Conducted a Village Meat Market.

He was a man of push. He played marbles for keeps when a boy and cheated all his playmates out of their money. He swam a blades knife, sight unseen, for a boy blades, sold for fifty cents, bought a pound of sugar and made a barrel of lomoade, which he sold for $5 one circus day.

He started in business and sold meat for choice cuts and made a fortune. When he got $1000 he organized with $5000 capital and sold the stock at par. When the company busted it was found that he had sold out some time before. When he died he was a millionaire and left it all here. It is warm where he is now.

We are informed that the demand for graduates of the Metropolitan business college to fill business positions far exceeds the number which the college can turn out. Quite a number of young people who want to get well started in business would do well to attend the college and learn stenography, typewriting and bookkeeping. BUMPER CROPS

Wonderful Yield of Small Grains Is Reported from All Districts.

The calamity howler is not in evidence this year and pessimists have no place in the population of this section of earth, according to reports as to the yield of farm products. Stories told by individuals and newspapers are surprising and sound like tales from a fisherman's notebook.

In a review of the crop situation published by the metropolitan press, we find Lake county near the top of the column in the list of counties in the northern tier showing a greatly increased product over 1904.

The Lake County Independent tells of oats on the Carroll farm near Bond which measured 5 feet 8 inches, and rye on the Campbell farm in Garrettsville which stood 6 feet 9 inches in its stocking feet. In Warren township corn is very far advanced and hardening well. Right down here in little Cuba there is corn that is 10 to 12 feet in height and ripe. The ears are necessary to use in getting up to the ears which are bending low and of great size. You don't have to go to Dakota to see farming land. All a man has to do is to take a good look about him as he travels about this region. But if he goes wandering in his neighbor's cornfield he'd better tie a string to the fence and hang on the other end of the string. If he doesn't know enough to follow a row he will get lost.

The only complaint heard from the farmers was that the heavy rains of last week interfered with threshing and help is scarce.

Death of Alonzo D. Hutchinson.

Alonzo D. Hutchinson, well known to many of our people, one who spent his childhood days here, passed away at his home in Chicago, Monday, Aug. 21.

Mr. Hutchinson was the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Hutchinson, and was born in Barrington, March 30, 1829. When 16 years of age he secured employment in Chicago and has since that time made his home there. He married Miss Lizzie Way, of Chicago, December 21, 1852, who survives him. Besides the widow his mother, three brothers and five sisters are left to mourn his departure.

The deceased was a member of a Chicago Test Knights of the Macabees of the World.

The remains were brought here for burial Wednesday afternoon, services being held at the home of his mother, Rev. Lapham of the M. E. church officiating.

Interment in Evergreen cemetery.

Just What's the Matter.

An attempt was made to get up a union picnic of several societies here not long ago, and the plan failed. It is asked, "What's the matter?" To be candid in replying we will say that there is too much jealousy and too much gossip among factions in this village. Yes, it is so in all small villages, but not so prevalent. When will people cease to delight in gossip? It retards the prosperity of the village; it is a humming bird with eagle wings and a voice like a fog horn. It can be heard from Dan to Reasbala, and has caused more trouble than all the bedbugs, fleas, mosquitoes, chinch bugs, yellow fever, smallpox, gout and rheumatism, bean and split marrow that this great land of the free, but owned by the best of the best, has known or will know when Gabriel and Dowie give orders to close business and stand up to be counted. In other words, as a western editor says, "It has got war and hell backed up in the corner howling for ice water."

If you can't say anything good of your neighbor don't say anything.

Some amusing stories are told of the new use for the telephone. An operator in one of the towns near Chicago was addressed by a young lady who had apparently struck upon a happy thought. "Oh, central," she said, "Call me tomorrow morning about twenty minutes before that 6:40 train goes to Chicago. I have just got to catch that train. And say, I wish you would telephone down to the depot before calling me and ask if the train is late. If it is behind time call me accordingly. This number is seven-eleven. Thank you. Good-bye."

It is equipped with an 8 horse power gasoline engine, which gives it motive power to spin along the surface of the river at a rate yet to be equaled by anything he has seen along the noble Fox.—Nunda Herald.

ISLAND OVER WHICH PEACE CONFEREES CANNOT AGREE

close to the province of Primorsk, Manchuria. It is 670 miles long and its width varies from 20 to 150 miles. The narrow Straits of Tartary separate it from the mainland and the Peninsula of Kamchaka guards it on the east. It is about half as large as Illinois.

The climate is cold and dense banks of clouds generally shut out the rays of the sun. The east coast is beset by ice floes in summer. The greater part of the island is covered with forests which abound in fur-bearing animals. Much of the timber is valuable. The rivers are rich in fish, especially a species of salmon.

The development of the island's natural resources is of comparatively recent date. Attempts have been made at agriculture, and several thousands of Russian convicts have been transported there to colonize. The quality of the soil is unsuitable for farming, and most of the convicts are employed in the coal mines.

The Russians established a post on the island at Aniva Bay in 1853, and in 1875 they began to form permanent settlements. It was ceded to Russia by Japan in 1875.

The principal Russian settlements are at Ussuriysk, on the west coast, Malyokovsk on the upper Tym, and Korsakov and Muraviev on Aniva Bay.

