MRS. SARAH LANE DEAD.

Lived at One Time at Barrington and Later at Barrington Center.

Mrs. Sarah Lane died after a brief illness at her home, 44 Addison street, Elgin, Sunday, Nov. 26, Mrs. Lane, with her husband, Justus B. Lane, and their three children, came west from Massachusetts just before the war of '61. That contest required the costly sacrifice of a loyal husband and father, who was killed in the storming of Vicksburg just before it fell. Her youngest son was for many years suffering invalid, taxing every energy of the mother, the least affecting her cheerfulness or her ministrations.

When the beloved son was laid to rest, the youth of the devoted mother had fallen, but with the serenity of faith and hope she moved along the way of gathering years and came to the evening of her heroic life, refined in spirit and fitted for the kingdom of Heaven already begun in her heart. Last April Mrs. Lane and her daughter visited the old battle grounds of Vicksburg. In their minds it was easy to reinvest the grounds with the heroes who went forth and never returned.

Mrs. Lane is survived by her son, J. R. Lane, of Ludington, Mich., and Miss Louise of Elgin. The funeral was held at the home in Elgin Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Lane at one time were residents of Barrington and later removed to Barrington Center. The deceased was a relative of William G. Waterman, who died Saturday, and they were both about the same age.

PROMINENT MISSIONARY DEAD

Was a Brother-in-Law of Mrs. Lapham of Barrington.

The Rev. and Mrs. F. N. Lapham received on last Monday the sad news of the death of Rev. James Simister in Foochow, China.

The Rev. Simister was the husband of a sister of Mrs. Lapham. He and his wife have been missionaries in China for nine years. As they labored together they rejoiced in the great results and the success that attended their labor.

In the midst of their labors he was taken with diphtheria fever and after a few days died. Bishop Basford took charge of the funeral services.

About two hundred people were at the church and nearly two thousand followed the remains to the cemetery.

A friend in writing about the funeral said, "It was touching to see the Chinese, old men, women and servants, come to offer their tributes of love and flowers."

He leaves to mourn his loss his wife and four children, who will return to America in the near future.

BAPTIST PASTOR RESIGNED

Mr. Kelley Will Leave on January First to Accept a Call in New Mexico.

Pastor Kelley of the Baptist church has accepted a call from a church at Albuquerque, New Mexico, and on January 1st will leave for his new home. The resignation was read some weeks ago, but it was hoped by some of his parishioners that he could be prevailed upon to reconsider his decision, but owing to the state of his health he has definitely decided to leave January 1st.

Mr. Kelley is a young man who is not afraid of work, and while in Barrington has done much to bring the church people in closer and more friendly touch with those not affiliated with churches. He has made himself very popular, and his work has been very profitable. It has not yet been ascertained who the next pastor will be.

Whiskey in Disguise.

The whimsicalist of internal revenue has ruled that, after Dec. 1, patent medicines that are known to contain a large percentage of alcohol will be placed in the same category as other intoxicants. The manufacturers of such medicines will be classed with rectifiers and liquor dealers, and druggists who handle them will be required to take out the regular saloonkeeper's license.

This important decision should be hailed with satisfaction by Prohibitionists and liquor dealers alike. It is a tacit endorsement of the position of the W. C. T. U. in the question of non-alcoholic medication, and it places the saloonkeeper and his rival, the liquor selling druggist, on a plane of business equality.—Union Signal.

A Weak Point in Our Navy.
Admiral Rye thinks the present time, when there is no fighting in prospect for years to come, is a fitting one to openly discuss a vital point in our naval armament which is so weak that, to use the admiral's own language, "the navy would find itself unable to win battles." It is better to learn that truth now than to have it disclosed by disaster in the event of war. The weakness consists of a woeful lack of engineering knowledge on the part of the officers. Naval engineering is in the highest degree a technical science and one not to be mastered by every officer who may have general capacity for the service.

