The explosion Wednesday afternoon occurred at about 3:20 octock, in the control of the shaft. It is supposed to have been caused by an extraordinarily heavy shot.

Ninety-four men are employed in the mine, but 30 left it just before the explosion. Of the 64 men left inside, 53 escaped thhrough the second shaft of the mine. Six men as work on the tipple at the min shaft escaped injury, although the force of the explosion at this point was terrific. Fiying timbers were hurled in every direction about the main shaft, but the six men were not so much as scratched.

The flames spread so rapidly that they reached the lunchroom before the patrons had recovered from their first fright. Then the women rushed to the fire escapes and to the stairways, and many of them fell down the steps or dropped to the pavement, so great was their excitement.

Fifteen women were injured in falling from the fire escapes on the Wabash avenue side of the building, and were taken into the emergency hospital of A. M. Rothschild & Co's store. Several more leaped from windows in the second and third floors and suffered serious injuries.