INVENTORS AND THEIR WORK.

Five Remarkable Discoveries Given to the World.

Among remarkable recent inventions are the pneumo-tilt, the topodist, the telemeter, the telephone-ears and the thermophile, which are described in the Strand Magazine. The pneumo-tilt is an automobile especially designed for use on ice, but which can just as easily be used on land. It is moved by a propeller wheel run by a 2-horse-power electric motor, the propeller turning in the air and moving the carriage at a speed of twenty miles an hour. The topodist is a combination of a pedometer and a telescope, by means of which any person can make a drawing in correct perspective of any scene before him, even if he knows nothing whatever of drawing. By means of the telemeter the exact distance of faraway objects can be measured and recorded. The "telephone-ears" is an apparatus by which a ship is automatically warned of submarine dangers. By the aid of the thermophile it is possible to furnish heat by means of a fine electric wire which can be woven into rugs, blankets or cushions, and all that is required is a very small electric battery. The inventor claims for it that it will do away with the necessity of ever having fires in even the coldest of weather.

The inventor claims for it that it will do away with the necessity of ever having fires in even the coldest of weather.

Changes on the Moon.

The old idea that changes are taking place on the moon has been carefully investigated by M. Pulseux, a French astronomer. Going over all records, from the earliest observations to the latest, he concludes that the reality of the supposed changes has not been proved, and that the varying sensateness of the retina for faint objects is sufficient to account for differences seen, while different conditions of exposure might explain all appearances in the photograph.

A HISTORIC VOLUME.

The Bible Used by the United States Supreme Court.

Kept securely under lock and key in the supreme court room at Washington there is a small Oxford Bible around which cluster many notable and historic incidents. It was printed at Oxford in 1769, first came into the court's service in 1808 and is believed to be one of the 20,000 imported by congress a few years before. During its court career this volume has been called into service every day on which the august tribunal has held a material force.

The great constitutional lawyers of the formative period of our government as a prerequisite of their admission to practice before this learned body kissed its material face. Besides these great legal lights every associate and chief justice, with the exception of Chief Justice Chase, who had a Bible of his own, and every lawyer except Daniel Webster, sworn to practice before the supreme court bar has taken his oath of allegiance on this little book. It is a tradition of the court that when Daniel Webster came before this high tribunal in his first argument in the defense of the charter rights of his alma mater, Dartmouth college, against the legislative attacks of New Hampshire, by some strange inadvertence the oath was not administered. The tradition goes further, intimating that the judges were so impressed by the eloquence of his appeal, which stands out today as a classic in legal lore, that they either forgot or dared not mention his dereliction.

It is no wonder that this little Bible is so carefully preserved, endeared as it is with the memories of America's greatest statesmen and jurists. When a president is to be sworn the clerk of the court usually purchases a new Bible, and after the certificate has been affixed he presents it to the first lady of the land.—Leslie's Weekly.

THE CITY OF VENICE.

Its Peculiar Site and How It Came to Be Selected.

The city of Venice is approached from behind by a railroad constructed over a stretch of swamp. Out beyond this swamp was another swamp which was a little higher. It had been out of the water longer and had caught enough seaweed, sand, shells and sediment to be fit for birds to nest on. There was one island called the Rialto, which was really quite secure, and around this one there were said to be about seventy-five other islands, which today are occupied by the city of Venice. Some of these were originally not islands at all. They were mere high places in a great bog, which were won by the use of galleys and by artificial means were converted into more or less fit places for the erection of buildings.

Without consulting history, one could almost guess that such an unfavorable spot as this was not selected as the site for a city out of free choice, and indeed it was not. Venice was started during the fifth and sixth centuries. The inhabitants of Padua and a few more north Roman cities, chased out by the Huns, the Goths and other tribes of barbarians, took refuge here in an Adriatic lagoon. The savages of Padua had no boats, so that the settlement was very safe, and, leading an independent life, prospered here by itself during the middle ages at a surprising rate.

It was a monstrous waste of space, the city secure from the sea. Ship loads of stone were brought from other coasts. Dams and canals were built at great cost, and the residents finally got enough of dry land about them to feel moderately safe.

Electricity in Plants.

Electric currents in plants are due, says Kunkel, to the movements of water in the tissues, and not to differences of potential, existing independently. It was considered probable that vegetable electricity was due to biological processes, especially respiration and the consequent chemical changes. In experimenting with leaves and flowers Kunkel found on a large mushroom in an atmosphere of carbon dioxide that the electric current was diminished, but never quite suppressed, owing probably to intramolecular respiration. The electric current revives on air being readmitted.

When Eggs Were Eggs.

Paddy Doolan went into a shop one day to buy eggs. "What are eggs today?" "Eggs are eggs today, Paddy," replied the shopman, looking quite triumphantly at two or three young lady customers who happened to be in the shop. "Faith, I'm glad to hear you say so," replied Paddy. "For the last ones I got here were chickens."

Would Have to Be Crazy.

"Did you examine the house, sir?" asked the real estate agent. "Yes," replied Kaestick, returning the keys. "Well, we'll make the rent low to the right party." "My dear sir, there couldn't be such a thing. No party who was right would rent that house," Philadelphia Ledger.