A bill to equip every naval officer with engineering experience has been on the books for three years, but for a variety of reasons little has been done to carry out its provisions. Chief among the drawbacks to the system adopted by the bill referred to is the dislike of the average naval officer for the duties of the engine room. Furthermore, many an officer who is capable in every other branch has no aptitude for mechanical science.

Our navy is necessarily a great tool financially, and if it is to be maintained should always be ready for war. In 1898 we were plunged into a conflict on short notice. Russia was taken by surprise in 1904, and the want of naval mechanic and engineers is believed to have caused the delay in the sailing of the Baltic fleet. Admiral Rae is at the head of the engineering department of the navy and speaks in plain language, with full knowledge of his subject. He says that young officers who would not be trusted alone in charge of the deck of a warship have been placed alone at the head of the engine room. In one notable instance of recent date this state of things led to a disaster more costly in money and lives than many a stirring battle. The scarcity of officers caused by the large number of ships in commission has in a measure prevented the training of the younger men in engineering duties. It is proposed by Admiral Rae that this training be no longer neglected for any cause and that instruction in the engine room be given under the supervision of specialists detailed for the duty. Even this plan would require years to bring out a supply of officers competent to handle a ship under all circumstances. And as fast as the warships multiply in number more competent engineers of officers will be needed.

Russian Mob Law.

When the mob takes the field in Russia it makes no distinction between liberty and license. The people do not band together to shout and let off steam, as they do in England, for instance, and outside after an assembly of officials has been looted into the street, a few windows broken and some skulls cracked. The Russians are moved with serious wrath and, before moving in taking law into their own hands, become incited with the new power suddenly revealed to them. A few weeks or months should end the excesses in Russia and peace and order succeed to chaos. The new order of government may remain imperial or become republican, the realm may hang together or split up into several states, but whatever the political outcome shall be the future of Russia will be more glorious than the past. The people are aroused as they never have been before. New inspirations and aspirations will be born in these heated hours of trial, and the pent up energies of a vast and mighty people will become creative and productive and add to the moral and material resources of civilization.

One outcome of the presidential campaign in Cuba will be the formation of a plan to bring about annexation to the United States. The officials firmly opposed annexation, and this country has yet to make up her mind as to the desirability of such a conclusion to her peculiar relations with that island.

And now the food reformer puts a ban upon fruit, saying that its cooling juices are responsible for rheumatism.

But fruit is so innocuous and so handy that mortals will go on nibbling and count the twinges in their joints as mere trifles or attribute them to something else.

Dr. Wiley, the pure food expert, wants to know how it is that the people of the United States alone use 3,500,000 pounds of pure Mocha and Java each year while those countries export only 137,000 pounds annually.

We have a right to infer from Lieutenant Train's aiming his rifle at Chinese (shoot and hitting a Chinese woman that Uncle Sam's soldiers are better marksmen with big guns than with sporting arms.

Under the recent civil service order of the president employees may be summarily discharged, but the various civil service commissions cannot be used except by competition in the usual manner.

And now the Socialists of Austria expect to get concessions from the government by resorting to strikes which will tie up public utilities. Government ownership has its disadvantages as well as its good points.

International Live Stock Exposition

Prof. Jas. W. Wilson of the South Dakota Agricultural College, says: "The International Live Stock Exposition, the greatest in Chicago is probably the greatest institution of its kind in the world. It is a great source of its educational value, not only to the enterprising student of the West, but the pecker, the speculator and the exporter of fancy stock in the East. Here is the place they come to a common center and observe with their own eyes the best in the land. The careful admirer of good stock receives at this time enough information to keep him thinking for an entire year."

"It is impossible for one to enter in detail the numerous classes and stock of the number that has been on sale. It is the greatest, the best, the best in the West, but the pecker, the speculator and the exporter of fancy stock in the East. Here is the place they come to a common center and observe with their own eyes the best in the land. The careful admirer of good stock receives at this time enough information to keep him thinking for an entire year."

