HOW A FRIEND-SHIP GREW

The Story

Whether Hand Sapollo got a more outbusiantle velcome in homes where Sapollo was an old and tried triend, or where it was a stranger, in a question. Where woman had come to rely on Sapollo for rapid, thorough cleaning in every part of the house except the leundry, they commesced without hea of time, to avail of this new princ. Grably little hands, and stained, work-worn older once, whitened, softened, and zaroothed out as if hy magic, callous spots disappeared, and complexions cleared. Children coased their stremous objections to the scrubbleg up process, because it became a

But, strange though it may seem, there were people who had not learned to prize Sapollo. To these the advertising of Hand Sapollo came as a surprise. Sapollo, a scouring soap,

Passing of the Indian.

It is a lamentable thing that the redskin should be steadily growing extinct, for of all the aboriginal races with which the white man has come into contact he is in many respects the finest and possesses some of the greatest qualities. But he remains a nomad, though he is restricted to a few reservations; he refuses to adapt himself to American civilization. In apite of the best attempts of American philanthopy his degeneration steadily continues. Too, the poor indian, is no longer the noble savage, after Rousseau's own heart, whom Fenimore Cooper delighted to idealize in his romances. He is savage without being

One of the grand dukes who is over 80 years of age has become a re-former. At that age there is scarcely any other alternative.

President Roosevelt, in his recent article in The Outlook, about Mr. R. A. Robinson's poems, ineidentally metitioned three or four American poets, whose work, like that of Mr. Robinson, in Mr. Roosevelt's judgment, belong to the first rank. Two of those names were Clinton Scollard and Madison Caweir; and by an odd colficidence The Outlook's Magazine number for October contains poems by both of these authors.

S. Coison, a well-known resident of this place, and he does not hesitate to say that cure is Dodd's Kidney Pills. The reason is that he he does not he does not he does not say that cured. Speaking of the matter he says:

"I am only too happy to say Dodd's Kidney Pills have done me lots of good. I had awful pains in my hip so I could hardly walk. Dodd's Kidney Pills stopped it entirely. I think they are a grand medicine."

All Sciattic and Rheumatic pains are caused by Uric Acid in the blood. See the seed of the proper seed of the proper seed of the proper seed the seed of the Uric Acid out of the blood. With the cause removed there can be no Rheumatism or Sciattica.
