern, Kansas, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Henry Pepper, Sunday, March 19th of apoplexy, aged 64 years. Her remains were removed to Kansas Wednesday in charge of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Pepper.

Barrington Township Caucus

As is usually the case the caucus held in Barrington township last Friday last attracted a large number of voters and especially was the south-west section of the town well represented.

A combination had been formed to completely annihilate John C. Plagge, candidate for assessor and A. H. Boehmer, for supervisor, both of whom asked another term of office. John L. Meiners was brought out as a candidate against J. C. Plagge, and H. H. Williams, entered the list against A. H. Boehmer, but there was a fog loss in the combination and it failed to work.

The collectorship was the heated contention their being three candidates, Geo. Jenks, Frank Doney and Stephen Palmer. Mr. Palmer defeated both Jenks and Doney by a most satisfactory margin.

There was a sharp skirmish between Herman Douthett and Henry Brider for the office of commissioner of highways. Mr. Brider securing the nomination.

Leroy Powers was renominated for town clerk by acclamation. F. H. Frey and A. H. Fairchild for justices of the peace, John Brand and H. M. Hawley for constables.

H. H. Williams will run as independent for supervisor and Herman Douthett for commissioner of highways.

Fourth Anniversary

To mark the fourth anniversary of its organization Mayflower camp 2582, Royal Neighbors, on Monday evening received the Modern Woodmen and their wives at their hall. The invitations were generally accepted and a large gathering was present to listen to a varied program in which prominent local talent appeared.

The evening was completed with a social reception and carols. Fruits were served.

The four years' existence in the life of Mayflower camp have been marked by harmony and steady increase in membership. Promotion of social life and extension of charity work have made the lodge a source of benefit to members and the public.

Mrs. H. L. Meyer was the lucky person to whom was awarded the fancy quilt.

Will Ask a Re-election

At the solicitation of a large number of voters Charles B. Morrison, present police magistrate of the village of Barrington, has decided to again be a candidate for that office, and his name will be presented to the caucus to be held April 1st.

Last spring Mr. Morrison was elected to the office by a majority of the popular vote, defeating F. E. Lines, nominee on the so-called People's ticket and H. A. Harnden, nominee on the No License ticket, both prominent citizens of long residence in the community.

The pledge made by Mr. Morrison in that campaign—to conduct the office in the interest of the public and not as an annex to any collection agency—has been carried out, but of course, at the sacrifice of revenue, that class of patrons refusing to start actions in his court because of his pronounced opposition to their unsavory methods of handling claims.

During his incumbency of the office Mr. Morrison has been absent from the village but a majority of the popular vote, defeating F. E. Lines, nominee on the so-called People's ticket and H. A. Harnden, nominee on the No License ticket, both prominent citizens of long residence in the community.

Cuba Township Ticket

The electors of Cuba township met in caucus Saturday afternoon at the Lamey building and placed in nomination officers to be voted for at the annual township election called for Tuesday, April 1.

The primary was well attended and the work of constructing ticket very smoothly carried out.

There was no signs of a contest except for the office of collector and that of justice of the peace. As Frank Albrecht was in a candidate against Frank Hollister, failed to show the strength expected by those who were responsible for that gentleman entering the field.

The caucus was called to order by F. H. Plagge, at 2 o'clock. M. T. Lamey was chosen chairman, F. H. Plagge and C. H. Morrison secretaries, Geo. J. Hager, Fred Kirschner and Geo. W. Foreman judges.

F. H. Plagge was renominated for township clerk, Fred Kirschner for assessor, and Geo. J. Hager for highway commissioner by acclamation.

F. J. Hollister and Conrad Kraus were placed in nomination for collector. The vote resulted:

Hollister..... 21
Kraus..... 21

For justice of the peace E. W. Riley was named by acclamation.

Edson Harnden was renominated for justice of the peace and John Walsh for constable for the north end of the township. Ray Fehrutz was named for constable from the south section and F. J. Alverson for justice of the peace. Mr. Alverson defeating F. W. Waterman by a vote of 10 to 2.

M. T. Lamey, Conrad Kraus and Fred Kirschner were named a legal committee.

The General Opinion Shows Little Interest and Disposition to Re-elect Present Officials.

The village election will be held Tuesday, April 18. A caucus for the presentation and nomination of candidates will be held Saturday evening, April 1st.

The general opinion of opinion is that the present officials have given the village a good, clean administration and should be returned to carry forward village affairs for another year.

The situation does not call for opposition to a reelection of the members whose term will expire this spring; there is no issue before the voters which would be benefited in the least by making a change.

Last spring the friends of prohibition tested the strength of their sentiment in the community by placing in the field a complete ticket, made up of representative citizens. That ticket met a sweeping defeat, showing plainly that a large majority of the people were opposed to making this village a prohibition district.

It is learned from interviews with a number of citizens that it is a waste of time to endeavor to change public sentiment on the liquor license question in this village at the present time, and to remain a ticket bearing the "no license" stamp would only result in another defeat.

Therefore the indications are that but one ticket will be asking support and that ticket composed of Mills T. Lamey for president, L. H. Bennett for clerk, Herman Schewinn, Silas Robertson and Frank Gieske, or Wm. Peters, for trustees. It will be a People's ticket and one which should receive the support of all classes.

Town caucus was held at the Engine house Saturday afternoon from 2 to 5 o'clock. The Australian ballot system was used which proved very satisfactory. There was not very much excitement, the only opposition being for collector between John Dove and Volter Stone, the latter winning out and for highway commissioner district No. 2 between Geo. Baum and Wm. Clark, the former winning, 122 ballots were cast and the ticket as nominated is as follows: Town Clerk, Arthur S. Powers, Assessor, Joe E. Boom the Railroad

A rousing railroad meeting was held at Oakland hall Saturday afternoon for the purpose of soliciting subscriptions for the proposed electric line from Beeketeller to our village. About $4000 was subscribed and since then it has been increased to $6000. Mr. McMullen of Chicago was present and addressed the meeting as well as several local men, and if all will now come forward and subscribe as they should, we can secure the road. It will be a benefit to every one in the village and community surrounding within a radius of 4 to 5 miles and the benefit to be derived by every farmer will be increased by the amount of his subscription within a year of its completion and operation. If we get the road, we will have a milk bottling plant, a lumber and coal yard and many other local improvements.

Every acre of land in the community will increase in value from $10 to $15 an acre and now while this opportunity is knocking at our door, don't let it slip by. We must have the support of every property holder in the community.