THE above picture of the man and fish is the trademark of Scott's Emulsion, and is the synonym for strength and purity. It is sold in almost all the civilized countries of the globe.

If the cod fish became extinct it would be a world-wide calamity, because the oil that comes from its liver surpasses all other oils in nourishing and life-giving properties. Thirty years ago the proprietors of Scott's Emulsion found a way of preparing cod liver oil so that everyone can take it and get the full value of the oil without the objectionable taste. Scott's Emulsion is the best thing in the world for weak, backward children, thin, delicate people, and all conditions of wasting and lost strength.

An educated Jap now in this country is preaching the heresy that our schools lay too much stress upon the memorizing of dates, facts and general information, which can be looked up in a jiffy in the encyclopedia. Oriental information, he declares, deals only with studies which will develop the individual, leaving general information quite alone.

Black - Belle

By CLIF LOVELL

Copyright, 1908, by E. A. McClure

"Oh, it's you, you wretched little thing! No; go away, Black-Belle! I don't have anything to do with you. It was all your doing. You know it was." And the pretty brown head was again buried deeply in the cushions, and the hammock shook with the girl's convulsive sobs.

The little black calf eyed her mistress in wide-eyed wonder, then nosed the hammock gently. Whatever had been the matter these last three days? She could not imagine.

The girl suddenly sat up and tossed her hair from her tear reddened eyes.

"Yes, you wretched little creature, it was all your doing right through! Your frightening Dick's horses and our quarreling over it and going on and on; then my saying I'd just go and marry Sam West; his asking father, and father saying yes, and then saying I'd have to, when I wanted to back out unless Sam agreed, but he wouldn't. Oh, it's just horrible! And I hate him!"

"Uncle Sam! Why, folks would

HE THREW IT BACK TOWARD THE DOOR.

"Take that, you fool!" he called me "Aunt West." And me only twenty-three! They'd do it for spite. Oh—

"And when I love Dick so much. Oh, if mother were only living!"

"But there's father at the gate. I suppose I'll have to cheer up and smile and be bright, and everything, or he'll be angry."

"Why, what's the matter? There's something wrong with him?"

There was something wrong. On his way from town a sudden and unexpected gust of wind had blown Sheriff Bark in dust, filling his eyes, and he was scarcely able to see, and for half an hour Milly forgot her own misery in attending her father. When she had done all she could to ease his inflamed and smarting eyes, she bandaged them and led him to the big chair in the dining room, where he sank back, still suffering considerable pain and much out of temper.

Meantime Black Belle had tried of searching the long grass of the orchard for windfalls and had sought the fence, to ponder enviously on the freedom of the dusty road beyond. Suddenly, as acting on a thought, she turned and trotted briskly back about the house and down the lane toward the barn.

The lane gate was closed!

Indignantly Black Belle turned hard against it, shoved sideways against it, backed against it, but all to no purpose. Thrusting her head between the bars, she sought to raise it, after the manner of Samson, but fruitlessly. She spied the big iron latch. Poking her nose beneath it, she tried to feel back in its place. With a touch of resentment she raised it again. Then, disappointed and cross, she turned about and strolled toward the house. She must be satisfied with other amusement.

"Milly," called the sheriff, "do you see Sam West coming up the road?"

"No, dad," replied Milly from the kitchen.

"Keep a lookout for him. John said he'd get him talked over to local option all right today and send him over to sign the petition."

"Ah, this is him," he added ungrammatically a moment later, catching the click of the gate latch and footfalls on the path. The footstep paused before the open door.

"Good evening, Sam," said the sheriff affably.

The answer was a sharp sniff. The sheriff's prospective son-in-law was an exceedingly eccentric man, with a hundred odd tricks of speech and manner, even of silence, which were of peculiar significance to those who knew him, and in that contemptuous snort Sheriff Bark read an unlooked for but certain opposition to a cause he had ardently taken to heart. His already ruffled temper gave way, and, throwing himself back in the chair, he exclaimed warmly and bitterly: "You needn't say another word—not another word! I know all you mean—every stupid, pithed word of it!"