"No Cadger."

"To cadger" is "to sponge on or live upon another." The "cadger" may assume to be more respectable than the plain beggar, but the difference between them is barely perceptible.—Chicago Tribune.

THE "DIVINE STORM."

Pearl's Typhoon That Saved Japan From a Chinese Invasion.

About 600 years ago Japan was threatened with an invasion from continental Asia, much as England was threatened with invasion by the Spaniards. The beaten Spanish armada was dispersed by a storm, and Japan was delivered in much the same way, but without an engagement. A Japanese writer, Okakura Yoshisaburo, says: "The mighty Kublai, grandson of the great Genghis Khan, hangry with his restless army, whose devastating intrepidity taught even Europe to tremble at the mention of his name, dispatched an embassy to the Japanese court to demand the submission of the country. The message was indignantly dismissed. Enraged at this, Kublai equipped a large number of vessels with the choicest soldiers China could furnish. The invading force was successful at first and committed massacres in Iki and Tsushima, islands lying between Korea and Japan. The position was menacing. Even the steel nerves of the traitor admiral felt that strange thrill a patriot knows. Shinto priests and Buddhist monks were busy at their prayers.

"A tremendous Chinese fleet gathered in the boisterous bay of Genji in the summer of 1281. At last the evening came with the ominous glow on the horizon that forebodes an approaching storm. It was the plan of the conquering army victoriously to land the next morning on the holy soil of Kyushu. But during this critical night a fearful typhoon arose, breaking the jet black sky with its tremendous roar of thunder and bathing the glittering armor of our soldiers gathered on the coast line in white flashes of dazzling light. The very heaven and earth shook before the mighty anger of nature.

"Dawn of the next morning saw the whole fleet of the proud Yuan that had darkened the water for miles swept completely away into the bottomless sea of Genji, to the great relief of the horror-stricken populace and to the unspeakable disappointment of our determined soldiers. Out of the 100,000 warriors who manned the invading ships only three are recorded to have survived the destruction to tell the dismal tale to their crestfallen great kinsmen."

Knots and Miles.

One of the things which it seems difficult for the public mind to grasp is that there is a decided difference between the knot and the mile. It is certainly almost time to have it thoroughly understood that the two are not the same thing. It seems easy enough to remember that a mile is only about 87 per cent of a knot, the latter being approximately 6082 feet in length, while the statute mile measures 5280 feet. Three and one-half miles are equal, within a small fraction, to three knots. The result of this difference, of course, is that the speed of a vessel in miles per hour is always considerably larger than when stated in knots, and the confusion of the terms sometimes gives rise to rather remarkable claims of speed performance. When a twenty knot ship, for example, is lightly mentioned, it should be remembered that this really means a little over twenty-three miles. Similarly with higher figures, which are often glibly enough stated, the difference between the terms is worth bearing in mind. It will help to guard against the forming of ridiculous estimates of a vessel's capabilities.

Cow Pony Ahead of Hilarious.

The cow pony is a distinguished lineage. Its ancestral home was among the Moors of Barbary, and its pedigree reads back to the "Godolphin Arabian," innocently associated with the Spanish invasion of Mexico. His race was already established on the plains of the southwest when the Mayflower landed. In the centuries that followed he conformed his nature to the requirements of the plains until he fitted them as the camel fits the desert, and became so perfectly adapted to the work of the cattle ranch as to make it doubtful whether the needs of the cowboy evolved the cow pony or the capacities of the cow produced the cowboy.—Country Life in America.

Is Life Worth Living?

Those people who say that life is not worth living find it so because they do not go to work to make it worth living. Why does nature over-power them? Is it so much harder for them than for others to see sin and suffering? What right have they to add their weight to the world's burden? Is it a sign of intellect to be cowardly? And do these people not dream that the spiritual power which

THE MALE BASS.

How He Looks After the Eggs and the Little Fry.

"The female fish has no maternal instincts whatever," said the superintendent of the state fish hatcheries. "In fact, the fish is the most unhuman creature in existence—that is, of the aquatic which have any degree of intelligence at all.

"Perhaps it is well that it is so, for if the parent fish took care of their young as other creatures do the waters of the earth would be filled with them in a very short time. Under natural conditions not one egg in a million ever becomes a fish a year old. As an example, I have seen female bass take care of their young by swimming up to the spawning places and spawn their eggs and then turn around and deliberately eat them.

"For the past few years I have been much interested in experimenting with bass and studying their ways. Here the male parent has some maternal instincts apparently. He builds the nest for the female, and he guards it with a gravel bottom protected from the strong current, but with plenty of fresh water, and then he guards the female into it. The eggs are spawned by the female, who swims away and leaves them to their fate. The male fertilizes the eggs and then for a few days watches over them, turning them occasionally to insure a circulation of fresh water and keeping off other fish who would devour the eggs. The male fish have been known to follow the little fry for several days, and in protecting them they were able to care for themselves.

"I have seen a school of, say, 1,500 bass fry devoured in five minutes by a few sun bass or perch minnows. Under the case of the fish hatcheries from 50 to 95 per cent of the eggs become fish fry. How many of the fry live to be a year old or so after they are planted in the streams it is very hard to determine. It depends so greatly upon conditions that no reliable estimates can be made."—Milwaukee Wisconsin.

