Severe Congestion of the Kidneys
 Boon Curie's Doan's Kidney Pills
 Richard M. Pearce, a prominent business man of 231 So. Orange St., Newark, N. J., says: "Working nights during bad weather brought on a heavy cold, aching of the limbs and pain in the back and kidneys. Severe congestion of the kidneys followed. Boon Curie's Doan's Kidney Pills, which were whiffing headaches, and I became exceedingly weak. My doctor could not help me, and I turned to Doan's Kidney Pills, with the result that the kidney congestion disappeared and, with it, all the other symptoms. What is more, the cure has lasted for eight years."

Sold by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

SPLENDID OUTLOOK FOR LUCY.

Lover Had Bright Idea in Seeking Her Hand in Marriage.

When a boy, some sixty years ago, I lived in Windham, Conn. There was a queer character there named Daniel Kingsley, a cooper, renowned for his odd speeches, and the delight of the boys for his always ready to go hunting and fishing with them. When a young man he fell in love with one Lucy Smith, and, as was the custom in those days, he went to ask consent of her father. "Joash," he said, "I've been thinking I want to get married, and I have come to ask you if I can have Lucy."

The old man said: "Why, Daniel, what do you want a wife for? You can't support yourself."

Kingsley replied: "Well, I can almost, and it's a pity if Lucy can't help a little."

They were finally married and lived together many years, but it was always uphill work to get a living. After Daniel's death his wife had a small legacy left her, and some of her neighbors proposed she should get a grave stone for Daniel. She thought a few moments and then said: "I guess when the Lord wants Daniel he can find him without a guide board."

Students Starve in Paris.

Royal Welsh Fusiliers.

The Twenty-third Royal Welsh Fusiliers were nicknamed the "Nanny Goats" because from time immemorial the corps has possessed one of these animals at a regimental pet.

The Coffee Debate.

The published statements of a number of coffee importers and roasters indicate a "wasp" feeling towards us for daring to say that coffee is harmful to a percentage of the people.

A frank public discussion of the subject is quite agreeable to us and can certainly do no harm; on the contrary when all the facts on both sides of any question are spread before the people they can thereupon decide and act intelligently.

Give the people plain facts and they will take care of themselves.

We demand facts in this coffee discussion and propose to see that the facts are brought clearly before the people.

A number of coffee importers and roasters have joined a movement to boom coffee and stop the use of Postum Food Coffee and in their newspaper statements undertake to deceive by false assertions.

Their first is that coffee is not harmful.

We assert that in one every three coffee users has some form of incipient or chronic disease; realize for one moment what a terrible menace to a nation of civilized people, when one kind of beverage cripples the energies and health of one-third the people who use it.

We make the assertion advisedly and suggest that the reader secure his own proof by personal inquiry among coffee users.

Ask your coffee drinking friends if they keep free from any sort of aches and ails. You will be startled at the percentage and you will naturally seek to place the cause of disorder on something aside from coffee, whether food, inherited tendencies or something else.

Go deeper in your search for facts.

If your friend admits occasional neuralgia, rheumatism, heart weakness, stomach or bowel troubles, kidney complaint, weak eyes or approaching neuralgia, ask him or her to make the experiment of leaving off coffee for 10 days and using Postum Food Coffee, and observe the result. It will startle you and give your friend something to think of. Of course, if the person is one of the weak ones

WAS AMONG THE REAL RULERS.

Pompous Politician Outclassed in the Gaiety.

Senator Hennessey tells of an incident that took place during a political campaign in Iowa.

In one of the towns it had been arranged that, when the big orators of the day had said their say with reference to politics, there were to be a number of entertainments of the side-show variety to be held on the common.

A pompous politician, who had served a term in the state legislature, and was by reason of that fact on extremely good terms with himself, while endeavoring with a number of ladies to draw his way through a dense crowd that surrounded one of the shows, found himself unable to proceed further because of a bulky individual whom he could not trust to follow.

The politician tapped the offending one on the shoulder, saying as he did so: "Here! Make way there!"

"Who are you, that you should push me round that way?" demanded the native.

"A representative of the people, sir," exclaimed the politician indignantly.

The man grinned. "Oh, that ain't nothing," said he. "We folks here air the people themselves!"—New York Times.

Good Work in Beautifying Town.

In 1853 a woman in Stockbridge, Mass., founded the first village improvement society in America.

Stockbridge was only a shabby little town then, with a muddy road through it, a cemetery full of weeds, and a bare common, unshaded and trodden.

In a single year the place was transformed. Four hundred trees were planted, the road was made clean and attractive.

The history of this place is not unique. Wonders, miracles even, have been wrought in out-of-the-way spots. In one of the most hopeless towns in Georgia, a society was formed which began by planting a double row of trees along its central roadway.

This is now a handsome boulevard. The street is curbed with granite, grass has been made to grow and shrubs have been set out everywhere. Rural parks, churches draped with vines, and bow yards with one another in beauty all make the place an Eden.

With this town as an object lesson no one need despair of even the most forlorn little village.—Boston Transcript.

School Children of Japan.

No child goes to school in Japan under six years of age. Two hours a week are set apart to teach the child ethical knowledge and one hour for the study of etiquette—how to walk, bow, pour tea and hold the hands and fingers.

And says "I can't quit" you will have discovered one of the slaves of the coffee importer. Treat such kindly, for they seem absolutely powerless to stop the gradual but sure destruction of body and health.

Nature has a way of destroying a part of the people to make room for the stronger. It is the old law of the "survival of the fittest" at work, and the victims are many.

We repeat the assertion that coffee does harm many people, not all, but an army large enough to appal the investigator and searcher for facts.