"But," again turning his blinded eyes toward the door, "even you never talk like an ordinary mortal, Sam West! That's just the way you talk politics. I got you cornered on 10 to 1, you snuff! I got you again the treble on reciprocity, you snuff! I down you on trusts, you snuff! Bah!"

His caller snuffed again.

The sheriff turned from him in supreme disgust. There was a low cough, and the chair beside the door moved slightly.

"Oh, yes; come in and have a seat," exclaimed the sheriff apologetically.

The chair moved again.

"Oh, there's something on it, is there? You see, I can't see. I got my eyes full of dust today."

Raising his voice, he called, "Milly, come and give Mr. West a chair."

The kitchen door opened. There was an exclamation, a momentary silence, then a wild scream of girlish laughter. Simultaneously there was a clatter and clanging at the door, a frightened bawl, and, tearing the bandage from his eyes, the sheriff saw the flourishing heels of the disappearing calf.

Milly laughed until she dropped weakly into a chair, while her father, on her inadequate of anger equal to the occasion, sank limply back and smiled foolishly.

But he vowed he would be revenged on the meddlesome animal. When Milly left the room he secured a small stick of wood from the wood box, and, having practiced swinging the missile back toward the doorway until he felt sure of being able to strike the calf without turning about the chair and before she would have time to withdraw, he settled back and waited.

A few minutes later, with a glow of satisfaction, he heard her again clicking up the walk. With a grim smile he took one more look toward the door, measured the distance with his eye, again gauged the movement of his arm and leaned back in his former position.

The animal reached the door, halted a moment and, as before, placed her feet over the threshold. Quietly the sheriff leaned forward, drew the stick up across his breast and suddenly, leaning sideways, with all his strength threw it back toward the door.

"Take that, you fool! I'll show!"

"Sam! Sam West!"

Straightening himself with an effort and with one hand still gripped tightly across his stomach, the outraged man spring forward and shook his fist in the sheriff's face.

"You—you!" he exclaimed inarticulately, and before the sheriff could recover power of speech he spun about and ran from the room only pausing on the doorstep to shout back: "I came up and heard what you said a minute ago when you thought it was I! I thought I was 'made a mistake and came back! And this ends it! I'll never marry your girl as long as I live!"

And Sam kept his word. He will probably continue to keep it, for, within three months Milly and Dick were married.

And thus Black Belle repaired her wrongdoing.

The Canary Bird.

About 250 years ago a ship, returning from the islands in the Atlantic which people then called the Fortunate Isles, but which were undoubtedly the Canaries, went ashore on the coast of Italy near Leghorn. A case of beautiful birds captured on those islands was broken and the birds were liberated. Through some caprice they did not take refuge on the mainland, but went to the island of Elba, where in due time they nested and bred and increased in number. The Italians discovered that they were admirable singers and began to capture them and sell them in cages. This gave rise to a traffic which soon completely cleared the island of birds of canary kind, so that not one was left there in a wild state. From that time the history of the canary has been a record of perpetual imprisonment and transformation of its appearance and character. In their natural state, as they still exist in the Canaries and Madeira and other Atlantic islands, the birds are of a grayish green and greenish blue color and are not remarkable for beauty, but they have been known to burst the membrane of their throats in pouring forth their songs.

The God of Fortune.

The Chinese deity of fortune is at ways represented as a jolly god, and the rich spoils offerings which cover his altars are speaking testimonials to his prosperity. On the 23 of the second month a special festival is held in his honor, on which occasion his temples are crowded with worshippers, who manifest devotion by the services offered to the less material deities.

Feasts of fat things are greedily presented to secure his favor, and, not content with leaving the plate on the knees of the god, his practical minded worshippers seek to lift the veil which conceals his counsels from mankind. For this purpose they adopt a curious device.

