FRED HAWLEY PASSES AWAY

For Many Years a Prominent Citizen in the Improvement of Our Village.

When Frederick E. Hawley departed this life Tuesday morning, September 19th, there passed beyond a man whose genial disposition and courteous manners will be long remembered and missed in Barrington. Mr. Hawley spent his life here and was one of the best known men in a radius of twenty miles; always prominent in affairs, business, civic and social. To his credit will be placed many acts resulting in good for Barrington and Barrington township. His knowledge of political affairs was generally respected and he was well versed in all things agricultural, having always taken an active interest in his farming property, although a town resident.

Barrington has grown slowly according to its age, but to a few men, some dead, some living, is due much praise for ever encouraging and assisting in the development of the village. In this list of names, Mr. Hawley's ranks notably.

During his regime as president of the village board a great deal of good street work was done in the way of widening, extending and opening, among them being Washington, Liberty, Lake, Station and others. Mr. Hawley personally named Grove avenue. Graves were also established for walks and streets.

Fred E. Hawley was born at Barrington Center, June 29, 1831, the son of Wm. Hawley, a pioneer resident of the vicinity, who came west from Amherst, Mass. Although raised and educated in the country, Mr. Hawley was never a farmer himself, but engaged in a meat handling and stock buying business for many years, and also in the creamery business, having interests in various parts of southern Lake county.

In 1861 he was elected mayor of Barrington and served two terms. For about eight years he held a position in Chicago in the Cook County clerk's office, and later was in the county clerk's treasury's office. He was a chairman of the school board and retired about ten years ago after serving a long term.

Mr. Hawley was married in 1871 to Miss Nellie Harrower, daughter of Mrs. S. M. Harrower of South street. Mrs. Hawley died in a few years, leaving three children, Glenn Hawley, of the Corn Exchange National bank, Chicago; Miss Bernice Hawley, teacher in our school here, and Miss Alice Hawley, who died in 1903. In 1889 he married Miss Emma Lytle, of Palatine, who survives him, with her two young sons, Robert and Fred Hawley.

The funeral was held this afternoon, September 21, at his home on Grove avenue, with Rev. T. E. Ream, of Hampshire, conducting the service.

The local camp of the Modern Woodmen, of which body Mr. Hawley was a member, attended in a body and took charge of the burial service at Evergreen cemetery.

Mr. Hawley was also a member of the Knights of Macabees.

Kirby-Dix.

A wedding occurred this Tuesday morning, Sept. 18, 1906 at the Catholic parish house on Grove avenue at eight thirty o'clock, which is of especial interest to Barrington on account of the prominence of the bride and groom in the younger social set. Rev. E. J. Fox united in marriage Edward T. Kirby, second son of Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Kirby of S. Hawley street to Miss Ella E. Dix, sister of Mrs. E. Thies. Miss Anna Dix, sister of the bride and Arnett C. Lines were present at the ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. Kirby were the guests of honor at an elaborate wedding breakfast given by Mrs. E. Thies at her home on S. Hawley street immediately following the ceremony. They then departed for Chicago and returned in the evening to attend a reception given to relatives and a few friends at Mrs. Thies' home. They will be located at home in the upper apartment of the S. Lander house on Grove avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Kirby were presented with beautiful remembrances of silver and furniture and start married life in a most auspicious manner with the best wishes of all Barrington. Mr. Kirby will be employed as floor-sawer in Hillman's large department store, Chicago.

A license was issued in Chicago, Sept. 19, to a Charles Bartholme of Chicago and Miss Carrie Lohman of Long Grove, aged 26 and 23. Miss Lohman was the young lady so severely injured at Algonquin some time ago and formerly lived here.

This is the 21st day of September and the scheduled equinoxial storm right on time.

DECEASE OF REV. H. MEIER

For Many Years An Esteemed Minister and Friend to Those in Need of Spiritual Help.

Rev. Henry Meier, whose funeral occurred on Thursday of this week, was born April 30, 1828, in Rotherberg, Hesse, Germany, and died at Barrington, Ill., September 18, 1906, being sixty-eight years, four months and sixteen days old. When ten years old he came to this country with his mother and two brothers, expecting to meet his father who had come some time previous and had sent the necessary funds. Upon their arrival they were informed of the sad news that less than three weeks' previous father had been carried off by cholera. They therefore made their home with the uncle and aunt on a farm between Bloomingdale and Hawthorn. Two years later his mother died, leaving him an orphan at the age of 12.

In the month of October, 1870, under the services of the Rev. Henry Hintze, both he and Miss Maria Rist, who became his wife a few weeks later, were converted and united with the Evangelical association, and on November 12 of the same year they were by the same Rev. H. Hintze united in wedlock. During their happy married life of nearly forty-seven years seven sons and four daughters were born to them. Of this number two sons and three daughters preceded him to the better world. In 1867, at the age of 29, Rev. H. Meier entered the ministry of the Evangelical association. His first charge was Brookville, Ill., which he served one year. He was then sent to Niles, which place he served two years. In 1870 he was sent to the old Mason circuit, about thirty miles southwest of Peoria, and served the same for three years. During his services at this place he won a large number of people for Christ. In 1873 he served the Holland's grove charge, and for three years his work was crowned with success. Many turned to God. In 1876 he was sent to be the pastor of the Barrington circuit. The Rev. Wm. Schweiker, then starting out in the ministry, was his assistant for two years, and Rev. C. J. Frey the third year. These years were years of great blessing. Many of the present congregation at Barrington were converted and united with the church during this period. In 1879 he was sent to serve North Northfield, including Deerfield and Highland park, and served this charge for three years. At the end of this period, in 1882, Rev. H. Meier deemed it prudent, on account of failing health, to locate, and chose Barrington as his home. Here he has lived ever since until his death, taking an active part in the affairs of the Salem Evangelical church and the business affairs of Barrington. His example and wise counsel have done much to make the Salem church a power for good. He was never seeking to "boss" the regular pastor, but never failed to be his friend and helper. In all good causes he was a liberal contributor of time and money, and no one in all the congregation has done better. He was not near as wealthy as some, but was always found in the front ranks in all things. He will be missed by all who knew him.

He leaves a widow, five sons, one daughter, a brother, John Meier, an old soldier, and thirteen grandchildren and many friends.

A private service was held Thursday afternoon, at one o'clock, at the home, with Rev. H. Hintze in attendance, and at 1:30 in the Salem church, where Bishop R. Dubs, of Harrisburg, Pa., officiated, and seventeen ministers were present. Mr. Meier's sons were casket bearers.

A large gathering of friends met at the church to bid farewell to their former pastor.

