CELEBRATE SILVER WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. Henry F. Landwehr
Are Recipients of Many Congratulations.

On Friday evening of last week, Feb. 10, Mr. and Mrs. Henry F. Landwehr, corner of Cook and Limit streets, were completely surprised by the sudden appearance of over forty of their immediate friends who entered and took possession of their home in order to celebrate the "silver wedding" of that good couple. Numerous games, a din of sociability and "lots" of good music, made the evening intensely enjoyable. A splendid and beautiful repast was served, which was heartily appreciated. In the midst of the revelry a pause was effected; and the worthy pair being placed in their original position, Rev. Haelele addressed them in his usual happy and appropriate manner, following his remarks with an earnest prayer in their behalf. Mr. Hubbard then read to them the following poem written for the occasion:

Twenty-five years of wedded life,
Each unto each a faithful mate,
A husband true, a faithful wife,
They may well say they are great.
Your path has ever smooth and plain,
You have always kept hand and eye,
You have been faithful and true,
You have been faithful and true.
Among the blessing and the joy,
Which these long years have brought to you,
A faithful daughter, and from her,
Almost your youthful days were.
Observing them from day to day,
Watching with love and care,
With your hands for hope and joy,
That each good day was yours.
And there another blessing,
Which they have ever had,
The many children who have grown,
A good and faithful family.
A few are gathered here tonight,
To share with you this happy hour,
In friendship true and spirit light,
That you may feel more secure.
So, in the evening, when the day
Winds up, your hearts are full,
May this review in your home
Be a silver day, have over.

After the ceremony the children, beginning with the oldest, led the procession in tendering congratulations. Numerous handsome presents were in evidence, as is the custom. At a late hour the company dispersed, feeling that they had experienced a "good time" and one which the family would long remember. Those from the township who attended were: Henry Thies, Jr., Misses Clara and Sarah Thies, and Walter Nurner, all of Palatine.

Announcement.
I wish to announce myself as a candidate for nomination for Representative in the General Assembly for the Seventh Senatorial District of Illinois. In presenting myself as one who wishes to represent the district, I ask you who are my friends and acquaintances to consider my candidacy, and to give me aid and support if you think favorably of my ability to represent you if elected.

I trust that such support may be sufficient not only to secure my nomination and election, but that I may be able to repay your efforts and to justify your opinion of me by being a worthy and honorable representative of you and of our district in the next General Assembly of the State of Illinois.

Respectfully,

MANJ VALENTINE PARTIES

Portia and Thimble Clubs and
Misses Boehmer and Plagge
Pleasantly Entertain.

One of the most unique and delightful Valentine parties was given by the Portia club at the home of Miss Frances Peck, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. Peck, Wednesday evening. The parlors were decorated with red hearts, and on the walls were hung pictures taken of the gentlemen guests present, which they were still infants, and they had to participate in a guessing contest as to "who was who." Irving Landwehr won the prize.

"Anagrams" was enjoyed until 10:30 o'clock, when the dining room was thrown open to the guests, and they sat down to a sumptuous luncheon, the table being decorated with red and white hearts, and each plate had a riddle. Alex Boehmer won first prize in Anagrams, and Miss Bertha Hawley captured the "cheese" prize for girls, while Frank Wooding carried off the same prize for boys. Those present were:

The plate cards were red hearts tied with ribbon, and decorated with group pictures of the club members. The club includes Misses Beatrice Bennett, Magdalene Blocks, Bernadine Taylor, Mabel Peck, Florence Collins and Violet McIntosh. ## THE WOMAN IN BLACK HERE

She Was Seen at Midnight by Four Different Parties—
Is Supposed to Be Same Party Who Scared
Elgin and Cary Citizens Recently.

Four different parties reported to THE REVIEW that they encountered a mysterious stranger dressed in black female garments on several nights the past week. It is presumed the mysterious stranger is the same party who frightened Elgin and Cary citizens by pecking unexpectedly through windows of private houses.