THE CORK TREE.

Growth, Stripping and Preparation of the Bark.

The methods in vogue in barking and harvesting the cork in Spain and Portugal are pretty much the same. The barking operation is affected when the tree has acquired sufficient strength to withstand the rough handling it receives during this operation, which takes place when it has attained the fifteenth year of its growth. After the first stripping the tree is left in this juvenile state to regenerate, subsequent stripplings being effected at intervals of not less than three years, and under this process the tree will continue to thrive and bear for upward of 150 years. If the bark is not removed artificially, it will on maturity split and exfoliate itself. This is caused by the fresh growth of bark forming underneath.

The cork of the first barking is termed corko borrao—borrao, or virgin cork. The cork of the second stripping is called pebo, or secondary cork. The work of removing the bark from the tree is performed in summer by men, who are paid at the rate of 2s. 6d. a day. The instruments used for the work are an ax, a lever and a hand saw for the cutting of universal incisions. The first process is through which the bark passes after stripping is that of boiling. This is sometimes done in the woods, but more frequently in the cork factory, in large, specially constructed caldrons, in which the bark is left to boil for upward of an hour. This swelling process increases the thickness and elasticity of the cork and at the same time the tannin and other feculent substances generally existing in the bark are desiccated.—London Quaker.

Honey in Madagascarr. Among the observances of the fan-dromas, or New Year's festival, in Madagascarr is the eating of mingled rice and honey by the queen and her guests. In the same country honey is placed in the sacred water of sprinkling used at the blessing of small children. Ancient religious ceremonies of the heathen frequently employed honey, but it was forbidden as a sacrifice in the Jewish ritual. With milk or water it was presented by the Greeks as a libation to the dead. A honey cake was the monthly food of the fabled serpent guardian of the acropolis of Athens. Pervian aborigines offered honey to the sun.

Highways in 1840. A writer to the New York Mirror of 1840, in the course of a rhapsody on the railway, says: "Dueling and changing horses and separate rooms are at an end, our light literature must now become worn with steam, our incidents must arise from blizzards and love be made over broken legs, while here the novelist will have to record the falling in of a tunnel, the only chance left for a touch of the sublime." Trains then proceeded under wonderfully good conditions occasionally at the awe inspiring speed of thirty-five miles an hour as a maximum.

A farm automobile has been brought out in Scotland. It is adaptable to plowing, sowing, cultivating and reaping and when not thus in use can be easily converted into a stationary power for all kinds of barn work. The machine costs about $1,500 and does its work at one-half the cost of horse power.

There has been a big effort made, which fortunately has failed, to get the people wild over the growing of ginseng, in some such way as they went over the Belgian hare a few years ago. Even now the papers publish stories of the marvelous profits of growing ginseng, but it should not be forgotten that if any such profits have been made they have been made by selling roots and seeds to enthusiasts in this country and not by the selling of the roots to the Chinese, the only people who have any use for this plant.

The most successful dairyman of the west is H. D. Griswold of Wisconsin. He has a farm of fifty acres, keeps twenty-eight Guernsey cows and runs a winter and a summer舍. The cows averaged 451 pounds of butter per head and brought him in $66 per head. He bought less than $250 worth of outside food for these cows, which his hogs, potatoes and calves more than met, so that he practically kept these twenty-eight cows the year round on fifty acres of land. He has given the dairymen of the country a remarkable illustration of intensive agriculture and up to date dairying.

DRY FARMING.

"Dry farming" is a method of working the soil which is being applied with much success in the semiarid regions of Wyoming and Colorado. It is perhaps one of the most significant and far reaching things connected with agriculture at the present time. There are millions of acres of fertile land in the regions referred to which are not irrigable either for want of a water supply or because the topography of the country will not admit of it. This new method is an outgrowth of what is known as the Campbell system. The plan is to plow the soil very deep in the fall or late summer, making it a receptive and retentive bed for what small amount of moisture falls, giving a light surface cultivation following each rain to prevent evaporation. As the spring crop is sown or planted as, clover, etc., followed by surface cultivation of such crop to as great a degree as possible. The results are really remarkable, as much as thirty-five bushels of the finest wheat in the world being secured from land which was not long ago dedicated to the prairie dog and such scant grass growth that each "critter" was given twenty-five acres to browse. It is found that the best results are obtained when the land is cropped only every other year, the latter being devoted to such treatment of the soil, as indicated above, as will store up the largest amount of moisture possible. It looks as though the great American desert was to be reclaimed after all.

WHY DOES HE WANT TO MAKE MORE MONEY?

We do not know. It would seem as though he had enough—far more than he can possibly use or enjoy—but he is just as fierce and eager to rake in some more dollars as though he had a mortgage coming due on his home and not enough money to pay it. He can't wear any more or better clothes; he can't eat any more or better food; more money will not give him any better reputation in his community than he now has—he has come to the point where money can do nothing at all for him save to gratify his lust for it and gratify that brutal sense of power over others which money gives. He might, of course, want more for the sake of using it for the benefit of other people, but he long since got himself divorced from any such foolish notions and now wants more just because the getting of it has become as much of a disease with him as a fever or a consumption would be, and some day there will be a funeral, some probate proceedings, an obituary notice, and he will be forgotten just as so many of his kind have been before. You know him?