The next preparation of the coffee importers and roasters is their statement that Postum Food Coffee is made of roasted peas, beans or corn, and mixed with a low grade of coffee and that it contains no nourishment.

We have previously offered to water $100,000.00 with them that their statements are absolutely false.

They have not accepted our water and they will not.

We will gladly make a present of $25,000.00 to any roaster or importer of old-fashioned coffee who will accept that water.

Free inspection of our factories and methods is made by thousands of people each month and the coffee importers, by their own invitation.

Both Postum and Grape-Nuts are absolutely pure and made exactly as stated.

The formula of Postum and the analysis made by one of the foremost chemists of Boston has been printed on every package for many years and is absolutely accurate.

Now as to the food value of Postum. It contains the parts of the wheat berry which carry the elemental salts such as lime, iron, potash, silica, etc., etc., used by the life forces to rebuild the cellular tissue, and this is particularly true of phosphate of potash, which is found in Grape-Nuts, which combines in the human body with albumen and this combination, together with water, rebuilds the worn-out gray matter of the delicate nerve centers all over the body and throughout the brain and spinal cord.

Ordinary coffee stimulates in a unnatural way, but with many people it weakens, and does so by depriving the body of the gray substance so vitally important to the well being of every human being.

These are eternal facts, proven, well known, and known to every properly educated physician, chemist and food expert.

TERRIBLE SCALP HUMOR.

Badly Affected With Sores and Crusts—Extended Down Behind the Ears.

Another Cure by Cuticura
 "About ten years ago my scalp became badly affected with sores and itching humors, crusts, etc., and extended down behind the ears. My hair came out in great quantities. I was greatly troubled; understood it was eccema. Tried various remedies so called, without effect. Saw your Cuticura advertisement, and got the Cuticura Remedies at once. Applied them as to directions, etc., and after two weeks I think, of use, was clear as a whistle. I have to state also that late last fall, October and November, 1904, I was suddenly attacked with a bad eruption, painful and itching patches of the lower part of the body. I suffered dreadfully, in two months, under the skillful treatment of my doctor, combined with Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, I found myself cured. H. M. F. Weiss, Rosemead, Christian Co., Ill., Aug. 11, 1905."

MAYBE HE QUOTED SOMETHING.

But It's Even Better Rates Were Not Mentioned.

Robert L. Burnap, general freight agent of the Central Vermont railroad, is an enthusiastic Dartmouth man, who, however, always places business first and college second, contrary to the custom of some of his fellow young alumni.

After the Dartmouth-Harvard football game last fall some of them kept Burnap out of bed as long as possible discussing the result. Then they gave him an hour in which to get well settled in bed and called him by telephone at his hotel room.

"Is this Mr. Burnap?"

"Yes."

"General freight agent of the Central Vermont railroad?"

"Yes."

"Pardon me, Mr. Burnap, but have you the power to quote rates?"

"Yes."

"Now, at this hour in the morning can you quote me a rate?"

"Thank you. Please give me, then, your lowest rate from Kalamazoo to Keokuk, over the Central Vermont, on four humming birds and two pink jacks."

—London Mail.

A Good-Sized Manure Spreader.

After five years' experience with a manure spreader I think this machine one of the most profitable machines on the farm. Within a radius of five miles of me there are ten or twelve machines and they are increasing in number here every year. One man with a spreader can haul out more manure and spread it better than two men with a wagon can after following the old style of spreading manure.

The works that make the best is of course, rotted manure, but it is a good plan to mix the different kinds of manure, as it spreads more easily and so what both kinds of it will do a considerable amount of litter in manure does not increase the difficulty of handling it unless the manure has been heated up or burned up largely.

The unless it is well shaken it will come off in flakes once in a while, but will not make much trouble if properly handled. The weight of my machine is about 1,000 lbs. I use two horses and would not think of getting a smaller machine, nor would I recommend any man to get a small one.

To Keep Down Weeds.

In keeping down weeds I find it best to cultivate as long as possible, and sometimes when the weeds are very persistent we sow now peas in the corn fields, as these cow peas are very persistent and improve the soil by adding nitrogen to it. We have been troubled some with the morning glory or bind weed. We find that a thorough cultivation keeps it away, but another means is to turn in sheep which will keep it eaten to the root.

His results in the root digging. We have very few weeds in our small garden field, but frequently have a good many in our hay meadows. If they are so abundant in the hay as to reduce its value we pick them out of the swaths and burn them. Pull them out of the field sometimes before we cut the hay. The latter process is preferred. The most troublesome weeds in this locality are cockle bur, four o'clock, and red top.

The state law regarding weeds is in this locality a dead letter.—Joseph R. Fulkerson, Jersey Co., Ill.

Refinement in Hogs.

Refinement in hogs is a quality that has been much sought and much asked for, but generally it means a disease of bones, brittles and other like things. The breeding for fineness has been carried so far in some breeds that it has reduced the value of the animal. This fact is now being learned by the breeders that have been working most for refinement in hogs. There is a point beyond which the breeder cannot go safely in producing fancy points.

The Growing of Missouri Corn.

How to grow Missouri corn was the subject of a day's discussion at the Farmers' Institute in Columbia, Mo. recently. H. J. Waters, dean of the Agricultural College, opened the discussion. Keep plant food on the soil, he urged. More manure, stop the prodigious waste, and systematic rotation. An elastic rotation is best, but systematic, rule-like rotation is better than the present Missouri plan of no rotation. At least one year in four use clover, and as little timothy as possible. Barnyard manure is the best fertilizer. Commercial fertilizers can only be used with profit in Missouri upon this or worst land, not upon black prairie land. The fertilizers should have liberal quantity of nitrate and cheap phosphorus. Little can be done by the farmer to improve the soil, but he can do much to prevent the loss of fertility. Between necessary work is done in husking corn. The thickness of plant should vary with the richness of land. Suckers develop on various conditions. Experiments have shown for every 100 plants, 4 stalks in a hill, 8 suckers; 3 in a hill, 25 suckers; 2 in a hill, 100 suckers. Some varieties of corn have more suckers than others. Dent corn has the least. Tillage is for two purposes: First, to keep down weeds; second, to conserve moisture. If land is properly prepared there is no need to stir the soil for root growth. Shallow tillage does not kill the weeds.