Freelith, Clarence Plagge and Walter Cannon, a dainty luncheon of ice cream and cake was served. The guests departed at a late hour, all declaring they had spent a very pleasant evening. Those present were: Misses Luella Landwehr, Mabel Steinhilber, Lizzie Brandt, Gertrude Handsochle, Norma Dolan, Florence McGraw, Olive Plagge, Midge Bennett, Edna Kamper, Edna Heier, Annabel Welch, Dorothy Meier, Nellie Riley, Jeannette Thorpe, Mildred Elfrick, Jennie Lines.

SPOKE OF CHINA.

Mrs. Simister Gives Interesting Account of Missionary Work in the Orient.

Mrs. Winifred Simister, a missionary from Poochow, China, gave an address in the Methodist church Sunday evening. She gave a splendid general view of the work as she has seen it in Poochow.

She told of the work of the orphanage for girls which is under the auspices of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society. In this orphanage the girls are taught of Christ, and some of the women who are the best Christian workers in the Poochow Province, were girls who had been trained in this orphanage in Poochow.

The Anglo-Chinese college is doing a good work, reaching not only the young men who attend the college, but their relatives as well. The Haidun Theological Seminary, in which the late James Simister was president, is training young Chinese men to preach the gospel in their native tongue to their own countrymen.

This is the great hope of China, that by which natives shall be taught and trained to preach the gospel and thus reach the masses of China. Mrs. Simister spoke at some length of the recent revival in Poochow. It began in a small meeting but gradually grew until large crowds gathered to hear the gospel. About eighty young men were converted.

Mrs. Simister asked Christians here to pray that those who have so recently started for Christ in Poochow, "might grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ."

IS FORGING AHEAD.

Education and Oratory Department of Sear's School of Music is Growing in Popularity.

The department of education and oratory, in the Sear's school, under the direction of Max Lane Spunner, is having a very prosperous year. So rapidly has the work grown that two of the senior pupils, Miss Philbert of Palatine and Miss Throp of Nunda, have been assisting Mrs. Spunner in the work.

The pupils are at present getting ready for several recitals, which give promise of surpassing anything heretofore given by the school. The first one will be given in March by the Seniors and will be on "Shade" and "The Sower." Mrs. Spunner desires just praise for building up, in two years, such a strong department of education and oratory. The work has been highly commended on by leading artists of the country, and has received just recognition from several prominent schools of Chicago. We shall note its growth with interest in the future.

Class Voting in Prussia.

While the world has been watching the fate of the franchise in newly awakened Russia and the agitation for a better distribution of suffrage powers in Austria-Hungary, the situation in Prussia was overlooked until dispatches from Berlin told of an army corps holding down the populace from a threatened uprising over the ballot. The Austrian chamber of deputies, or lower house of parliament, is constitutionally elected by the people, but owing to a system of class voting only seventy-two members out of a total representation of 422 are chosen by a "general class" of voters, which logically should control three-fourths of the seats, since this class polls three times as many votes as all other classes combined.

In Prussia the system of electing the deputies of the lower legislature is a fusion of universal suffrage and property qualification. The primary voters vote for a body of electors, who in turn elect the deputies, to sit five years. The primary voters are divided into three classes, according to the taxes they pay. The largest taxpayers (or even one taxpayer in a given district form the first class, the next largest taxpayers the second class, and the remaining third of the taxpayers constitute the third class. Each class chooses separately by a majority vote one-third of the electors in a given district, and thus a single capitalist may have the same voting power in the lower parliament as 20,000 workmen. The Socialists have scarcely any representation in the Prussian chamber of deputies, and hence the agitation for electoral reform.

The Call of Young Egypt.

A voice speaking for "young Egypt," and that with the tongue of eloquence, has been raised just when England congratulates herself that Egyptian patriotism and a longing for independence in the land of the pharaohs have been shot to death by machine guns. A new leader in the person of Mustafa Kameel has resorted to the weapons of reason and of an opposition to British domination based upon human justice. This brilliant orator, who is also a journalist and educator, was trained for the time in Europe and aims to graft European culture upon Muslim traditions and awaken the national spirit which has slumbered for ages. Mustafa Kameel is a democrat, and for Egypt that means that he is a firebrand, for the British government refuses recognition to all natives except the upper classes. In his plans for elementary instruction the call of the poor share with the rich. Human brotherhood is this reformer's ideal. The political drift of his new Egypt movement is not to westernize the people, but to maintain their pride of race. Arabian learning once ruled the world, and he would have it resume its ancient importance, modified by the influences of European civilization. But Egypt must look farther west than Europe to catch the true spirit of the twentieth century. Democracy knows no farther west you go.