NO RACE MIXTURE AMONG BIRDS.

We are asked how many of our birds raise more than one brood of young in a season. The English sparrow, the most prolific of any of our common birds, will begin nesting in March and keep it up until July and sometimes even later. It is safe to say that they will hatch from two to four broods in a season. The quail will sometimes hatch two broods in a season, and many other birds, if they have their nests broken up or young destroyed, will incubate the second time; but, as a general rule, all our birds, with the exceptions noted, raise but one brood of young in a year. This is a wise provision of nature; otherwise birds would easily become one of the greatest plagues with which the farmer and fruit grower would have to contend.

REVERSION.

The different breeds of domestic animals which are generally known under the name of thoroughbreds are the result of many years' work, of careful selection and breeding to a type often very far removed from that of the original ancestry—are, in a way, purely artificial breeds and can only be maintained in their excellence by continued careful breeding and infusion of the best strains of like blood. Left alone, the law of reversion to original types soon gets in its work, and a few generations take them back to the original scrub type. This applies not only to domestic animals, but to poultry and to quite an extent to grains and fruits. The best of a type is hard to create and still harder to maintain.

THE FARMER'S FORT.

The farmer has always and ever three things to contend with—weeds, insects and the freakishness of climate. Weeds, like original sin, are sure to crop out on his land and usurp its fertility if not fought and subdued. The plague of insect life lies in wait in some form or other for every crop which he may plant, while June and early September frosts, floods and droughts, cyclones and hailstorms, too much or too little heat, make up a combination which he is utterly powerless to control or even evade.

FINE FARMS IN CANADA.

It may interest you to get a map and find the Peace river country in northwestern Canada, latitude 56, and learn that this is a fine farming country, wheat, oats and barley growing to perfection and only six weeks during the winter in which it is necessary to feed stock. The extreme northern latitude is offset by the influence of the Japan current of the Pacific and the chinook winds.

WORK.

The work which presents no difficulties to be overcome soon grows uninteresting.

There are some workers so anxious to catch time by the forelock that they almost tear the forelock off.

If it is true that good work implies that the workman knows himself it is equally true that the workman shows that he has forgotten himself.

There is only one right way to work, and it is neither in doing things before they are started nor in doing them all over again after they are finished.

The world is altogether too restricted in its use of the word "art." Work of any kind done superlatively well is art—dusting pictures as well as painting them.

A good worker is pretty much like a horse, after all. When it's uphill going don't worry him; when it's downhill going don't hurry him; and be sure to take good care of him once he's in the barn—Success.

A Business Talk.

"Miss de Simpson," said the young secretary of a station, "I have opened negotiations with your father upon the subject of—er—coming to see you often with a view ultimately to forming an alliance, and he has responded favorably. May I ask if you will ratify the arrangement as a modus vivendi?"

"Mr. von Harris," answered the daughter of the eminent diplomat, "may you think it would have been more graceful recognition of my administrative ability if you had asked me first?"—Chicago Tribune.

May-houses.

May-houses are invariably built on posts, so as to raise the floor from four to six feet above the ground. The floor is composed of bamboo, with interstices between slats, the earth beneath becoming the receptacle of the drainage of the establishment. The universal plan of the well to do natives is to build the house in two divisions, the front one for receiving visitors and lounging generally, while the rear portion is reserved for the women and children.

Elephant Surgery.

A remarkable instance of the sagacity of a female elephant which had lost her young one in a pit trap has recently been related. The mother made strenuous attempts to rescue her offspring by throwing quantities of earth and branches of trees into the pit, but all her efforts were in vain, as the hunters arrived before the pit was sufficiently filled to allow the young one to clamber out.

The OWL Country: or, FIGHTING for a MILLION

"We can run no chances, you know, Doc," laughed Pearson, indignantly, then as if in apology for his act, "the sides, it will be to your own interest in case the hunt was discovered. If you do not know where it is, you at least will not be held responsible for any harm that may come through the discovery, see?"

"We will kill traitors!" said the matter-of-fact Sharkey, complacently.

"It may save your life," said Pearson, as he satisfied himself that the doctor was completely blinded. But he took no pains to insure the doctor's comfort, for he placed a pair of handcuffs upon his wrists. "I am obliged to do this," he said, as he changed places with the boy and sat upon the seat with Schiller, driving the team, "so the boys won't think me unkind of the duty I owe them in protecting them from possible danger from treachery."

The doctor sat in silence for quite a time, meditating upon the strangeness of his adventure. On and on, from the distance, could be heard the baying of dogs, so that the doctor knew he was being driven past farm houses now and then. But they met no one. At last the team came to a halt and the doctor was assisted to alight.

The trio left the roadway and the doctor heard the team drive off. Pearson walked arm in arm with Schiller, guiding his footsteps, so that the doctor did not fall into any of the numerous ruts or bark his shins against any of the snags in the underbrush. Sharkey followed on behind, carrying the doctor's case of instruments.

Again Doctor Schiller broke the silence: "What kind of a place are you taking me to?" he asked.