Burial was in Evergreen cemetery.

BARRINGTON CHAUTAUQUA

A Week of Enjoyment and Education Fully Appreciated by Intelligent Audiences.

Every movement that is educational and character developing along any line is to be encouraged and well mentioned, for in our present day life there are innumerable evils assailing the young, so that whatever leads to good thoughts and deeds is commendable and right.

Chautauqua assemblies are of long standing and have become influential in placing current questions before the people. Whereas these gatherings were formerly more literary in nature, today they are semi-political and lean towards the prohibition party. A great amount of general information can be derived from the lectures, amusement and enjoyment from the entertaining and musical numbers.

The assembly, which began here Tuesday afternoon and will continue until Sunday evening with two meetings a day, can be reckoned a successful one in attendance and profit, mentally and financially.

The large tent was erected on Lake street, in Holloft field, a central and advantageous location.

Accommodations were adequate and the management courteous.

The program was presented with few changes, and even rain did not dampen the interest being shown.

All ages and creeds were there, and the Y. M. C. A. members here who promoted the affair have scored a religious, temperance and social success.

Dr. Richardson sends us the following for publication:

Col. Holt addressed the people Tuesday, p. m., in the absence of Hon. A. G. Wolfenbarger, and in the evening about two hundred people listened to Judge Wolfenbarger on the subject: "The Devil's Civilization." We had supposed this fact to be an inhabitant of distant climes, but the judge described it and his habit so clearly that we recognized the fact that it has long been making its home among us and is already producing its dire effects.

Hon. Frank S. Regan gave a cartoon lecture on "Does It Pay?" Wednesday. The Board of Education kindly consented to have Professor Fulton march the pupils of the public school to the tent, and they learned lessons in temperance and art that will be remembered through life. "As the twig is bent the tree's inclined."

At the time for the evening lecture on "Putting Out to Sea," rain began to fall, and Mr. Regan was ready to pack his trunk when about 150 people gathered in the tent, and he proceeded with landscape and ocean scenes, which were highly appreciated, although rain was falling in torrents outside.

Barrington may be a little slow in some respects, but when its people realize that danger threatens some or all of its inhabitants, they are going to move things and move them in the right direction.

You will save from 20 to 25 per cent by buying second hand school books at A. W. Meyer's.

LAWSON F. ELVIDGE DEAD

His Sudden Illness and End is a Shock to the Citizens of Barrington.

A sudden and unexpected death is always a deeper shock to a community than one sadly anticipated, and this week we curvicle the sudden illness and death of a familiar figure in our business life, Lawson F. Elvidge. On Monday afternoon, at 2 o'clock, Mr. Elvidge was found in a semi-conscious condition alone in the new home of Herman Gieske on Grove avenue, where he had been doing some carpentry work. A man, who was also about the building, found Mr. Elvidge and assisted him to walk to his home on Hough street, where he lived until six o'clock Tuesday morning, retaining consciousness until about fifteen minutes before death. Although a sufferer from asthma many years, Mr. Elvidge did not have a heart trouble, his muscular action being deranged by an attack of acute indigestion following a hearty dinner. He was a quiet man, leading a good and useful life, full of kind acts to his family and friends. He was a member and supporter of the M. E. church here and has been an able assistant of the G. A. R. here for years, and was at one time commander. His memory was excellent and his accounts of earlier days here interesting.

Lawson F. Elvidge was born on a farm west of Palatine fifty-eight years ago, and passed all his days in that vicinity and Barrington. After a district school education he became a farmer and followed that work until shortly after his first marriage to Miss Martha Page, sister of John Page of South Hawley street, who died eight years ago. It is about thirty years since they came to Barrington, and during this time Mr. Elvidge has been an industrious carpenter. When only sixteen he enlisted in the "Thirty-Sixth Illinois Cavalry" and saw two months' service before the surrender of Lee. His regiment was called the "Yates Phalanx," being the body-guard of our war governor, Richard Yates. While the last battle of the war was being fought Mr. Elvidge lay very ill in a hospital, but he was never shot.

Mr. Elvidge served one term as collector for Barrington township. He was the father of four children: George Elvidge, of Chicago; Ray, who lives here and works in Chicago; John Elvidge, of Amherst, Iowa, and the Misses Esther and Della, who live at home.

In August, three years ago, he was married to Mary Seun, niece of Charles Seun, and she survives him. Mrs. Seun was crippled by a paralytic stroke shortly after her marriage and has never fully recovered her ability to walk strongly.

The funeral was held this morning, September 21st, at 9:30, and was conducted by Rev. T. E. Ream, of Hampshire, Ill., and Post 255 Barrington, Grand Arms of the Republic.

Interment was at Deer Grove cemetery.

It's Ability and Industry, Not a Pull, That Wins

By MAJ.-GEN. WILLIAM A. BANCROFT,
President Boston Elevated Railroad.

NOTHING succeeds like industry, joined with honesty. That may be accepted as a rule to which there are few exceptions. It is true, of course, that a young man may have powerful relatives or friends who can place him in an advantageous position, who can hold him there, or obtain for him promotion involving increased advantage and income, and who under ordinary circumstances may insure him a high degree of prosperity while they live or their influence survives.

But if the extraordinary condition arises, if that influence be withdrawn, and the young man be thrown suddenly upon his own mental and moral resources, he may or may not fail. If he has been supported entirely by the influence to which he owed his original good fortune, if he has not developed qualities of decision, self reliance and industry, he is likely to go to pieces.

The cases are not numerous in which influence alone has been able to insure a successful career for any man to the very end, and the power of influence, or pull, so called, bears no comparison with that of push.

The young man with honesty, capability and industry enjoys power of his own, power that is developed and strengthened with use or exercise. It is impossible for any great enterprise to exist without that kind of man, and such a person always is in demand.

He may have some difficulty in obtaining the necessary start; he may have to do much toward creating his own opportunity.

The young man who has opportunity provided for him enjoys that much advantage; other things being equal, he may be said to enjoy a permanent opportunity. Influence is, therefore, a consideration of value not to be underestimated. But it is unreasonable to think that it can ever take the place of industry and enterprise.

The old Roman proverb had it that "labor conquers all things," labor being another name for industry. That is as true as it ever was, and in a society like ours, under the institutions that we enjoy, it is truer than it ever was.

If a young man contemplates a career in which he aspires to be useful, push, that is to say, industry, is the quality, along with honesty, which he must cultivate with the most earnest devotion. "Pull," on the other hand, is at best a precarious support to lean on.