Duels and Pistols.

That a German army officer should be cashiered for refusing to fight a duel seems out of keeping with the spirit of the twentieth century, but the Imperial chancellor, Von Bulow, justifies the verdict as necessary in Germany at this time. The chancellor says that the army "cannot tolerate the presence of a man who is unwilling to take a weapon in hand for the purpose of re-establishing his honor." There is room for two opinions as to just how and where the honor comes in. It often happens that the duelist is the man who is wrong and in point of fact thereby adds to his infamy. Then, too, where the victor is more skillful than his antagonist the honor is of a piece with that of the bully who whips a smaller fellow.

Looked at in every way, it seems that Germany is behind the times in clinging to the duel and mixing up chivalry and honor with out and out murder. Recently Colonel Jack China, who has the reputation of a fighter of the old southern school, came out with a speech for fair play in the matter of carrying weapons and incidentally condemned dueling. The colonel said that he had never carried a pistol in his life and had never taken human life. Once when called upon to second a duelist he spoiled the fight by the absurd choice of axes for weapons in a ten foot ring. Colonel China said nothing about the bowie knife, which has been supposed to figure in his encounters. The sword is the German weapon and perhaps for the reason that the Irishman sticks to the shillalah, because it never misses fire. The sword means death, whereas with the sword the honor may be satisfied with the letting of blood. With a German a scar from a sword cut is a mark of honor. The sword and the duellist are better than the convulsed weapon whipped out in a moment of excitement. It is hoped that Colonel China's appeal to young men will bear fruit and the convulsed weapon, whether pistol or knife, be tabooed among dueling men. Dueling ought to go, but even that is nobler than a blow in the back.

As a rule American cities and other self governing communities get such government as they deserve. It is safe to assert that if the honest men, those who prefer good government rather than the rule of rings, gangs or grafters and looters, would cooperate in elections they could rule even the worst of our municipalities. It is, we think, beyond question that a great and continued prevalence of murder, or violence in any self governing city is proof positive that the reputable elements of the population—the majority in brains, character, property and social influence—have been grossly neglected for such a length of time that they can no longer be trusted to rule for good government and it can command a majority of voters.

In the catalog of Benjamin Franklin, he holds the position of the secretary of the bicentenary of his birth be remembered as a printer, publisher, editor, author, philosopher, moralist, educator, scientist, diplomat, soldier and philanthropist. Still there will be those to come forward and offer a new word on the many sided genius.

Secretary Bonaparte's proposition to provide a graduated method of punishment for misdemeanors found guilty of hazing looks reasonable and sensible. Some of the hazing charged against the addressees is a very harmless kind of boys' play. Sporting should be quite severe enough punishment for it.

Universal suffrage carried all before it in the land of our country until a specimen Australian ballot printed in the Russian language got into the palace exhibits. Since then the cry has been, "Let us go slow."

President Loubet came of a peasant family. The new executive of France is the grandson of a blacksmith and son of a clerk. The poor boys work to the top in the republic of France also.

Done over into plain Yankee language, the name of the new Osage chief, "Shish-kah-be-he," becomes Man-with-the-long-eyes. Pronounce it and see for yourself.

Just what They Wanted. As the Confederate General Harry Heth was passing through the country after his advance scouts on one occasion he came up with a couple of them feasting on green persimmons up in a persimmon tree. The fruit had just begun to blush from the sun and to show the fullness of being almost ripe for the finishing touches of the frost. General Heth was one of Virginia's old school gentlemen and never forgot the courteous training he had received when among his soldiers, who, though only private, were yet, many of them, of as good families as was the general himself. Settling in the green of the persimmons, the general thought of the condition their stomachs would be left in and called, "Boys, what are you doing up there eating persimmons?" "General," came back the answer. "They will draw your stomachs all up, boys," returned the general. "That's just what we want, general—somebody to draw us up to suit the ration we receive, camp back the rats away."