In some open space or market square a large wooden cannon loaded with a small charge of powder and a circular rattan and is first perpendicularly tilted to the air. As the wheel descends the surrounding crowd struggle to catch it, in the belief that he who is successful will enjoy the blessings of peace and plenty during the ensuing year.

All of the weather prophets who have spoken thus far have predicted a long, cold winter ahead. Those who have not said it up are considerably holding their tongues to allow the weather a free hand in the business.

Stewards For Heroes.

Ten new names have been added to the roll of heroes established by the Carnegie hero fund commission. All of the ten, selected out of fifty candidates, had risked their own lives in order to save or to attempt to save the imperiled lives of others. In three cases out of the ten a money award was given, the remaining heroes receiving medals.

It is interesting to compare the principle of this fund with that of a fund established years ago by a French manufacturer. The French awards usually go to men and women who are surprised and astonished to learn that there is anything unusual and heroic in their life or character. Priests and nurses who work among humble folk, widows and working girls whose lives are given in patient and self-sacrificing toil for helpless dependents and who live uncomplainingly in honorable poverty—in a word, persons whose obscure deeds are done out of the world's eye—are rewarded for the excellence and beauty of their characters. Heroism is indeed virtuous, and virtue in some situations is heroic.

"Oscar," the head waiter at the Waldorf-Astoria, says that one meal a day is enough for the average man. With coffee 25 cents a cup, as it is at that hotel, and other things in proportion, a square meal a day is all the average purse can stand, however it may be with the finer man.

Traces of gold have been found in sea water from the Atlantic by a process of extraction recently perfected in Belgium. Waters of the Mediterranean and the British channel, however, yield no gold by this process.

The International Live Stock Exposition to be held in Chicago Dec. 2 to 9.

"The International Live Stock Exposition is an index of the progress of animal breeding in this country. Here are annually exhibited the best products of the mind and genius of the American breeder, concepts which have been developing during 20, and in some cases even 30 or 40 years. What a privilege it is to come in contact with these men who are an inspiration to study the results of their consistent and united effort. It is so wonderful that students of the agricultural arts far and near, and the instructors, flock to Chicago during the live stock exposition. Where else could they hope to find a school exemplifying this does all the principles of animal breeding and nutrition. Yes, the International Live Stock Exposition is indeed a great school. Think of what it means to the hundreds of thousands of farmers who visit it and see what their brother farmers and stockmen have actually accomplished. Many a man has gotten his best true conception of what animal breeding and production means through a visit to the Exposition. It has thus become a great vitalizing and inspiring force to the live stock men of the whole country."

Low rates via The North-Western R'y from all points will be announced later.

The Big Four is to be equipped with long distance telephones. The completion of the work will unite all the principal Vanderbilt lines and an official on any one of them can talk to President Newman's office easily over the system's own wires. Unlike the New York Central and Lake Shore, which have separate telephone wires, the Big Four will use the telegraph wires with the composite arrangement which makes it possible to telegraph and telephone over the same wire at the same time and still not have one service interfere with the other. This increased use of the telephone on railroads, officials say, points to the time when telegraph wires will be used for scarcely anything but train orders.

THE SMALL BOY ON GILES—A small boy in southern Illinois wrote this essay on girls by request of his teacher: "Girls are the sisters of boys and has long hair and wears dresses and powder. The first woman was called Christmas Eve, though I could never see why. Most every family has one girl, and some of them that is in hard luck has two or three. We have a girl in our own who is my sister. Girls can grow older and get younger. My sister has been twenty-five for three years and some day we may be twins. Girls play planners and talk about each other. Fat girls want to be thin and thin girls want to be fat and all of them want to marry doctors. Why the Lord made girls nobody nos, but I think it were to go to church and eat ice cream. There are three kinds of girls, barnet girls, blond girls and them that have money. Girls are afraid of mice and bugs, which makes it fun to put 'em down their backs."

That new rule providing for the medical inspection of the cabin passengers as well as the storage on the ocean liners will doubtless create a stir in upper circles. But some very dangerous diseases take first cabin occasionally, so there is no adequate reason for kicking against the new order of things.