The Vaudeville of Love

By HELOISE CARTHY,
Author of "Men and Dogs"

The vaudeville of love gives us the greatest and most varied programmes, can we but bring ourselves to see it.

Its expression takes so many, many forms that it is ever bewildering, changing from farce to drama, and from spectacle to tragedy, ever holding our minds and senses, and giving to us new and never fades, always sparkling in the light of its queer luster and keeping us always guessing.

Annabel loves Dick with every throb of her foolish little heart, and then she would seek mother for telling her something of the wisdom of years. She loves them both so well that if she had to choose which of the two she would save in a shipwreck, she would tell you that she couldn't live without either of them.

Harry loves Jane with every ounce of his 192 pounds, and he knows that she gets a year older every night he stays out after 12 o'clock, but he accepts every invitation to the club, dinners in the winter, and when he is trying to put his shoes in the chifonier and his hat on the jardiniere, he tells her he has never found out what love meant, and he knows that in the morning she will bring him home and breakfast upstairs, and lie to her father as to what time he came home.

As for me, I love only Tip, my collier. He behaves himself and causes me no worry; he loves me because I am kinder to him than any one else, and I love him because he doesn't hurt my feelings, and he always flatters my vanity because he won't notice any one else when I am around. The more a man loves you the more cruel he is, or the more you seem to suffer by his selfishness. Tip isn't cruel, and he is faithful, and if ever I lose him I shall go right out to get another Tip. I won't have my heart blunted by taking part in that vaudeville performance of love. I'm going to be the audience.

I Am My Brother's Keeper

By BISHOP SAMUEL FALLOWS, D. D.

Am I my brother's keeper? Yes, I am, if I am director of a company in which the welfare of hundreds or even thousands of my brothers and sisters is involved. But how can 92 men hold 1,439 directorships in corporations managing billions of money, as Stuyvesant Fish has just made known to us, and keep proper watch over the interests involved?

I am my brother's keeper if I am an employer of labor. It is my duty to recognize the humblest workman as my brother; to pay him just wages and to take a personal interest just as far as possible in his welfare. I cannot live in luxury and splendor from the result of his toil and leave him and his family to live in degrading poverty and squalor.

If I am a stockholder in a great corporation I cannot be silent when my brother is ruined and driven to suicide by the machinations and manipulations of the few heartless, conscienceless men who control its affairs.

As a brother to "all prisoners and captives" for whom I pray, I must do all in my power to assist those who are sent out of our own penal and reformatory institutions to lead honorable and useful lives. I must extend to them a helping hand. I must give them work if I can do so. I must cooperate heartily with all organizations having the welfare of such persons as distinct objects.

The Age of Machinery.
We live in the age of machinery. The thinking, directing mind becomes daily of more account, while mere brawn falls correspondingly in value from day to day. That eccentric philosopher, Elbert Hubbard, says in one of his essays, "where a machine will do better work than the human hand, we prefer to let the machine do the work."

It has been but a few years since the cotton gin, the "spinning Jenny" and the power loom displaced the hand picker, the spinning wheel and the hand loom; since the reaper and binder, the rake and tedder, the mowing machine took the place of the old cradle, scythe, pitchfork and hand rake; since the friction match superseded the flint and tinder; since the modern paint factory replaced the slab and mauler, the paint pot and paddle.

In every case where machinery has been introduced to replace hand labor, the laborers have resented the change, and as the weavers, the sempstresses and the farm laborers protested against new-fangled looms, sewing machines and agricultural implements, so in recent times compositors have protested against typesetting machines, glass blowers against bottle blowing machines, and painters against ready mixed paints. And as in the case of these short-lived classes of an earlier day, so with their imitators of to-day, the protest will be in vain. It is a protest against civilization, against the common weal, against their own welfare.

The history of all mechanical improvements shows that workmen are the first to be benefited by them. The invention of the sewing machine, instead of throwing thousands of women out of employment, increased the demand to such an extent that thousands of women have been employed at better wages, for shorter hours and easier work where hundreds before worked in laborious misery to eke out a pitiable existence. It was so with spinning and weaving machinery, with agricultural implements—in fact, it is so with every notable improvement. The multiplication of books in the last decade is a direct result of the invention of Mottotype machinery and fast presses.

The mixed paint industry, in which carefully designed paints for house painting are prepared on a large scale by special machinery, is another improvement of the same type. The cheapness and general excellence of these products has so stimulated the consumption of paint that the demand for the services of painters has correspondingly multiplied. Before the advent of these goods a well-painted house was noticeable from its rarity, whereas to-day an ill-painted house is conspicuous.

Nevertheless, the painters, as a rule, following the example set by the weavers, the sempstresses and the farm laborers of old, almost to a man, oppose the improvement. It is a real improvement, however, and simply because of that fact the sale of such products has increased until during the present year it will fall not far short of 90,000,000 or 100,000,000 gallons.

Handiwork is always better than that of men, and of us who deplore the short-sightedness of our ancestors would do well to see that we do not in turn furnish "terrible examples" to our posterity.

Cure for Whooping Cough.
Irwin, Pa.—The "mimic cure" for whooping cough among small children is attracting attention in this section, where the disease is almost epidemic. In one case a Jeannette father daily takes his ten-month-old baby girl down into the Penn mine. He remains half an hour, comes to the surface for the same space of time, and again goes down and remains another half hour. This will be repeated daily for two weeks. The child has a severe case, and from a fit of coughing goes into spasms. A Pittsburgh physician recommended the "mimic cure" as the only profitable relief.

From Clyde Fitch's Scrapbook.
Clyde Fitch, at a dinner that he gave in honor of a noted dramatic critic, read from his library of scrapbooks a western criticism on Hamlet. The criticism, which was dated 1873, ran:

"There is too much chinning in this piece. The author is behind the times, and seems to forget that what we want nowadays is hair raising situations and detectives."

"In the hands of a skillful playwright a detective would have been put upon the track of Hamlet's uncle, and the old man would have been hunted down in a manner that would have lifted the audience out of their chairs."

"The moral of the piece is not good. The scene where Hamlet assassinates his mother is a bad example to the rising generation."

"Our advice to the author is more action, more love-making, and plenty of specialties. The crazy girl scene should be cut out altogether and a rattling good song and dance substituted."

Pension Head Works Saving.
Washington.—Commissioner of Pensions Warner has worked economies in the service which have saved the government $201,346 during the last fiscal year. He has reduced the expenses of the bureau $92,552, has cut the expense of special examiners $50,258, of examining surgeons $30,000, has made a saving in salaries and clerk hire at agencies of $7,242, in rents and contingent expenses of agencies, $8,654, and in the examination of pension agents has saved $2,500.