"This time Pearson descended to keep up the conversation. "Did you ever hear of the Jonesboro Bank robbery?" he asked.

Pearson walked arm in arm with Schiller.

"Yes! You mean the time when President Jones was killed by about twenty mounted desperadoes while attempting to protect the bank's property?"

The same. Well, we are going right to the cave in which the desperadoes took refuge when pursued by the citizens."

"So?" asked the doctor in surprise.

"Yes, I don't mind telling the doctor Schiller, that we are only a foraging party for a colony of convicts—it is a hard term to call a company of men—convicts, but that is what we are! We have formed a colony, built a city, protected ourselves against capture, and mean to live in peace—if we can. But, Doctor, I don't think you will find us such a lot of men after all. I don't know whether you are in sympathy with crime or not, though you once did commit a criminal offense. Even your class will ever realize what a life such men as I have led in infancy, youth and manhood, and the need of protection from ourselves and the world."

"It must be an interesting community," said the doctor.

"So it is. You would hardly believe that we compel one another of the motley group of citizens to live upright and honest lives, would you. Composed as it is of all the different shades and grades of criminal outcasts."

"Hardly," was the incredulous answer.

"Such is the case, however," replied Pearson, enthusiastically. "We respect one another's rights; carry on business honestly; support schools, and while our colony, as you can well imagine, is not founded on a religious basis, we recognize something of the sort—honorable marriage, or duty to our neighbor. Barring a few necessary raids, such as we are out upon now, we live very ordinary lives."

"You are not all hardened then; you cannot be!"

"We are not all criminals, of course not. But most of us have done something more or other to merit punishment from the government. There are many like you, who have paid the penalty of their sins, and only associate with us because they cannot bear to parade themselves before the world as having fallen once. Being can depend upon me. To show you that I am sincere, I will do all in my power to do for you in any undertaking you may engage in. To show the people whom I come in contact with that I will do right by them; if human hands can save your comrades I will put him on his feet again!"

"We will soon be at the rendezvous and cap then be convinced of the sincerity of your resolve," said Pearson.

They walked on in silence the balance of the journey. At last the party came upon a little clearing. By aid of the moon, which was shining now, a man's form shown up in the distance. "Who comes there?"

"Citizens, friend sentinel, who have with them a doctor," was Pearson's reply, and at the same time he made a mystic sign with his fingers.

The trio traveled a short distance further and were again halted. Again they passed a sentinel and at last stopped before the door of a dugout, situated in a ravine.

The door stood partly ajar, through which came the glimmer of a light created by the burn of a pipe kneeling suspended from the ceiling of the room which was about eight feet square. A sentinel, armed to the teeth, guarded the door, but upon receiving the password, allowed the party to pass. Hewed logs at the rear of the room formed a "blind door," which led into another room twenty feet long and ten feet wide, along one side of which bunks were arranged after the fashion of berths on a steamboat, and from the number of these at least thirty persons were found sleeping in the accommodations in the abode. In one corner of the room, on a lower berth lay the wounded man.

Up to this point the doctor had not been relieved of the bandage from his eyes. This was now taken off. The room was dimly lighted by a candle stuck in the neck of a bottle. The doctor first rubbed his eyes, then his wrists, while he accustomed himself to his surroundings. A groan from the direction of the corner berth made him look toward it. There were two villainous looking men sitting at the side of the bunk, holding the hands of a wounded man.

"A basin of warm water," said Schiller to Pearson. "Hand me my instrument case," he said to Sharkey. With one hand on the wounded man's wrist he was counting the number of heartbeats to the minute. This being done, the doctor opened his case and laid out a package of clean bandages and selected several instruments to have them handy. After the water arrived he bathed the hurt with a sponge, and examined the wound made by the bullet.

"We will administer a little chloroform," said the doctor, as he saturated his handkerchief with the fluid taken from his case.

When the man was thoroughly under the influence of the drug, he was lifted upon the table. The doctor then began probing for the bullet and succeeded in locating it almost immediately. It was but the work of a moment to remove it, and to thoroughly cleanse the wound with a preparation taken from his case. The flow of blood was stopped as well as possible, and the wound bled up. The patient was placed upon the bunk again, before the chloroform was taken from him.

BEATEN AT HIS OWN GAME.

Sure Thing Gambler for Once Gets the Worst of It.

"There was a sure thing gambler down in Mississippi named Gamble—good name by the way," said Joe Sharpe Williams. "He never made a bet unless he was sure he would win. He was out at a country fair, staying at a hotel. One morning a man who was in the sporting line himself got up early and looked out of the window. He saw Gamble carefully measuring with a tape line the hitching post in front of the hotel. He kept on something was up, and when Gamble went out to the fair he went out and measured the hitching post himself. Then he took a sledge hammer and drove the post into the ground an inch and a half."

"That night, after supper, while they were sitting on the porch porch, Gamble started the conversation around to the difficulty of judging distances and heights."

"Now," he said, "there's that hitching post out yonder. I'll bet a hundred dollars I can make his height as near as my body here."

"How high would you reckon it is?" said the sledge hammer artist, who had been listening to the conversation, had put up the hundred with Gamble.

"Oh," said Gamble, "I'll take it at 30 inches."

"Oh, no," replied the other man. "You are wrong. I'll bet it is less than 29."