Ciphers and Settlements

By GORDON LENOX

It had all been very simple and very absurd. The stress of business had forgotten that he had promised to take Madge to the theater and had not even telegraphed her that he had an important interview to meet. There on Miss Caroline had very properly sent back the ring and had refused to listen to any explanation, a proceeding which led Brian to vow that he would seek pardon no more. In turn Madge decided to seek for forgetfulness in travel abroad.

The only person who displayed common sense was Howard Carline, who furnished Madge and her mother with money for the trip and encouraged Brian in his many stand against a woman's whims. But, while his sympathy had been plentiful, his allowance of money had been small indeed, and even Madge had complained of the smallness of the sum given.

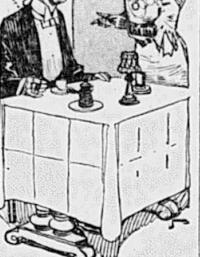

"That's all right," he said cheerfully enough. "I'll give a code, and you can send for me when this is gone." "I think," said Mrs. Carline, "I had better send it by wireless from Newport on the way across. We shall need it almost as soon as we get there."

Something in her husband's laugh reassured her, and nothing more was said. Madge looked back on the city where her heart lay buried, then, after a moment's interval of seasickness, looked forward to a winter on the coast, while Brian at his desk in his father's office tried to persuade himself she was nothing at all to him now that she had so clearly shown her lack of tolerance.

But he did feel lonesome, and he felt more so when Mrs. Carline announced his intention of taking a trip west. "I guess you can run the office all right," he said to Brian as he stood on the platform in the train and nervously fingered his sleeper ticket.

"Take good care of things and forward any cablegram to me immediately." Then he had passed through the gate, leaving Brian very much alone.

He had taken a place in Howard Carline's office at a time when his engagement

"I WANT TO KNOW IF YOU RECEIVED A CABLE FROM MOTHER." "Yes," said Brian, "I received a cable from mother last night. She was no more than a trick," she protested. "It was one of father's schemes to make me what a foolish girl I had been."

"Your father," he echoed, "I supposed that he was out west." "It was this way," she explained. "You see, father gave us a code by which we were to communicate with him if he needed anything. He knew very well that we should have to send for money. He gave us very little when we left."

"Madge was the code word for 'money,' 'dangerously' was the code for '500' and 'ill' was the word for 'dollars.' The message read: 'Madge dangerously ill. Come immediately. What it meant was 'Send $500. Hotel Carleton.'"

"When it was just a trick to get me over here," he asked coolly. "It was a device to show me my own silly heart," she said softly.

His hand came back on the table. "Madge," he said feverishly, "I wish those electric lights would go out for a minute." "Mother is upstairs in our sitting room," she suggested. "Let's go up and tell her that we have read the new meaning of the cipher."

Frighfully Burned. Char. W. Moore, a man of good City, Pa., and his land frightfully burned in an electrical furnace. He applied Bucklen's Arnica Salve with the usual result: "a quick and perfect cure." (Largest dealer on earth for Burns, Wounds, Sores, Eczema and Piles. 25c at Barrington Pharmacy.)

Mean Cure for Head Aches. The superstition in agricultural communities that the phases of the moon affect the germination and growth of seed has a parallel in a queer belief that the moon also influences the growth of hair on the head. Here is a case in point. The husband of a woman who had been bald for years took two ounces of bar's grease, one dram of the ashes of burnt eyes, one dram of the ashes of southern wood, one dram of a white clay, one dram of one of sweet almonds and six drams of pure musk; make an ointment of these and the day before the full moon shave the place and anoint it every day. —New York Tribune.

A Healing Gospel.