TAFT AND BACON TALK OF PEACE WITH CUBANS

Both Sides Presenting Statements of Their Grievances—
War Secretary Expects His Errand to Keep Him
in Island a Considerable Time—Palma
Threatens to Resign.

PALACE OF THE PRESIDENT AT HAVANA.

Havana, Sept. 20.—In the course of the conversation of the American secretaries with President Palma at the palace Wednesday, Messrs. Taft and Bacon responded briefly. The party thereupon entered automobiles and were driven to the palace. Here they were conducted upstairs into the main saloon, where Minister Morgan presented Messrs. Taft and Bacon to President Palma.

Secretary Taft's informal, straightforward and kindly manner has already created a strong and favorable impression. The business of finding a solution to the difficulty will be proceeded with directly and persistently to its conclusion. Predictions are already being made that the Cuban problem will be solved within a week, but on what basis is still a matter of conjecture. Secretary Taft himself reiterated that President Roosevelt's representatives are here with no policy except to insure peace in Cuba.

No Agreement Reached.
Washington.—As was expected by those here acquainted with the nature of the Cuban problem, the revolutionists have not yet been able to reach an agreement. Warlike operations continue in the vicinity of Cienfuegos and at other points, and Palma's present negotiations seem to be limited so far as effect is concerned to Havana alone.

Optimistic as are the official advice received, the navy department continues to prepare for armed intervention. It was admitted that in addition to the ships now en route to Havana, orders had been telegraphed to other vessels, including battleships, to be ready to start at a moment's notice for the same destination.

Hostilities Cease.
Commander Colwell of the cruiser Denver sent an encouraging dispatch to the navy department, which stated conditions continued to be quiet in Havana, and that there had been a cessation of hostilities for the present. He added that negotiations were progressing favorably between government agents and revolutionary leaders, and they were approaching an agreement.

The fact that the leaders of the two warring factions are seeking agreement, however, will not deter Secretary Taft from making careful investigation of the internal troubles of Cuba. If peace is to be brought about by unarmed American intervention, this government wants assurance that it will be lasting peace, and that internecine strife will not break out again as soon as the American commissionaries and for home.

Funston May Command.
Gen. Frederick Funston, who is now on his way to Washington, under orders from the war department, will probably be assigned to command the army in Cuba if intervention should be found necessary.

Palma Prepares to Quit.
Havana.—President Palma is sending to New York 16 boxes containing all the papers of the revolutionary junta which was proclaimed over him during the war for independence. This action has started a rumor that he is preparing to leave the country. He declines to talk, but officials at the palace say the rumor is ridiculous.

Trouble on the Isle of Pines.
The newest feature of the revolution is the appearance of Americans from the Isle of Pines complaining that officials of the courts of the Isle of Pines are searching the homes of all Americans for firearms and seizing all arms which may be found. The Americans there are extremely wrathful over the action of these officials.

Earthquakes in Sicily.
Palermo.—For several days slight earthquake shocks have been felt here and in several other parts of Sicily. At Travia in several houses were badly damaged, the inhabitants being panic-stricken.

Weights 400, Dies at Age of 75.
Falmouth, Ill.—Michael Croughan, aged 75, he died. He weighed 400 pounds and spent most of his time sitting in a chair made especially for him.

Injured in Hotel Fire.
Ottawa, Ont.—The Gilmour hotel on Bank street was destroyed by fire late Friday night. Many of the guests jumped from windows and were seriously injured.

AWFUL PSORIASIS 35 YEARS.

Terrible Scaly Humor in Patches All Over the Body—Skin Cracked and Bleeding—Cured by CUTICURA.

"I was afflicted with psoriasis for thirty-five years. It was in patches all over my body. I used three cakes of Cuticura Soap, six boxes of Ointment and two bottles of Resolvent. In thirty days I was completely cured, and I think permanently, as it was about five years ago. The psoriasis first made its appearance in red spots, generally forming a circle, leaving in the center a spot about the size of a silver dollar of sound flesh. In a short time the affected circle would form a heavy scale of a white silvery appearance and would gradually drop off. To remove the entire scales by bathing or using oil to soften them the flesh would be perfectly raw, and a light discharge of bloody substance would come out. That scaly crust would form again in twenty-four hours. It was worse on my arms and limbs, although it was in spots all over my body, also on my scalp. If I let the scales remain too long without removing by bath or otherwise, the skin would crack and bleed. I suffered terrible itching, worse at night after getting warm in bed, or blood warm by exercise, when it would be almost unbearable. W. M. Childrester, Hutchinson, Kan., April 29, 1904."

THE PINK KIMONO

By IZOLA FORRESTER

Copyright, 1906, by Ruby Douglas

It lay on the massive settee in the hall, an innocent looking parcel, flat and somewhat square. Three of Warwick's letters lay on top of it, neatly, as the hall table had placed them, also his weekly paper from home.

Warwick glanced at the letters, again at the clock, tossed off his hat, coat and gloves and carried the whole lot, parcel, letters and paper, into the comfortable study and dropped into a deep chair.

There was an hour before the crowd would arrive. Everything was ready. The spread would be sent up at 8:30 sharp. He hoped Stanton would be able to get away. He liked Stanton.

The boy needed a good friendly grip just now. He knew himself what it was to be in New York. Stanton, money could not give one the peace of mind that admitted one to the inside of things, the "getting next to the inside of all," as Stanton said. And if the right path did not open, one had to be lonely, there were others wide and welcoming. Warwick knew.

The boy was young and clever. The only thing that allied him to too much money, and the confidence he had therein. He was a bit handy with it all—the whirly and the swing and the chance for big success. Warwick had kept an eye on him for weeks, measuring and judging him, and now he was satisfied. All the boy needed was direction and a cool hand checking him now and then, and he would win out.

Warwick opened the weekly paper from home and smiled to himself at the familiar heading, the Weekly Visitor. Ever since he could remember the Weekly Visitor had visited regularly at the quiet, big gray house that crowned Warwick's hill, up in Hillsboro, N. H. and Stanton was from the country, too, some place out west, out in Nebraska. He wondered if he had a weekly paper, too, to keep him in touch with the old world, and the ethics and standards of something besides New York.

The letters were unimportant. He took up the parcel and slipped off the cord. Laundry probably. He had not ordered anything.

The paper fell to the floor and he sat staring at the thing in his hands. It was a pink, delicate, shimmering, silken thing. He stood up and shook it out to its full length. It reached to the floor. It was not a bath robe. It could not possibly be a smoking jacket. It was a woman's garment, unmistakably.