"They measured and it was 25 1/2," Gamble hadn't smiled since that day."

BEST STUDY IN HEREDITY.

Among Royal Families Investigators Find Problems.

In an interesting paper read to the Parisian Academy of Medicine, Dr. Galippe, well known for his seal in bringing the light of science to bear on historical problems, points out that it is often among royal families that heredity, in its scientific sense, may be best studied. Respecting royal houses there exists a wealth of information extending over many generations, the record of writers being supplemented by all the work of painters, engravers, medallists, etc., which extremely valuable is examined for instance, such a question as the transmission of facial characteristics.

Among royal houses transmission of this kind is most conspicuous in the Hapsburg family, to such a degree that the children of Austrian archdukes invariably resemble their fathers, no matter what marriage the latter may have contracted. Well known examples of the kind have been the king of Rome, Napoleon's son by Marie Louise of Austria, and the present king of Spain, the son of a Bourbon father and a Hapsburg mother.

As another instance of the inevitable prepotency of Hapsburg heredity, Dr. Galippe mentions Marie Antoinette's children, who resembled her rather than their father; and he lays stress on the point that the portraits of the little dauphin who perished during the revolution show that if he had reached manhood he would have been a genuine Hapsburg in appearance. That was overlooked by the various impostors who afterward claimed to be the missing dauphin, and also by those who believed them in some cases, notably that of Napoleon III. The claimant's looks suggested the Bourbon type—a circumstance which was thought to be in his favor.

According to M. Galippe, it was really a further proof to be added to all the others that he was practicing imposture—Westminster Gazette.

FORMER CHORUS GIRL RICH.

Succeeds to Immense Fortune Through Death of Husband.

By the death of her husband, Alan W. Wood, a Pittsburgh millionaire steel magnate, Mrs. Wood, who formerly was Goldie Lillian Moor, a chorus girl of the Weber-Felds company, is now a widow with a fortune of $5,000,000. Mr. Wood, who was 56 years old, died in New York last week. He married Miss Moor a year ago last March, after the marriage was kept a secret for nearly a year.

THE GIRL COLLEGE STUDENT.

Higher Education Isn't Reducing National Wealth of Girlhood.

In a word, says Prof. Herbert E. Mills of Vassar, according to the New York Tribune, speaking of the girl college student, "she is generally a fairly healthy and pretty much of a normal interest in school affairs, in social affairs, in domestic matters, and in tending toward marital engagement at about the same rate as those of the normal class who are not in school or college."

Tending to confirm the statement of Prof. Mills there are the Vassar records in outdoor athletics and in "endured" statistics of the class or of these are wholesome indications. There is remembered too the naive confession of a Wellesley junior letter to her mother, "I'm a little bit like other girls even if we do go to college."

The young woman student composed chiefly of eye-glances, a high forehead and a pair of eyes, which are reliable was invented for the funny man's column. She has been accepted as a reality by many excellent and serious people who do not know what they are funniest when they worry."

Prof. Mills punctures the joke, he spots no smiles for social philosophers. The higher education is not reducing the national wealth of normal girlhood. Girls who read their Homer in the original are still girls.

Failures About Men.

It is quite a mistake to suppose that men go about tramping, rough-shod, on women's hearts. If that were so, how would you account for the fact that women are so easily able to manage men? How is it done? Why, by making an appeal to the man's sense of chivalry, to his tenderness, to his love of justice. There is not one man in fifty who can stick to his point when a woman looks at him with round, appealing eyes.—Kathleen Howard, in The World and His Wife.

LOST 72 POUNDS.

Was Fast Drifting Into the Fatal Snare of Kidney Sickness.

Dr. Melvin M. Page, Page Optical Co., Erie, Pa., writes:

"Taking too many food drinks in New York in 1895 sent me home with a terrible attack of kidney trouble. I had acute constipation, sharp pains in the back, headaches and attacks of dizziness. My eyes gave out, and with the languor and sleeplessness of the disease upon me I wasted from 134 to 122 pounds. At the time I started using Doan's Kidney Pills an abscess was forming on my right kidney. The trouble was quickly checked, however, and the treatment helped me, so that I have been well since 1894 and weigh 155 pounds."

While the wandering hobo or tramp is said to guide his footsteps by the rural telephone wires, keeping a full well that between large towns or cities the poles mark the most direct course, yet it is claimed that Willies are not particularly partial to those districts within a town where there are numerous wires. In his begging and bulldozing operations he knows the busy housewife has instant connection with the police station. For this reason he is somewhat partial to districts or houses where there are no wires leading to the street poles. It is reported that in the vicinity of Hammond, Ind., tramps are using the sign language to mark houses where the housewife is liable to speak to the chief of police rather than to present a handout at the back door.
Not Imported.
A young couple recently purchased a baby carriage at a local store, and having the child with them placed it in the carriage and started home. On their way they passed a number of people who looked at the carriage, then at them, smiled blandly and appeared greatly amused. The actions of their friends was a matter of great annoyance to the young people, and was wholly inexplicable until they reached home. As the little one they were taken from the carriage their eyes fell on a printed card on the front of the vehicle which read: "None better—our own make."
The McHenry County Fair.
The program for the coming fair will be fresh, novel, engaging, exciting, exhilarating, comprehensive and popular. Not sensational and startling merely, nor a show for the amusement of the vulgar, but an exhibition to educate the masses and stimulate them to higher aims and nobler effort. Each year we aim to engage and produce as many as possible of instructive, elevating exhibitions, games and amusements kindred to the scope and purpose of a fair, and all the available, striking and promotive qualities that the genius of the times has been able to discover and invent, to enliven, enrich, and make the occasions enticing and enjoyable, and have power to educate, amuse and enlighten the people, consistent with the character of the fair, thus assuring an unusually attractive and elaborate program of everything conspicuous that can lend a charm or fascination, or make the fair grand, diffusive, alluring and pre-eminent in features of instruction and entertainment.

