friends decided to help them remember the occasion by giving them a surprise part.

The party gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Gleske, and when the time seemed propitious they stole a march on the house. Mrs. Plagge received the brunt of the onslaught, Mr. Plagge having been to Chleago that day, and being a very busy man in the ousiness and official world, as well as being often asked for advice in private adiaties, he found a fot of business awaiting, him at his store. It was late when he finally started for home, eating an apple. He intended to get shawed on his way home, but feeling somewhat tired from his day's labor decided to postpone the ordeal until the next day.

He was very much surprised when he neared his home to see the profile of his brother-in law at a window. He had met the gentleman at the depot in Chleago on his arrival that day and the reliative seemed very anxious to have. I. C. entryer his compliments to heware of the New Law.

Beware of the New Law.

Few merehants are aware of a new law which went into effect July1, One merchant in a near by city is already grieving on account of ignorance of the law to the extent of a he ary fine that was imposed on him. Heretofore it has been customary to scratch the stamp of a cigar box and if he so desired give it awar or do with it as he should see fit solong as the stamp was destroyed. But it is no longer the case. The merchant or dealer must destroy the lost immediately after the cigars are gone. He must at once remove the box from the case and break it up. The law may sound queer, but be sure that it is heeded or very will get caught before you know it.