The texture was the softest Japanese crepe, the silk interwoven around the shoulders and neck in a border of golden butterflies. There was no mark on it nor on the paper. Warwick looked carefully.

The door bell buzzed imperatively, once, twice and a long one. That was Billy Traister's ring. Warwick hesitated, cast the pink silk thing behind him on the chair and opened the door. Billy stepped in smilingly, interrogatively looked about the room and spied the pink silk thing.

"Rex," he said reproachfully, "why, Rex?"

"It was left here by mistake," said Warwick hastily. "The hall boy did it. What is it?"

Billy lifted it by the shoulders and beamed with the appreciative eye of a connoisseur.

"It's a kimono, the real imported article. No bargain sale. Who's the lucky lady?"

The door bell buzzed again. Warwick took the kimono with deliberate forethought, went to the wardrobe in his dressing room and concealed it therein.

"It's Stanton," Billy announced, "and the rest."

Warwick played the host with more inner discomfort than ever before in his life. It was not the mere fact of the mistake that troubled him, nor that he mislaid the kimono, nor that he didn't want to see that particular kimono had Billy called it—kimono?—handled and laughed about and speculated over. Somewhere there must be the girl who wanted that kimono. He hoped she was a brunette. Not too much of a brunette, perhaps with blue eyes, or gray—yes, gray eyes or so.

Billy was pouncing back the chairs and tabourets for the spread. Stanton was singing at the piano. Out in the kitchenette Yates and Rogers and the Butcheres were rummaging for dishes and knives and forks. Big Ben Veau was up on the divan with its red Turkish cover draped picturesquely about him, reciting some original poetry.

"Rex, don't you own a decent tablecloth, you beggar?" called Yates.

Warwick smoked without replying. The clock was near the brunette girl with the pink kimono about her smiling deliciously like a geisha—no, he didn't want her to be a geisha—smiling, well, just as a girl should smile when she had the right one to smile at.

Stanton left the piano and came over. "Say, you're a prince to get me here tonight," he said. "I didn't know you chummed like this. Best hotels, doesn't it? What do you call it?"

"Studio apartment," said Warwick, faintly. "Half day, half home, not confined to bachelors. I like it. When a fellow's had a house it always sticks to him a bit. There's a Zap comes in and claims up for me, and if I want a meal, I can have it."

"I am going to housekeeping too," said Stanton awkwardly.

"Honeytoon?" Warwick's eyes lighted with amusement. He had not dreamed the boy had gone so far.

"No, not as bad as that," Stanton hesitated, glancing at the joyous, riotous crowd about the piano. It's my sister. Mother's sent her on to take care of me until she can come herself. I guess they didn't get very good accounts of their little boy in Manhattan. But I wrote home and told them about you and what sort of a chap you were and how you had taken me under your wing, and I promised to cut out the hotel and—well, a whole lot of things mother didn't like the flavor of, and today."

"Whoopie!" yelled Yates from the dressing room. "I've found Warwick's tablecloth. It's a dream!"

Warwick set up and dropped his cigarette. Walzing dizzily, radiant, wickedly out from the dressing room came Yates, arrayed in the pink silk kimono. There was a silence, then a long drama bowl of delight from the crowd. They caught Yates in the arms, and swept him up on the center table. They handed him a Samson fan of dried plumes and a Mexican peaked hat. Trained at the piano, he crashed into the "San Toy" overture.

And suddenly Warwick stood up, white and mad, mad clear through that they should dare even in jest to touch anything that belonged to the dear, unknown girl, the brunette with the gray eyes.

"Take that off," he said.

The music stopped short, but not from his words. Every face in the crowd was turned toward the door of the hall, and Yates looked helpless and miserable. Warwick turned, too, and held his breath. She stood in the doorway, one hand lifting aside the heavy drapery. Behind her was George, the colored hall boy. Her face looked startled, and yet there was amusement, too, in the wide gray eyes, as they glanced from face to face and finally rested on Yates.

"There is some mistake, I think," she said gently. "George tells me a parcel of mine was left here tonight. I have only moved here today, and he made a mistake. I think that gentleman has on my kimono."

Wretched, limp and apologetic, Yates was assisted from the table, and divested of the pink silk gown.

"I am sorry to spoil your amusement," she stopped, and turned her head toward Warwick as the host, when all at once her eyes met Stanton's.

"Marjorie!" he gasped. "Marjorie, you blessed kid!"

Silently and discreetly the crowd averted its composite face while Stanton kissed Marjorie ecstatically. Warwick looked unhappy.

"Rox," cried Stanton, "this is my sister, all the way from Nebraska to Manhattan to take care of her little brother."

"Mother is here, too," Marjorie explained, flushing at the effusive welcome accorded her. "We had the address of these apartments and you wrote that they were very nice, you know, and that Mr. Warwick lived here."

"That's Warwick," interposed Stanton. "He's a bully fellow."

Warwick bowed. Suddenly he felt a great, supreme gladness steal over him. She had gray eyes, Stanton's sister from Nebraska.

"So we came right here from the depot, and mother wanted to surprise you by having everything ready. I bought my kimono on the way here, because our trunks haven't come yet, and the boy made a mistake delivering it. We have the apartment just across the hall."

"Rox," cried Stanton, "come on to the apartment across the hall and be introduced. You've got to make us welcome, because we've come to stay."

Decisively and quietly the crowd crossed to the apartment next door. With dignity and a beautiful grace they were introduced to Stanton's mother and to Stanton's home, and Stanton knew he was accepted and admitted forever to the "inside of things."

But Warwick sat in a corner watching Marjorie make tea, tea from his teapot, which the Jap servant had brought over, and over the back of her chair hung the pink silk kimono. He was wondering how she would look in it.

"Sugar?" she asked. "One or two, Mr. Warwick?"

"Two," said Warwick, with a half suppressed sigh. "Say, do you know Mar-Miss Stanton, I'm awfully glad you're a brunette, with gray eyes."

"Why?" Marjorie's head bent lower over the teapot. "Ten making does require so much careful attention."

"Because," said Warwick, "pink is so becoming to that type."

"And to Mr. Yates' type, too," laughed Marjorie, but her face was flushed as she slipped the pink kimono around her, over her gray traveling suit, and poured the tea to a Japanese for the crowd, and for Warwick.

Grasshopper Glacier.

One of the small glaciers in Montana is of special interest on account of the fact that in the mass of ice there are imbedded two strata of grasshoppers, each about a foot thick. There are literally tons of grasshoppers in the ice, and the question naturally arises as to where they came from. The most obvious explanation is that centuries ago two enormous swarms in course of migration were caught in a snowstorm, chilled and buried in the snow, where they have remained till now in a perfect state of preservation. In the accounts of the early western explorers a few instances are related of meeting fellows' had a house it always sticks to him a bit. There's a Zap comes in and claims up for me, and if I want a meal, I can have it."