The Rev. J. C. Warren, pastor of Sharon Baptist Church, Italy, Ga., says of Electric Bitters: "It's a God-send to mankind. I cured me of lame back, stiff joints and complete physical collapse. It was so weak it took me half an hour to walk a mile. Two bottles of Electric Bitters have made me a new man. At any rate, it would never do to confess that he had crossed the ocean to come to the woman for whom he professed an utter indifference, and he is kindly hoped that the cablegram he had sent to Mr. Carline immediately after having seen Mrs. Carline and Madge in good health would reach him in time to keep him from coming."

Brian could have returned home next day by another line, but he assured himself that now that he was in London it would be well to stay over for a steamer and have a little rest after all he had gone through with. He hung about the Carline, catching an occasional glimpse of Madge as she came and went with the young people who were so kind to him, and then she came. "If Madge felt any curiosity regarding his presence she did not betray it after a single comment upon his appearance. He was, while his eyes were turned to her, utter indifference to her, and Lord Robert Sefton, had he known it, would have been grateful to the strapping young American for the graceless manner Madge displayed toward him."

Ten days had passed before she was able to get to the city. She came in one afternoon to find her mother pouring over a little red covered book. A cable blank lay on the desk before her and Madge glanced by the table to see the place laid.

"Cabling, money?" she cried. "I'll warrant you want more money." "Yes," said Mrs. Carline. "You see, I called for some two weeks ago, and your father was out west, and I was left alone. I had to get on somehow. It is a code," she said. "How interesting! Let me see it." "For a moment her eyes traveled over the paper, then she turned to her mother. "Is this the same one you sent before?" she demanded. Her mother looked at the girl's lips brushed her mother's cheek, and she went on to ward her room, pale and shaken. She knew now.

That evening Brian, lingering over his coffee, was surprised to see Madge coming toward him. He sprang to his feet as she came to a halt at his table.

"Be seated," she said quietly. "I don't want to keep you standing. It would hurt your back. Brian glanced to where Lord Bobby was sitting and smiled quietly to himself.

"I want to know," she began, "if you received a cable from mother before you left New York." "Yes," he answered. "A cablegram came the day I left."

"And you came at once?" she said softly. Brian nodded. "Yes," he admitted. "I did not know then that it was a trick."

"It was not a trick," she protested. "It was one of father's schemes to make me what a foolish girl I had been."

"Your father," he echoed, "I supposed that he was out west." "It was this way," she explained. "You see, father gave us a code by which we were to communicate with him if he needed anything. He knew very well that we should have to send for money. He gave us very little when we left."

"Madge was the code word for 'money,' 'dangerously' was the code for '500' and 'ill' was the word for 'dollars.' The message read: 'Madge dangerously ill. Come immediately. What it meant was 'Send $500. Hotel Carleton.'"

"When it was just a trick to get me over here," he asked coolly. "It was a device to show me my own silly heart," she said softly.

His hand came back on the table. "Madge," he said feverishly, "I wish those electric lights would go out for a minute."

"Mother is upstairs in our sitting room," she suggested. "Let's go up and tell her that we have read the new meaning of the cipher."

The Turkish Janissaries.

The Turkish Janissaries (young soldiers) were originally Christian captives, who in the middle of the fourteenth century were trained to be the bodyguard of Sultan Amurath I. Originally they numbered 1,000, but after 200 years they had increased to 100,000, and under Selim the Magnificent they formed a force highly disciplined and noted for the wild intensity of their attacks. The history of these Janissaries abounds in conspiracies and atrocities of every kind, so that at last they became more dangerous to the sultan than his foreign enemies. The latest officers of this force were the cooks, who were held in the greatest esteem. They were worked as spies in their turban and on great occasions mustered round their kettles, which they turned upside down as a sign of revolt. To have more of these Janissaries in battle was as much of a disgrace as the loss of a regiment's colors has been in later times.

Could Not Trust Him.

After a wily argument in which neither scored two friends decided to take of it. "It was correct," said the Washington Post, "that when either said 'I've caught' the light should go out. After that he had at it about ten minutes or so of them fell and immediately yelled: 'Enough! I've enough!' but his opponent kept on pounding him until a man who was watching them said: 'Why don't you let him up? He says he's got enough.'"