Dr. Waters' address brought out considerable discussion. He thought the man a criminal who destroyed plant food on his farm. Joseph K. Wing of Ohio said the manure spreader was a more useful vehicle on the farm than a carriage. "If no blackbirds follow along the furrow I know something's wrong. If my boy can't get enough fishing worms in a week, I know my manure humus is needed in the land."

George H. Sly of Rockport had for his subject "How Can the Farmer Secure Good Seed?" Mr. Sly emphasized the importance of good seed as a factor in increasing the corn yield. There are two ways, he said, of securing good seed. One is by maintaining a seed plot and the other is by selecting eight or ten ears of corn, to be planted in a separate field, preferably on the east or southeast side. If you haven't good seed, said Mr. Sly, go to your neighbor and get some. Let new varieties alone. The problem will be solved," he concluded, "by the establishment of corn breeding farms throughout the state."

Keeps Horses From Straying.

Icelanders have a strange but effective plan for preventing horses from straying away. They tilt the head of one horse to the tail of another, and the head of this to the tail of the former. In this state it is impossible for the horses to move on, either backward or forward. If disposed to move at all, it will be only in a circle, and even then there must be mutual agreement to turn their heads the same way.

Honiton lace is made at Honiton, in Devonshire, Eng., remarkable for the beauty of its figure and sprigs. "Honiton application" is a lace made by working sprays, flowers and other parts of a pattern on the lace pillow and securing them to a net ground made separately. In modern manufacture hand-made sprays are often sewed upon a machine-made ground. "Honiton gimpure" is a lace of larger flower patterns, with a very open ground, which is generally sold under the name of Honiton lace.

Winston Churchill, the English author, has brought upon himself considerable amount of good-natured criticism on account of a ponderous phrase he invented. In speaking of an untruthful statement made by a politician, an opponent he referred to it as a "terminological inexactitude." One writer says that should other authors follow Mr. Churchill's example they may perpetrate the same error. This is the revised version of the George Washington cherry tree story: "Paternal progenitor, I am constitutionally and fundamentally incapable of excoGITating, ratiocinating or insinuating a terminological inexactitude."

It would not be advisable for the average man to follow the example of Gabriele D'Annunzio in the matter of traveling outfit. Recently on a journey D'Annunzio took fourteen trunks and an Italian newspaper had the enterprise to make an inventory of their contents with the following result in part: Seventy-two shirts, 144 pairs of plain socks, twenty-four pairs of silk socks, forty-eight pairs of day gloves, twenty-four pairs of evening gloves, eight silk muffers, eight velvet umbrellas, ten green parasols, twenty dozen handkerchiefs and 100 colored cravats.

The late Susan B. Anthony was a great friend of the young reporter. She had a keen news sense and lost no time in giving facts to the latest viewer. At one time, a young man from the West had been given a trial on a Washington paper and was told to knock around town and see what he could find. There was some sort of a woman's convention there, so he hunted up Miss Anthony and threw himself at her mercy. She told him at once all about the convention and its work, the result being that he was permanently engaged next day and is now a leading correspondent.

Farming as a Makeshift.

Australia has repeatedly turned down various schemes for developing her territory with the aid of assisted immigrants. Her objection seems to be based on the action that the upshot of such a movement by philanthropists would be to turn loose upon her a horde of paupers. Canada, however, has decided to welcome 250 families of the unemployed which is a generous banker will send out from England at his own expense. People who have the misfortune to be unemployed and who are willing to be assisted to new homes are not necessarily paupers in the usual sense of the word. But there is prospect of their becoming helpless if transplanted from native environment to conditions for which they are in every way unsuited by habit and training. An incompetent person in the country is in a most hopeless and distressing situation. Men who can turn their hands to farm work and who will take all the rough knocks of the land tiller's life can thrive in Australia or Canada of anywhere else. Factory hands and those of desultory employments do not break into the agricultural harness readily or if they do will not stick to the plow long enough to make the effort worth while. Now and then a town bred immigrant who has the energy to strike out for himself succeeds as a tiller of the soil, but the chances are heavily against a man who is assisted to the land simply because he cannot get along where nature planted him.

The Circus to "Come to Town" Again. If the railway rate reform bill depends upon ballots cast by the young folks of the country, all the way from the spooning, peanut and gingerbread age down to kids in short clothes, it would go under at the first round. Cause why, the circus. Railway transportation rates for circuses have vaulted so high the shows can stand it and will return to wagons, with exhibitions at all the towns on the route instead of the widely scattered cities.

This going back to horse power for circus transportation means, of course, that the circus of the future, like the circus of our daddies, will really "come to town" from the open country past "our house" or past the house of our cousins on the other road, and we can see the whole mysterious congeries un-loaded and set up and afterward torn down and loaded up. And we can spend the money that has been going into railway fares to visit city shows in peanuts, lemonade and gingerbread right at home. Once more childhood's event of the year will open with the spectacle of trees and fences for miles out on the road occupied by expectant boys and girls, barefooted and freckled, and the day after there will be smart and aches of scratches and stone bruises mingled with fading visions of the clown, the dancing horses and the "Wild Man of Boronia." So railroad rates may soar and stay soared if thereby the traveling circus is brought back to primitive ways of getting in and out of town.

Advertising pays if done right. The REVIEW is the right medium.