"I am going to housekeeping too," said Stanton awkwardly.

A notice appears on a telephone post on the north east corner of Station and Cook streets this week signed by Wm. Thies that he has attracted much attention. It reads "John Healey is a forger—Walter Healey is a thief." All three men are farmers living towards Barrington Center and the trouble between them arose over a disagreement in which about $2000.00 are involved. However the posting of such a strongly stated notice is a serious legal offence and the one who wrote and made public such an accusation in such manner is subjecting himself to legal consequences. It is for the courts to decide whether the allegations are true and until such a decision, no one has a right to assert them so positively.

A. W. LANDWEER,

Barrington, Ills.

Spain's Pride Ruffled.

Judging from the comments of the Madrid Herald, the ultra Spanish party is not happy over the recent peace making venture of the United States in South America. "Spanish people that have fighting and warlike blood in their veins" should only yield to a nation having "moral authority" to be obeyed by the combatants. This is really an appeal to the big policemen theory of peace, and "fighting and warlike blood" might object. To quote:

Spain ever was and was will be the most suitable nation on earth to arbitrate justice. At least we would be treating with countries that are in the same language, countries that have here, in Mother Spain, their natural home, in whose laws and history there is that which can help to a proper understanding of the rights of both nations in any struggle. Not in vain did we carry across the sea our banners, our customs, our laws and our mode of living, and for centuries past we have been conquering and civilizing American soil. It is why we feel intensely more at heart to see two republics of Spanish origin, Guatemala and Honduras, give full power to the United States to end their struggle and settle their differences. In the last analysis that act has a far greater importance than people might suppose. It means the recognition of the doctrine of the Monroe doctrine and its principle, "America for the Americans," more exactly speaking, "America for the North Americans."

Observers of the present trend of Spanish thought have detected, as they believe, a movement to re-establish the old influence of the mother country in South America. This protest by a Madrid journal of influence clearly points in that direction.

John Oliver Hobbes.

The American woman who made this rugged pen name a force in literature and the drama before she reached the age of forty wrote with an originality of view and expression that gave reason to hope for finer and richer achievement. Another George Eliot she might not have been, and yet it was possible for her to have attained in the first quarter of the twentieth century the degree of popularity both in England and America which the former enjoyed in the closing quarter of the nineteenth.

The held held by the late Mrs. Craigie was unique, and in a sense her loss is irreparable. She manifested a deep sense of the responsibilities of a novelist and a dramatist. Though making her home in England, she never lost interest in her native land and had begun a novel with an American girl in England as its heroine. This girl was not to be the title seeking type or the professional beauty, but a real womanly conqueror, irresistible because of her personality.

British naval experts say that the target records of our gunners are a shame and a defilement because they are made in a calm sea. The forefathers of these cavaliers found out to their sorry cost in 1812 that American gunners shoot to hit in any wind or weather, but if the present generation of English tars must be "shown" before they will believe, the only way is to get up a shooting match, in fun or earnest, and settle the question for another hundred years.

Now that some of the girls who received diplomas stating that they can keep home on $10 a week have got the chance to try, puns on "Nations" and even "Nepetions" will be in order.

Young James Harper, farmer, and Sarah Lee, daughter of another farmer, married for love. They had two or three lovers' quarrels, as was quite on the cards and very natural, but for two years after marriage no couple ever lived more happily. This state of affairs might have continued at least two years longer but for Abner Jones, Esq., country Justice of the peace and agent for the Farmers' Fire Insurance company, and sewing machines of all makes, bought and sold. He made his appearance at the farmhouse one day.

"Well, Jim," he said, "what do you and Sarah think? I've got the agency for a life insurance company and am going to branch out a little. I want to insure the both of you. I've got Tom Spooner and his wife, Bill Weaver and his wife, Silas Johnson and his wife and several others, and I'm here to get you. I want you to take $2,000 apiece. If you do, Sarah, Jim has got $2,000 to buy you a mountain of land, and you can go away and live in Niagara Falls to get over his grief. If you do, Jim, Sarah has got money to buy you decently and carry on the farm without having to rush off and get your hands dirty."

The square went into further explanations. He talked life insurance and stayed to dinner. He talked life insurance and stayed to supper. He talked life insurance and stayed until 9 o'clock in the evening. Then he drank two glasses of cider, ate three fried cakes and a piece of mince pie and went home to make out two policies for $2,000 each.

Jim and Sarah had decided that such insurance was a good thing. Neither wanted to die, but if death must come they would not be selfish about it. It would be a bond to draw them still closer together. In the course of a couple of weeks the policies were delivered, the premiums paid, and Square Jones stayed to dinner and supper and as he finished and wanted to look his plate, but remembered his dignity in time.

"Now, then, young folks, this is the best thing you have done so far in your lives. Keep on living, keeping up your premiums as they fall due, and don't worry about the future. With $2,000 added to the survivor in case of death you needn't either of you leave the Astors or Vanderbilts. Sarah, you can dress in the most expensive mourning, and Jim, you can wear patent leather shoes and long Niagara river till you get tired of it."

It was Square Jones who was responsible for the insurance, but it was Aunt Deborah who was responsible for what resulted. The policies had been carefully laid away in the bottom bureau drawer and the subject talked out when Aunt Deborah came visiting one afternoon. She had not been invited, nor was she expected, but she proceeded to make herself at home, and by and by announced:

"Sarah, I have heard that you and James have had your lives insured for each other's benefit, but I told 'em you were not the woman to go into anything like that."

"But we have," replied Sarah. "We were insured two weeks ago."

"Upon my soul! No one could have made me believe it."

"But why? What's the matter?"

"Sarah Harper, do you know that you have the same as doomed yourself to death?" asked Aunt Deborah, in a hoarse whisper.

"What do you mean, Aunt?"

"I mean that there isn't a man on the face of this earth who wouldn't kill his wife for the sake of $2,000 in cash. That insurance is temptation to murder. Hundreds of wives have been killed off every year, and you will be one of them to get before another year rolls over your head."

The young wife laughed merrily at the idea, but Aunt Deborah grew more solemn and serious, and said:

"Don't fool yourself, Sarah. Jim is just as good a husband as any of 'em, but you have got temptation in his way. He'll be thinking of them $2,000 all the time, and the longer he thinks the easier it will come for him to murder you. Two thousand dollars in cash and you out of the way so that he can marry again is more'n he can stand up under. I shan't be a bit surprised any day to hear that you have been found murdered. Square Jones ought to be prosecuted for coining you into such a thing, and I'll tell him so before the week is out."