The fact that the Lewis and Clark fair at Portland, Ore., was a financial success is believed to be due to its moderate size as regards the number of exhibits and the average covered by them. At Portland the buildings were not large, and the exhibits could be inspected quickly.

Emperor William thinks it safe for the powers to withdraw the troops which have been guarding the road to Peking since the Boxer outbreak. China must have progressed along with her neighbors to render this step advisable.

Count Witte showed his good sense and the result of his American trip by calling upon the Russian editors to support the policy of order in the national crisis. Newspapers are better than Cossack whips and bullets.

If the Russian constitution works all right we may expect the Kaiser to say that he advised the czar to this reform when he met him for secret conference last summer.

A New World Language.
The originator of the new so called world language, "Esperanto," is a Russian, Dr. Zamenhof. At a recent congress of Esperantists held at Boulogne a quarter of a million people were represented, among them Russians, Italians, Frenchmen, Swedes, Germans and Poles. The Esperantists claim that their language is not only simple, easy to acquire and useful for all ordinary purposes, but also built upon literary ideals. The name Esperanto—the man who hopes—was once used by the founder of the language as a pen name.

Esperanto rests upon sixteen rules, and no exceptions are permitted. All the roots are taken from existing words, and the spelling is to the last degree phonetic. It is claimed that a good linguist can learn the language in two weeks and the average student master it in a month or six weeks. At present the French head the list of converts to Esperanto, perhaps for the reason that the language has a close resemblance to their native tongue. The desirability of having a universal language will be admitted generally. A common means of communication between members of all races in every country, when it is established, will be a boon to business. It will also add pleasure to those who travel in foreign lands to see the sights and all are linguists.

The Black Man to the Front.
On his recent trip through the south the president advised the colored man to stay at home and take part in the commercial development of the region. The south wants laborers, and the blacks are on the ground, invited to the climate and the present conditions. Negroes are capable of a variety of useful work when they set themselves to it, as was shown in the days of slavery. About all the work done on the Panama canal so far has been performed by Jamaican negroes, and it is estimated that 24,000 laborers will be needed when the construction is in full swing.

On the new railroad along the upper Congo 4,000 natives have been at work for nearly a year. Opportunities for the blacks in their native zone to gain proficiency in common labor and mechanical industries are opening every day. Even in Africa the negro is taught to make brick, build houses, grade roads and bridge rivers. No great enterprise can get on without his aid, and if the black race fails to serve the needs of the age it will make a mistake and lead to the displacement of the negro as a factor in civilized development.

Big Salaries Ought to Go.
A comparison of the salaries paid to the heads of large foreign corporations and those drawn by the presidents of our own companies should lead to an awakening on the part of those out of whose pockets these salaries must come. For instance, the heads of the Bank of England and the Bank of Germany, which have aggregate assets of over $1,000,000,000, together pay salaries to their chief officers of only $17,500 annually. In this country single individuals at the head of financial corporations are paid several times that amount for supervising funds ranging from one-half to one-fifth as large.

The conditions in this country as compared with the old world, the sharp competition and the volume of transactions and even salaries somewhat in excess of those paid abroad, but the difference should not be so great as to create an injustice to the great paying public, which is disposed to be generous.

That new rule providing for the medical inspection of the cabin passengers as well as the storage on the ocean liners will doubtless create a stir in upper circles. But some very dangerous diseases take first cabin occasionally, so there is no adequate reason for kicking against the new order of things.

Men's Unreasonableness
is often as great as woman's. But Thos. S. Austin, Mgr. of the "Republican," of Leavenworth, is unreasonable when he refused to allow the doctors to operate on his wife for female trouble. "Instead," he says, "we concluded to try Electric Bitters." My wife was then so sick she could hardly leave her bed, and five (5) physicians had failed to relieve her. After taking Electric Bitters she was perfectly cured, and can now perform all her household duties. Guaranteed by Barrington Pharmacy, price 30c.