Murphy was a Chicago visitor Monday. Edward Lindblad of Chicago called on friends here Sunday. F. L. Carr transacted business in the city Monday. Miss Nina Pratt is spending the week with Chicago friends. Lee Brown of Barrington spent Sunday at his home here. Chas. Dowell has recovered from a recent attack of rheumatism. Chas. Hanson of Chicago was the guest of Mrs. A. Graham Sunday. H. E. Madman and Miss Vera Geary were McHenry visitors Sunday. Dr. C. W. Swales transacted business in the city a few days of this week. Mrs. H. T. Graham visited with Barrington relatives the first of the week. Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Lamphere are the proud parents of a 12 pound baby boy, born Saturday, March 24. Moore, Langbeil and Eshkine Oakes of Chicago called on their mother "Aunt Lavina" Oakes, the first of the week. Mrs. Oakes is rapidly recovering from a severe illness. M. L. Ford returned Monday from a few days' visit with Chicago relatives. Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Schendorf visited with relatives at Highland Park the first of the week. An Easter ball will be given in the Oakland hall Monday evening, Feb. 16. Everybody is cordially invited. What Gen. Sherman said about "War" will just about fit the condition of the roads in this vicinity. Chester and Earl Golding, students at Bobst College and Academy, respectively, are enjoying a week's vacation at their home here. Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Welch and daughter, Esther, of Waukegan, visited with relatives in our village and vicinity Wednesday and Thursday. Mrs. A. Graham, Miss Lillian Tidmarsh, John Groves, and Jas. Halpin, of this place, and Paul Ray of Diamond Lake, left Tuesday for Mackenzie Co., N. Dak., where they will reside upon their claims the required length of time to prove up on them. Mrs. Mary Starin died at her home about three miles from our village on Saturday evening, at the age of 62 years. She had been in very poor health for several years, and death finally came as a welcome end to her sufferings. The funeral was held Tuesday from the Catholic church, Rev. Fr. Woulfe officiating, and interment was made in the Catholic cemetery. We extend our deepest sympathy to the bereaved relatives.

THE GREAT K. & A. TRAIN ROBBERY

BY PAUL LEXINGTON FORD, Author of 'The Hotter Streets of Chicago'

"Miss Cullen," I said, gravely, "you have those letters, and must give them to me."

"But I told you—she began.

To spare her a second untruth, I interrupted her by saying, "I trapped your brother into acknowledging that you have them."

"You must have misunderstood him," she replied, calmly, "or else he didn't know that the arrangement was changed."

Her steadiness rather shocked my conviction, but I said, "You must give me those letters, or I must search you."

"You never would!" she cried, rising and looking me in the face.

On impulse I tried a big bluff. I took hold of the lapel of her waist, intending to undo just one button. I let go in fright when I found there was no button—only an awful complication of hooks or some other feminine method of keeping things together—and I grew red and trembled, thinking what might have happened had I, by bad luck, made anything come undone.

If Miss Cullen had been noticing me, she would have seen a terribly scared man.

But she wasn't, luckily, for the moment my hand touched her dress, and before she could realize that I snatched it away, she collapsed on the rock, and burst into tears.

"Oh, oh!" she sobbed, "I begged papa not to, but he insisted they were safe with me. I'll give them to you, if they're only away and not—"

Her tears made her inarticulate, and without waiting for more I ran into the hut, feeling as near like a murderer as a gullible man could.

Lord Ralles by this time was making almost as much noise as an engine pulling a heavy freight train under forced draft, swearing over his trousers, and was offering the cowboy and Hance money to recover them. When they told him this was impossible he tried to get them to sell or hire a pair, but they didn't like the idea of riding into camp minus those essentials any better than he did.

While I waited they settled the difficulty by strapping a blanket around him, and by splitting it up the middle and using plenty of cord they rigged him out after a fashion; but I think if he could have seen himself and been given an option he would have preferred to wait till it was dark enough to creep into camp unnoticed.

Before long Miss Cullen called, and when I went to her she handed me, without a word, three letters. As he did so she crimsoned violently, and looked down in her mortification. I was so sorry for her that, though a moment before I had been judging her harshly, I now couldn't help saying, "Your positions have been so difficult, Miss Cullen, that I don't think either of us is quite responsible for our actions."

She said nothing, and after a pause, I continued:

"I hope you'll think as leniently of my conduct as you can, for I can't tell you how grieved I am to have pained you."

Cullen joined us at this point, and, knowing that every moment we remained would be distressing to his sister, I announced that we would start up the trail. I hadn't time to offer to help her to mount, and after Frederic had put her up we fell into single file behind Hance, Lord Ralles coming last.

As soon as we started I took a look at the three letters. They all were addressed to Theodore E. Camp, Esq., Ash Forks, Arizona—one of the discriminated violently and looked down in her mortification.

rectors of the K. & A. and also of the Great Southern. With this clue, for the first time this being so clear to me, and when the trail broadened enough to permit it, I pushed my mule up alongside of Cullen and asked:

"The letters contain proxies for the K. & A. election next Friday?"

He nodded his head. "The Missouri Western and the Great Southern are fighting for control," he explained, "and we should have won but for three blocks of Eastern stock that had promised their proxies to the G. S. Rather than lose the fight, we arranged to learn when those proxies were mailed—and then to hold up the train behind—and then to hold up the train that carried them."

"Was it worth the risk?" I ejaculated.

"If we had succeeded, yes. My father had put more than was safe into Missouri Western and into California Central. The G. S. wants control over the traffic agreement, and that means bankruptcy to my father."