Sarah continued to laugh and make fun at the idea, and it was finally dropped to take up soft soap and carpet rage. When she set about getting supper Aunt Deborah made a sneak outdoors and caught the kindling as he came up from the cornfield.

"Well," she began, after he greeted her, "you want Sarah to chop head in your ears, I see."

"What is it, Aunt?"

"It's that life insurance, Henry Harper. I'm astonished at you. Do you know how many wives killed their husbands last year to get the insurance?"

"A million perhaps, but Sarah isn't going to kill me."

"Time will tell, James; time will tell. Sarah is sweet and lovely and innocent, but when there's $2,000 at stake who can tell what a woman will do? With the farm and all she can't be blind if she was a widow she could catch a better looking man than you."

The good natured young man continued to laugh, and at the supper table his wife laughed with him as they chafed Aunt Deborah, but the old lady continued to shake her head and reply:

"Wait-till the ax or the melted lead get to work and then we'll see whether there is temptation to laugh at or not."

That night at midnight Sarah woke up with her heart beating rapidly. She was about to judge Henry with her elbow, when a sudden thought came to her. Aunt Deborah's greivous predictions came to her, and she wondered if she had been awakened by some move on her husband's part—some move to take her by the throat. She smiled at first, but presently the smile faded away. Wives had been killed that the husband might profit by the insurance. Aunt Deborah was always predicting, but at the same time many of her predictions had come true. She knew that Henry loved her with a great love, but there was that $2,000. For an hour she lay awake and thought, and the longer she thought the more miserable she was.

Sarah had only fallen into a troubled sleep when the dog barked and Henry awoke. He did not get out of bed for disturbing his wife, and after listening to the dog for a few minutes the thought of Aunt Deborah's predictions and sudden fear came to his mind.

He grinned at the idea of Sarah killing him off for that $2,000, and yet he began to recall cases where wives had done the same thing. She could push him into the well, push him down the cellar stairs or dispose of him in other ways to enable her to escape debt, and with that $2,000 she would be a rich widow, and withal, men, women, fence men, piano agents and men with patent farm gates would tumble over each other to ask for her hand. She might not even put a $10 headstone at his grave.

There was constraint between them when the couple woke up next morning. They tried to make out that there wasn't, but realized that there was. Sarah claimed to have a headache, and James said he had a touch of rheumatism.

At noon when the husband came up from the field he had been thinking things over and almost wished he had turned Aunt Deborah out of the house. She was a meddling, gossiping old thing, and he would let nothing she had said annoy him in the least. Sarah had also been thinking, and about the same thoughts, and so there was a return of love and confidence.

It did not last thirty-six hours, however. Henry had to sharpen the ax, and Sarah saw him at it and felt that he was contemplating a crime. Sarah asked if he wanted a table for the table, but he would let nothing she had said annoy him in the least. Sarah had also been thinking, and about the same thoughts, and so there was a return of love and confidence.

For the next four weeks the pair were hypocrites toward each other. They dissimulated and deceived. They thought black thoughts of each other. James wanted to sleep in the barn or outhouse, and Sarah wanted to go home and tell her mother all about it. Things were hastening on toward a separation when, as they sat on the veranda one night after supper, saying little, but thinking a great deal, farmer Joe Collins came driving along and halted to say:

"Say, you folks heard the news?"

"No. What is it?"

"I'll take your breath away."

"But let's live it."

"Well, that life insurance company you are insured in has busted higher'n Gilroy's kite."

"Oh, James?"

"Oh, Sarah?"

And as they went dancing around the veranda in each other's arms Mr. Collins looked at them in astonishment and said to himself:

"By George, but they seem to be durned glad of it!"

And so they were.

The Breath of Life.

It's a significant fact that the strongest animal of its size, the gorilla, also has the largest lungs. Powerful lungs means powerful creatures. How to keep the breathing organs right should be man's chief study. Like thousands of others, Mrs. Ora A. Stephens, of Fort Williams, O., has learned how to do this. She writes: "Three bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery stopped my cough of two years and cured me of what my friends thought consumption. 'O, its grand for throat and lung troubles.' Because her stomach was so weakened by useless drugging that she could not eat, Mrs. Mary H. Walters, of St. Clair St., Columbus, O., was literally starving to death. She writes: "My stomach was so weak from useless drugs that I could not eat, and my nerves so wrecked that I could not sleep; and not before I was given up to die was I induced to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, with the wonderful result that improvement began at once, and a complete cure followed." Guaranteed by Barrington Pharmacy.

LABOR A POLITICAL FACTOR

FEDERATION IS TO CONTINUE ITS ACTIVITY.

Executive Council Announces No Money Contributions Were Accepted from Any Candidate.

Washington.—The executive council of the American Federation of Labor Tuesday adopted the report of the labor representation committee regarding its participation in the political campaign and in that connection, adopted the following resolution:

"The committee is authorized and directed to continue the campaign to its conclusion for the attainment of the largest degree of success in the interest of the protection and promotion of the rights and liberty of working people and the people generally. And to the attainment of these laudable objects, the executive council of the American Federation of Labor calls upon all reform forces and public-spirited citizens, who sympathize with the effort to reestablish justice and right in the affairs of our country, to cooperate with our movement, our cause and campaign."

The committee consists of President Gompers, Vice President O'Connell and Secretary Morrison of the federation. The council announced that no money had been accepted by the federation from any candidate for office, an ordinary newspaper reporter can use up a pencil every eight hours and be ready to tackle a new one next day.

The council directed Mr. Gompers to appear before the house committee on post offices when it meets next month to consider changes in the postal rates and to protest against any change "which would affect the rights to which the trade union with other publications are now entitled."

PLANS FOR FEDERATION TOLD

Seal of American Labor Body May Adorn Union Made Goods.

Washington.—The regular quarterly meeting of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor began Monday.

President Gompers reported on the question of a universal label for all of the international organizations, or for the use of the seal of the American Federation of Labor as a universal design on all of the various union labels issued by the affiliated organizations. A number of organizations were reported favorably disposed and a large number opposed to the surrender of their own labels and both parties are without any other design. The report will be submitted to the federation convention at Minneapolis in November.

Great Damage by Cloudburst.

Jackson, Neb.—At 7:30 o'clock Sunday morning water from a cloudburst in the northwestern part of Dakota county and the eastern part of Dixon county rushed down the valley of Elk creek, sweeping away hundreds of tons of hay, drowning hogs caught in pens, flooding cellars, washing away without any other design. The report will be submitted to the federation convention at Minneapolis in November.