If you wish to behold the greatest of great things, the biggest of big things, the choicest of choice things, the most useful of useful things, the most interesting of interesting things, the most instructive of instructive things, the most attractive of attractive things, the most amusing of amusing things, in fact a little of everything and the climax of all the great and good things worth visiting and studying, the fair is the place to go.
Progress is born of experience, and no place has yet been suggested where so much experience can be had in so short a time and at so little expense as at our Fair.
A Touching Story.
Is the saying from the death of the baby girl of Geo. A. Eyer, Cumberland, Md. He writes: "At the age of 13 months our little girl was in declining health with serious throat trouble, and two physicians gave her up. We were almost in despair, when we resorted to Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds. The first bottle gave relief, after taking four bottles she was cured, and is now in perfect health." Never fails to relieve and cure a cough or cold. DOWIE GIVES AN ORDER

Married Folk Must Populate Zion—Young Men and Maidens Ordered to Marry—Balk at Edict.
In Zion city has been founded the real infant industry. Unprotected by high tariff from outside competition, and beyond the interference of the federal courts that interfere with the lace factories and other so-called infant institutions of the Dowie hosts, the new project is to have for its sponsors only the married residents of the restoration land who are united under the ritualistic service of the first apostle.
Ask a man or his spouse in Zion City how many children they have and you know at once how long they have been married. The edict is out, couched in the stentorian tones of the much-robed general overseer, that each year every married couple must "lead a little lamb to the baptismal font."
Every whisper through the community that brings a blush to the cheeks of the housewife spreads a smile over the bearded face of the Zion leader. He needs workers for his factories, he needs purchasers for his town lots, he wants subscribers for his publications and he has formed a close corporation with the storks for the upbuilding of his city.
"Be fruitful and multiply" is the text that the second Elijah has spread abroad through his hosts. Long has been a disciple of the Rooseveltian dictum against race suicide. He has not repeated in his command the divine suggestion that "of such is the kingdom of heaven." Entirely utilizing the philosophy promulgated by the order that the annual birth rate must be commensurate with the married population.
No penality has been placed by Dowie for a breach of trust embodied in the marriage certificate. Those who are faithful to him he knows carry out his orders without suggestion of punishment for disobedience. Those who do not he promptly banishes. Hence his belief that another quarter of a century will have developed his lands with metropolitan multiplicity.
"All the lands and the seas that between them lie are in time to come into possession of the chosen when the restoration flock has covered the earth until it covers the ends of the earth," Dr. Dowie said. "One child each year for every married couple of the Christian Catholic church means the upbuilding of our city and the growth of our possessions in Mexico. Take unto yourselves mates, you unmarried men and girls. And I impose upon you the obligation of citizenship, the bringing of children into the world."
Dowie himself had two children. His living child remains one of the unmarried. He is even declared to be the "unblessed" son. He, as yet, seems unmindful of his father's edict of marriage and propagation.
There is another rule on the unwritten statutes of Zion City, and the youths and maidens are whispering together that it is inconsistent with the call for marriage. No kisses by the second order, not even through the period of engagement. "The first must be given at the altar," Dr. Dowie declares, and there, for once, he finds there is doubt of his wisdom.
"How can the girls ever in the world become interested enough in a young man to become engaged to him under these conditions?" one of the young women asked. "Why, we are told that we cannot even be hugged, let alone kissed, until after we are married. I cannot imagine how I can pick out a husband with this restriction."
The young people are asserting, some with pouting lips, that the growth of the population on an arithmetical basis will surely be hampered by the restraining rules of etiquette through courtship beyond the dictates of common propriety.
No future marriages are to be recognized by the Dowie church unless the engaged couple, after complying with the state law on marriage licenses, shall have secured from the overseer his written permission for the union. The faithful are fearing, in view of the recent order to increase the birth rate, that the prophet may himself intend to select the mates for his younger followers, and pair them off at his own discretion.
No man's good intentions ever boosted him into the hero class.
The butchers of the city of New York propose to do business independently of the beef trust and have associated themselves into a co-operative organization for the purpose of buying their meats in bulk and slaughtering them themselves. Co-operative effort is the legitimate and effective tool with which to fight combination.
It looks as if the Texas longhorns would soon follow the buffalo, as they have begun deborning the calves in the Texas cattle region. This is a sensible move, for while the longhorns may have been picturesque they were not profitable and put the cattle under the ban for ocean shipment. The elimination of horns will mean an increase in value of about $2 per head.