I nodded, seeing it all clear to me. "I wouldn't wonder if it was so," I said, and hardly blaming the Cullens for what they had done; for any one who has dealings with the G. S. is driven to pretty desperate methods to keep from being an antagonist that won't regard the law, or rather one that, through control of legislatures and judges, makes the law to suit its needs, the G. S. is going to use the same weapons one's self."

"The toughest part of it is," Fred went on, "that though we had the whole thing 'hands down,' and that was what we wanted, we were delayed in the obtaining of letters of administration, blocking his executors from giving proxy. It was as mean a trick as ever was played."

"Oh, certainly," I said, "I'm right," I remarked. "A tough customer to deal with, and a real 'big game' didn't you burn the letters?" really wishing they had done so.

"We feared duplicate proxies might get through in time, and thought that by keeping them might cook up a question as to which were legal, and then by injunction prevent the use of either."

"And those Englishmen," I inquired, "are they real?"

"Oh, certainly," he rejoined. "They were visiting my brother, and thought the whole thing great larks." Then he told me how the thing had been done. They had sent Miss Cullen to my car, so as to get me out of the way, though she didn't know it. At the last stop, with guns and masks, and concealed themselves on the platform of the mailcar. Here they had been joined by the Britishers at the right moment, the disguise assumed, and the train held up as already told. Of course the dynamite cartridge was only a bluff, and the letters had been thrown about the car merely to confuse the clerks. Then while Frederic Cullen, with the letters, had stolen back to the car, the two Englishmen had crept back to where they had stood. Here, as had been arranged, they opened fire, which Albert Cullen duly returned, and then joined them. "I don't see now how you spotted us," Frederic ended.

I told him, and his disgust was amusing to see. "Going to Oxford may be all right for classics," he growled, "but it's destructive to gunplay."

We rode into camp a pretty gloomy crowd, and the rest of the party waiting for us there were not much better; but when Lord Ralles dismounted and showed up in his substitute for trousers there was a general shout of laughter. Even Miss Cullen had to laugh for a moment. And as his lordship bolted for his tent, I said to myself, "Honors are easy."

I told the sheriff that I had recovered the lost property, and he did not think any arrests necessary as yet; and as he was the agent of the K. & A. at Flagstaff, he didn't question my opinion. I ordered the stage out, and told Frederic to drive me back to camp.

We started a little after five, and were clear of the timber before it was too dark to see. At the relay station we waited an hour for the moon, after which it was, clear, "back."

We reached the halfway ranch about eleven, and while changing the stage horses I roused Mrs. Klostermeyer, and succeeded in getting enough cold turkey and bread to make two rather decent-looking sandwiches. With these and a glass of whiskey and water I went to the stage, to find Miss Cullen curled up on the seat asleep, her head resting in her brother's arms.

"She has nearly worried herself to death ever since you told her that road agents were hung," Frederic whispered, "and she has been up all night over the lie she told you, and altogether she's worn out with travel and excitement."

I screwed the cover on the traveling glass, and put the car in the bottom of the stage. "It's a long and a rough ride," I said, "and if she wakes up they may give her a little strength. I only wish I could have spared her the fatigue and anxiety."

"She thought she had to lie for father's sake, but she's nearly broken-hearted over it," he continued.

I looked Frederic in the face. "I said, 'I honor you for it,' and in that moment he and I became friends."

"Just see how pretty she is!" he whispered, with evident affection and pride, turning back the flap of the rug in which she was wrapped.

She was breathing pretty, and there was just that touch of weariness and sadness in her face that would appeal to me as the face of a girl. I'm proud to say; and when I was back on my pony, I said to myself, "For her sake, I'll pull the Cullens out of this scrape, if it costs me my position."

CHAPTER VII.

A Change of Base.

We did not reach Flagstaff till seven, and I told the stage-load to take possession of their car, while I went to my own. It took me some time to get freshened up, and then I ate my breakfast; for after riding seventy-two miles in one night even the most heroic purposes have to take the side-track.

I think, as it was, I proved my devotion pretty well by not going to sleep, since I had been up three nights, with only such naps as I could steal in the saddle, and had ridden over a hundred and fifty miles to boot. But I couldn't bear to think of Miss Cullen's anxiety, and the moment I had made myself decent, and snatched eating, I went into 218.

The party were all in the dining-room, but it was a very different-looking crowd from the one with which that first breakfast had been eaten, and they all looked at me as if I were the executioner come for victims.

"Mr. Cullen," I began, "I've been forced to do a lot of things that weren't pleasant, but I don't want to do more than I need. You're not the ordinary kind of road agents, and as I presume your address is known, I don't see any need of arresting one of our own directors as yet. All I ask is that you give me your word, for the party, that none of you will try to leave the country."

"Certainly," Mr. Gordon, he responded. "And I thank you for your great consideration."

"I shall have to report the case to our president, and I suppose, to the postmaster-general, but I shan't hurry about either. What they will do, I can't forecast. Perhaps you show how far you can keep them quiet."

"I think the local authorities are all I have to fear, provided time is given me."

Making Sure of Their Shoes.

They were on a slumming expedition. Two cheap cozy establishments had been graced by their presence, and they thought they were seeing much of the under world. They had drifted down State street and had the boldness to enter a saloon that was much frequented by the police, and where means, and the sight which met their gaze was a peculiar one. They saw twenty or thirty negroes asleep. They were sitting in chairs and the chairs leaned against the wall. But the peculiar fact was that all were without shoes. In a moment they saw the shoes on the floor. And a leg of a chair stood in each.

"How peculiar," queried one.

"Yep," was the short answer of one of the proprietors.

"Why do they place the chairs legs in their shoes?"

"Very simple. If they didn't they wouldn't have any shoes. We don't guarantee the honesty of our customers."

"And if they slept with their shoes on?"

"Some man with a poorer pair than them off."

"And if they stood them near the chair?"