Odd Fellows Elect Officers.

Toronto, Ont.—The sovereign grand lodge of Odd Fellows Tuesday elected the following officers: Grand sire, E. S. Conway, Chicago; deputy grand sire, John L. Nolan, Nashville, Tenn.; grand secretary, John R. Goodwin, Baltimore, Md.; grand treasurer, M. R. Muckle, Philadelphia.

Wrecked Crew Is Landed.

Allege Men Are Counterfeiters.

Petersburg, Mich.—Lee Crown, Harry Williams and Harold Williams were arrested by a secret service officer on the charge of counterfeiting. They are alleged to have made lead nickels with which to play slot machines.

TRAIN HOLD-UP MEN ARE FOILED

Resistance by Conductor Causes Bandits to Abandon Their Plans.

Peoria, Ill.—Four masked men attempted to hold up passenger train No. 311 on the Rock Island road and one-half miles north of Peoria, Friday night at ten o'clock, but for the presence of mind of Conductor Robert Murray, who dined one of the men after being struck on the head, the passengers would have been robbed.

There were about 100 people on the train, which left Chicago at six o'clock. Sheriff Potter and a force of deputies and Peoria policemen are searching the woods near the scene of the attempted hold-up.

The would-be robbers placed an obstruction of railroad ties on the track, which brought the train to a standstill. They then, at the point of revolvers, commanded the engineer and fireman to remain on the engine. Running back to the front of the train, the smoker they mounted the platform with drawn revolvers.

Conductor Robert Murray met them at the door. One of the bandits pushed a gun into his face. He struck the weapon up and knocked it from the man's hand. He was struck over one wrist and over the head with a club, but the robbers became alarmed at his unexpected resistance and fled.

The men are described as being about 25 or 30 years of age, all of slight build. All were masks, but evidently were amateurs at the business.

A posse of deputy sheriffs and officers left the city in automobiles to search the vicinity of the attempted hold-up, but reported no captures. One traveling man, representing a Peoria brewer, had on his person $3,500, the result of a day's collections, and sat near the front end of the smoker.

SEPARATES WARRIOR INDIA

Hostile Members of Mogul Tribe Are to Live on by Themselves.

Washington.—In accordance with a recommendation of Superintendent Lemmon, of the Mogul Indian reservation in Arizona, the commission on Indian Affairs has directed that the hostile members of the Oraibi village be located a few miles distant from the village, where they will be out of the way of conflict with the "friendly."

Mr. Lemmon was also instructed to warn the Indians remaining in the village that they should not molest the other faction, and both parties are informed that they must keep the peace until all difficulties are adjusted. It is announced that the superintendent has an adequate police force for that purpose.

The Oraibi school, which was closed as a result of the recent disturbances, is to be reopened as soon as practicable, and the Indians are to be required to attend.

Seeks to Acquire Railroad.

Mexico City.—It is generally understood that one of the principal objects of Finance Minister Limantour's trip to Europe is to bring about the acquisition of the Mexican Central railroad by the Mexican government, and this supposition is strengthened to a considerable extent by the fact that Vice President Richards, of the Mexican Central, has also gone to Paris.

The acquisition of the railroad is a thing which would have great political significance, as it is believed that the only way that the roads can be regulated in order to avoid discrimination in the matter of rates.

CARS PLUNGE FROM BRIDGE

EIGHT PERSONS DROWN IN OKLAHOMA TRAIN WRECK.

High Water Weakens Structure Over Cimarron River—Several Rescued from Stream.

Guthrie, Okla.—Eight persons were drowned and more than 20 were injured when a Rock Island passenger train plunged from the high bridge over the Cimarron river, three miles from Dover, Okla., at 8:30 o'clock Tuesday morning. It is feared the loss of dead will be increased when complete reports are heard from the scene of the disaster, as 20 to 30 passengers are reported missing.

The train was running at high speed. The river was a raging torrent, due to a heavy rainstorm, and the driftwood which was borne down the stream had weakened the supports of the bridge.

The engineer did not notice the condition of the bridge until it was too late to stop the train. He set the air brakes and, shouting to his fireman, jumped from the engine, escaping unhurt. The fireman sustained severe injuries.

When the train struck the bridge the structure collapsed and the locomotive, tender, baggage and mail cars, the smoker and a day coach plunged into the swift current. The parlor cars attached to the train did not leave the tracks.

The locomotive disappeared from sight immediately it struck the river, and the day coach and smoking car were submerged all but their very leath of the day coach was whirled down stream by the current and struck against a sand bank. The occupants were rescued through the windows in scenes of the wildest confusion.

The smoking car was carried down midstream and struck a sandbar. Four men were seen to clamber through the wreckage and pull themselves to the top of the car, where they called for help. Those on shore were unable to assist them. A large mass of driftwood swept down the stream at a terrific rate and carried them with it.

The most reliable accounts procurable place the number of passengers in the smoker at from 25 to 30. With only a few exceptions they are unaccounted for, but messages are dropping in from rural districts stating that men were seen clinging to driftwood in the miles down river from the scene of the accident.

When the bridge went down it carried with it telegraph and telephone wires, which has made communication with the scene of the wreck difficult.

NOTED BRITISH ADMIRAL DEAD

Commander Who Stood by Dewey in Manila Bay Passes Away.

Gibraltar.—Rear Admiral Sir Edward Chichester, who commanded the British fleet at Manila during the Spanish-American war, died here Monday of pneumonia, after an illness of a few days. Sir Edward's wife has arrived here from England.

Rear Admiral Chichester was chief of the sea transport service during the South African war.

It was Sir Edward Chichester, who, according to reports, stood by the Americans in Manila Bay at a time when friction between Admiral Dewey and the German naval commander then seemed likely to lead to serious consequences.

CONVICTED OF LAND FRAUDS.

Oregon Jury Returns Verdict Against Three Prominent Men.

Portland, Ore.—State Senator Franklin Pierce May, ex-Governor William L. Gorton and George Sorenson stand convicted in the blue mountain land fraud case. The sealed verdict returned by the jury at 1:45 o'clock Thursday morning was read in the federal court when it opened, finding all three defendants guilty of conspiracy to defraud the government in connection with the creation of the blue mountain forest reserve.

Counsel for the defendants immediately gave notice to move for a new trial, and were allowed time to do so.

Must Deport Coolies.

Washington.—Chinese laborers taken to Panama for work on the isthmian canal will be required to be deported at the conclusion of their service.