"Some envious man would take them off."

"How do you explain the shoes on the floor?"

"That's the best answer of one of the proprietors."

An Old-School Head.

Capt. Ryan, the new British naval attaché, said at a dinner in Washington:

"The strength of the heads of some of our old-school farmers is quite incredible."

"At harvest supper, a 'vast' similar in its way to your Thanksgiving dinner, there was an old farmer who drank a good deal of champagne. The moment his glass was filled he would shout 'It's over, and then, of course, it would be filled again."

"But the old fellow grew quieter and quieter, the more champagne he drank. A frown settled on his forehead. His eyes flashed angrily under his heavy gray brows."

"Finally when the waiter filled his glass for the twelfth or thirteenth time, he shook his head and said: 'I don't care if you're going to put the whiskey on the table! These minerals are getting tedious!'"

Criticism.

"What is your favorite poem?"

"I haven't any," answered Mr. Cumrox. "Poetry always strikes me as merely an effort on the author's part to show off how much he knows about capital letters and punctuation marks."

Evidence of Reckless Bravery.

She—Do you believe me as I have done as the case to be?

He—Sure! Just see the poetry some men write now.

ILLINOIS STATE NEWS

FIND NEW CLEW IN POISON CASE

Insane Man Is Wanted by Officials in St. Charles Mystery.

A new turn was taken in the poison mystery, which caused the death of Mrs. Anderson, when a detective in the state's attorney's office at St. Charles wired Chief Collins of Chicago to help locate a certain man said to be insane and to the office of the state's attorney at St. Charles.

About the Anderson home nearly two weeks ago, it is believed, though no statement has been given out, that the insane man is suspected of having some knowledge of the affair. H. M. Gordon of the Northwestern Pharmacy school reported to Acting Coroner Hempstead that he had discovered traces of strychnine poisoning in Mrs. Anderson's stomach, and suggested that an analysis be made at once. The embalmers declare there was no strychnine in the fluid used by them and the state's attorney has ordered a post mortem be made at once.

BANKERS' RULE TO BE TESTED

Court to Pass on Charge Made for Collecting Out of Town Checks.

The Illinois Manufacturers' association, through its secretary, J. M. Glenn, has notified the Chicago clearing house committee that legal proceedings will be begun without delay to test the bankers' rule of charging for collections out of town checks.

The association rejected the clearing house offer of a one-third reduction in the check collection rates, and drew up a resolution providing that the association's counsel would be instructed immediately to proceed with the institution of a test case. The case will be a friendly one, it is said, and will be brought to an speedy termination as possible. A copy of the resolutions was sent to James B. Forgan, president of the First National bank, chairman of the clearing house committee, which has the collection matter in hand.

ENGLISH NOBLEMAN ENDS LIFE

George Barton, Semi-Recluse, Found Dead, Rifle in Hand.

George Sykes Barton, an English nobleman who came to Winchester county in the '90s, and who has since led the life of a semi-recluse, was found dead in a bed with a bullet hole in his head and a rifle clamped in his fingers. The coroner's jury returned a verdict of suicide. Letters bearing out the theory of suicide, were sent to the state's attorney at Winchester for the disposition of his property, valued at $50,000 to $100,000. Stories often repeated that Barton was an English lord, and drew here because of an unfortunate love affair, were reiterated after his death, and it is believed that sorrow, long borne in silence, finally induced the man to take his own life. Several years ago it was established that he was heir to a large estate in England and a peer of that realm.

Class of Forty to Graduate.

The Peoria University of the Sacred Heart school will hold Monday evening, June 11, the speaker to be Dr. George E. Vincent of the University of Chicago. Class day exercises will be held. The program consisted, in an original play, entitled "The Duke of Venice," being an up-to-date version of the Shakespearean drama. The class is the largest ever graduated from the school, comprising twenty-two girls and eighteen boys.

Slayer Is Released.

Harry Haaran, the slayer of Meent De Vries, was released by the police of Peoria. Meent De Vries's jury had returned a verdict of justifiable homicide. Evidence at the inquest corroborated the story told by Haaran that at the time of the shooting De Vries was charging the revolver with one hand while with the other he was trying to brain Mrs. Ann Haaran with a hatchet. De Vries left an estate of $10,000.

Secures Supreme Court Site.

The condemnation proceedings brought by Gov. Densen to secure a site for the new Supreme Court building at Springfield have all been disposed of, with the exception of the one against the Fifth street institution. The case against Myers & Van Duyn has been dismissed and the case of Mrs. Marie Unverzagt has been compromised. The estimated cost of the property varies from $22,000 to $23,000.

Mistakes Man for Goose.

Mistaking the form of Charles Neal of North Chicago, charity hider, behind a fence near Five Points, near Waukegan, for a goose, William Luedke fired two charges of bird shot into the former's body. Though serious wounds, it is believed that Neal will recover.

Raise Price for Hauling Coal.

Because of the condition of the roads, it was stated that the railroad men have raised the price of hauling coal from 2 cents a bushel to 4 cents, and in some places they refuse to haul at any price.

Pull Trigger With Toe.

George Doerffler, a well-known farmer, residing five miles southwest of Duquoin, committed suicide by lying on the edge of the bed, leaning against the barrel of a shotgun and discharging the gun with his toe.

SAVES BIRDS FROM STARVING

Relief From Winter Extended by the State Game Warden.

The heavy snow of last week had almost doomed Illinois game birds to death from starvation, when the state game warden, James A. Wheeler, ordered his deputies to feed the birds as fast as possible. A number of men were sent to the open fields from Mattoon by Deputy Warden J. R. McCall, and as they came to the favorite haunts of the birds supplies were left. Large quantities of oats and cracked corn were distributed. The operation was repeated on two succeeding days. Lured north by the balmy weather, the ducks found snow and ice after reaching Illinois. The rivers and lakes were frozen, and the birds were hunters think they will remain until the sun strikes their backs, permitting them to course northward in safety. Such conditions make the chances for nilruds the finest in years.

ORGANIZE ROCKFORD CITY CLUB

Chicago Sons of Enterprising Town Launch Social Society.

Sons of Rockford have effected the permanent organization of the Rockford Club of Chicago. Although the club has been in existence for almost ten years, its organization was of an informal nature. Charles E. Hendrick, for five years president of the informal organization, was made the first president of the permanent organization. Edward B. Witmer was elected vice president, and Case, Jr., was elected secretary and treasurer. H. C. Kellogg, the former secretary and treasurer, was nominated and elected to succeed himself, but declined to serve and his resignation was accepted. The following are the members of the executive committee: J. M. Ferguson, Andrew Rutledge, H. E. St. John, William McKee, R. P. Harner.

GRAFT IN CREAM FOR HOSPITAL

Employee of Illinois Insane Asylum and Dealer Accused of Theft.

T. E. Foster, superintendent of the milk plant at the Illinois Eastern Insane hospital at Kankakee, and Bayard Taylor, a local milk dealer, are sought by officers of the law on the charge of graft in the sale of cream at the state institution. Supt. J. C. Corbus discovered recently that the hospital was losing considerable cream. A system of espionage was established by the result that Taylor and Taylor, who is an ex-hospital employee, were accused. A man in hiding saw Taylor drive up to the hospital milkhouse and unload two cans of milk. After the milk was loaded, two other men, presumably employees, into Taylor's wagon. Investigation, however, showed the cans contained cream.

Tack Causes Explosion.

A carpet tack, caught between two wheels, caused a spark that resulted in the blowing up of the works of the Phoenix Power and Light Co. at the east of East St. Louis, Saturday afternoon. John Nash, 58 years old, and Edward Higginbotham, 24 years old, were killed, and Thomas J. Tolfar was hurt. The building was rained, parts being scattered all over the surrounding country. Nash was running the machine which caused the lighting spark. After the accident a tack was found in the core of the demolished machine and experts at the factory said there was no doubt but that it caused the explosion.

Must Name Delegates April 28.

Attorney General Stead has rendered an opinion that delegates to county conventions and primary conventions can only be chosen at the primary election April 28. This was in answer to a letter of inquiry from Kinderhook township, where republican voters of Kinderhook township, at a caucus held March 17, 1906, elected delegates to the county convention and primary committee.

Charleston Coal famine.

The people of Charleston and many smaller towns in that locality are facing a coal famine that promises to be serious. Coal receipts from the mines have practically stopped, the railroad companies confiscating any cars that are ordered and started. Dealers are refusing to sell any customer more than a half ton, and nearly every bin in town is empty or soon will be.

Telephone Exchanges Consolidate.

A deal has been closed whereby the independent telephone exchanges of Peoria, Barton and Kansas have been consolidated under the name of the Embarras Telephone company. The principal stockholders are John Henn of Redmon, E. N. Blair of Barton and J. A. Arvick of Kansas. The latter being the general manager of the consolidation.

Engineer Is Fatally Hurt.

Engineer Potts, running Burlington express train No. 6 struck his head on a semaphore while passing Plank. The fireman discovered him unconscious some afternoon and brought the train safely to Aurora.

Trustee of Southern Normal.

Gov. Densen has appointed J. M. Burkhardt of Marion, Williamson county, trustee of the Southern Illinois Normal school at Carbondale, vice Samuel P. Wheeler of Springfield, resigned.

BROUGHT HIM DOWN TO EARTH.

Public Printer Stillings' Encounter With Senator Dick.

It is getting to be almost as difficult to reach Public Printer Stillings in Washington as it is to get speech with the president. The Boston man has given strict orders to hold up all who would intrude upon his privacy, even if they come on public business. The other day a man got into the sacred precincts unannounced and Mr. Stillings roared at him: "How did you get in here?" The visitor did not seem to be much alarmed and instead of replying asked another question: "Are you the public printer?" Mr. Stillings again demanded: "I want to know how you got in here. The caller replied calmly: "If you are the public printer I would like to introduce myself and possibly make a few remarks about how to act like a gentleman. My name is Dick. I am from Ohio and happen to be a senator with business here." Whereupon the public printer lost all of his anger and most of his dignity.

FOUNDER OF RED CROSS DYING.

Henri Dunant One of the Greatest Benefactors of Humanity.

Henri Dunant, founder of the Red Cross movement, is dying at his home near Lake Constance, Switzerland. Dunant spent his entire fortune on the Red Cross.

The Red Cross societies are the result of an agitation begun by Mr. Jean Henri Dunant, after he had chanced to witness the battle of Solferino, on June 24, 1859.

The great suffering of the wounded soldiers and the inability of the surgeons to care for the thousands who lay helpless on the field greatly affected this philanthropist, and he published a book which vividly described the horrors of war and suggested the formation of societies to train nurses to assist upon the battlefield and in military hospitals.

An agitation was immediately begun, and at the international conference in Geneva in August, 1864, the Geneva convention was indorsed and fourteen nations formed Red Cross societies. The number has now been increased to forty-three.

Dunant spent his entire fortune on this work, and has since been living on a pension, given him by the Empress of Russia, and his share of the Nobel peace prize, which he received in 1901.

MORE MONEY FOR POSTOFFICE.

Increase in Appropriation for Coming Year Is $10,000,000.

There is perhaps no other branch of our national administration in which the people feel so direct and intimate a proprietorship as in the postoffice department. The new appropriation bill for that service carries in round numbers a total of about $191,000,000, or an increase over the total of the present year of $10,000,000. The chairman of the committee on postoffice and post roads states that while the amount carried is greater than ever before the percentage of increase is lower than for any year in the last decade. In that time the average yearly increase has been 6.4 per cent, while this year it is only 5.7 per cent. The largest item of increase is that for rural free delivery. The expenditures for the current year in that branch has been $25,000,000 and for the new year $28,000,000 has been authorized—New Orleans Picayune.

Artist-Prize Is Kept Dismy.

One of the busiest men in Virginia is the artist-prize, Rev. Johannes A. Gertel of Vienna, Fairfax county. Known everywhere as the painter of the world-famous picture, "The Rock of Ages." Although in his eighty-third year, he goes to his studio every morning about dawn and works until twilight. He is just sending off to Swanton, Tenn., an installment of paintings to be placed over the altar in the chapel now being built for the use of the students of his theological seminary by Mrs. Telfair Hodgson, nee a niece of his father-in-law, Vice Chancellor Hodgson.

Coloring Matter in Water.

Prof. J. J. A. Belgum, who has been studying the causes of color in water, under various conditions, says that if water otherwise entirely pure contains one part in every ten million of ferric hydrate, an iron compound, it will turn green, where the depth is considerable. With less than one part of ferric hydrate in every twenty million it will be blue. But less than one part of the ferric hydrate in every forty million will make the blue tint of water disappear.

The Portia club met at the home of Miss Florence Peck Thursday evening, the topic being "Girls' Interests and Occupations." Readings on this subject were given by some of the members and a couple of musical numbers were also given. Light refreshments were served.

Charles Vermilya's run is now from Chicago to Lake Forest and return and two night runs from Chicago to Des Plaines and return, as passenger busman on the North-Western—Sundays Herald.

The Chorus class lately organized by Prof. Stackman is growing in numbers and interest. Every day new members are added to the class at each session and the entire class is pleased and delighted with the work.

In our last week's account of the program rendered by the Mission Band in the Salem church, Sunday evening, March 11th, one number was overlooked. It was an excellent reading entitled "Queen's Call," given by Miss Louie of Chicago. The lady pleased her audience immensely.

The month of February was a banner one for the Modern Woodmen in Illinois, according to the report of Dr. J. A. Rutledge, head physician. Two thousand two hundred and ninety-one applications were received, an increase of 120 over January. Of this number 2,141 were approved.

Albert G. Gieske, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Gieske, graduated from the Chicago Veterinary College Thursday evening. Mr. Gieske stood high in his examinations and was very popular with his classmates, being president of the class. He intends to locate in Barrington, and open an office at once. Bert is a capable boy, in whose integrity confidence can be placed, and will make a success of his profession.

An exchange says: "A Kingston fellow looked through the bible to find scripture to justify him in using tobacco and found but one passage. It is found in the last chapter of Revelations and in the second sentence of the eleventh verse, and we'll bet some of the old sinners who use tobacco and haven't looked in a Bible for ten years, will read that verse within five minutes after reading this paper."

Dinner was a little late. A guest asked the host to play something. Seating herself at the piano, the good woman executed a Chopin nocturne with precision. She finished and there was still an interval of waiting to be bridged. In the grim silence she turned to an old gentleman on her right and said: "Would you like a sonata before dinner?" He gave a start of surprise and pleasure. "Why, yes, thanks," he said. "I had a couple on my way here, but I think I could stand another."

QUENTIN'S CORNERS.

Mrs. J. G. Bauer is at present under the doctor's care. L. Kassel made a three day's business call at Chicago last week. Fred Laufenburger of Texas is here visiting relatives and friends.

Belvidere, Ill.

English Towns.

That there are many instances in England of two or more towns enjoying the same name is a fact that nobody can well be knowing but probably few people are aware of the very large extent to which this duplication of names prevails. Newton seems to hold the same rank among places as South and Northwich, no fewer than seventy-two towns and villages in England alone bearing this name. By including the Newtons, obviously the same name with a slight difference in spelling, the total is raised to little short of ninety. As every town must have been a "new town" at some time or other it shows a great lack of inventive genius among our ancestors who had the naming of the towns. There are sixty-eight places named Sutton. Our ancestors seem to have found the four points of the compass of great service in the nomenclature of their towns, for besides the Suttons there are fifty-one Westons, forty-nine Nortons and seventeen Eastons. To these last should be added thirty-eight Atons, another form of the name very common in the west of England.—London Chronicle.

A Domestic Treasure.

Sir Squire Bancroft in proposing the health of the bishop of London told a story in his humble way. A charming young damsel came to London to visit an aunt, who probably came originally from Scotland, for when the young lady was leaving in a cab for home (just now) she said: "You don't pay me more than I shall find. It's his legal fare." Arrived at her destination, the young lady sprang out, bowed lady-like and bounded up the steps of the house.

"Don't say so!" called caddy. "Kin I ask you a question?" "Yes you may." "Well, are you married?" "No," she cried, indignantly. "Not yet!" "Well, won't you be a good girl to get a treasure for me? I ever seen a girl so good make a job as further or do more 'and work nor you, miss?"—London Mail.

The Right Doctor.

In Haverhill, Mass., according to the Boston Herald, there used to live two doctors of the same surname. Dr. Benjamin E. Sawyer was a physician with a large practice. Dr. Natha Sawyer was a veterinarian. A man named Jones, after a week or more of ill-luck, was very sick, and his wife, becoming alarmed, sent the hired man for Dr. Sawyer. The hired man brought the wrong Sawyer, the veterinarian. Dr. Nathan explained to the wife that he was skilled only in the diseases of horses, cattle and other animals. "I guess you can prescribe all right in this case," replied Mrs. Jones. "Jones is a jackass."
