The Cat and Don Worship of Silly Society Women

By FATHER VAUGHAN.

Many correspondents have told me that what I said in previous sermons about cat and dog worship among silly women is not true. I therefore refer them to the servants who have to stay up half the night petting and nursing these little beasts; to the cooks who have to cater for them; to the veterinary surgeons who have to take care of their diseases; to the undertakers who have to furnish their funerals.

If this is not enough, let them go to the printers who issue memorial notices edged in deep black invit-ing friends to a memorial service in the drawing-room, with the notification that it is not to say "adjeen," but "au revoir"—whatever that means. I suppose it means that they are all going to the dogs.

I have no patience with these people, who ought to be dandling children in their laps and nursing their little ones instead of scandaliring every section of the community by pouring out their love upon these creatures that are not meant to be treated as their own offspring.

Men and women have written to me saying that society to-day is n worse than it was in the time of Charles II, or the Georges. I do not think it is so bad, but surely it argues poorly for the morals of society when it makes a boast of being associated with such ulcerous periods of

Final Triumph of Medicine

By DR. NICHOLAS SENN.

Victory has followed victory, and many of the most dreaded diseases have become pow erless in the conquest with preventive medicine wonderful results obtained by Behring's serum in the treatment of diphtheria is the surest indication that in the future crude drugs must give way to scrotherapy in the successful treatment of all acute, self-limited infectious disease The clientele of the physicians is growing smaller and smaller, but their glory as humanitarians and scientists is rising and will reach the zenith after coming generations of more erudite physicians have conquered and laid at their feet the two worst enemies of mankind—tuberculosis and Preventive medicine is the medicine of the future, and the final triumph of scientific medicine will be the suppression of disease. In this struggle with the causes of disease we need not only the earnest and united support of the medical profession in the front ranks of this movement but the encouragement and financial-aid of the governments, general, state, county, city and village. Sanitation on a large scale, to be effective, is costly, but every dollar spent will bring good returns. Hygienic institutes must be established and maintained where young physigienic institutes must be established and maintained where young physicians can receive the necessary education and training to prepare themselves for the high and responsible office of sanitary or health commissioner in the different communities. One such institution, centrally located and amply endowed, would be a greater benefit to the people of the United States than all the Carnegie's libraries and the supernumerary half starved, insignificant colleges and academies on which millions of oldiers have been lavished and wasted by the well-meaning men of wealth.

Health officers should be above the mire of politics and should be appointed for their merit, without any regard to their political complexion, and should receive a salary commensurate with their service and social position, and should hold their office as long as their work is effective and satisfactory to the community. If these things were realized a new and much needed specialty in medicine would be created—scientific sanitation. But to accomplish our final object in public sanitation means santation. But to accompian our man object in public santation means must be provided for popular instruction in hygiene and sanitation in our schools and by popular lectures, in order to reach the mass of the people, and by doing so enlist their interest and secure their cooperation. Nothing would be of more far rearching value to the laboring man than to be taught how to avoid disease and preserve his health. All great reforms must have a beginning in the household. If we can interest our governments our rounds our educators and the public research in this case, in this case, and ments, our people, our educators, and the public press in this great move-ment of abolishing preventable diseases we confidently may expect the millennium in medicine in due time, and it will be the final triumph of scientific medicine.

God has so ordered our lot that the highest elements of our spiritual education are to be found at our very doors. In learning the lessons of charity and self-denial we need seek them not in halls of learning, nor in senates, nor on the world's battlefields, where genius and valor attain distinction, but by the very wayside of our daily lives, where we may graspour brother's hand with the sympathy of fraternal affection. The trouble with a good many of us is that we are looking afar oft, and longing for more conspicuous heights on which we may display our philanthropic intentions and ambitious. The poverty and distress that are a considerable distance from us seem to have a sort of romance attaching to them that makes it a comparatively easy thing to want to relieve them; but the distress and poverty that are in our own block are so very commonplace, so very unromantic, that they make a slight appeal, often no appeal at all, to our sensibilities.

Our brethren are all about us while we are looking over their head. our preturen are an about us while we are loosing over their nease weeping pocical tears over the romantic troubles of those who are far away. It is a poor sort of brotherhood that reserves its helpfulness for great occasions, that spends itself weeping over tales of fictitious wee, and passes by without a thought or glance at the poor cripple that lives across the street A WONDERFUL GAIN.

Ulah, a ploneer who crossed the plains in 1848, says:
"Five years ago the decrors said I had diabetes. My kidneys were all out of order, I had to rise often at night, looked sailow, felt dull and listless and had lost 40 pounds. My back ached and I had spells of heumatism and disriness. Doan's Kidney Pills relieved me of these troubles and have kept me well for a year past. Though 75 years old, I am in good health."

Weeks by Cutieurs.

"After having the measles my whole head and neck were covered with scaly sorce about as large as a penny. They were just as libide as they could be. My hair all came out. I let the trouble run along, taking the doctor's blood remedles and rubbing on salve, but it did not seem to get any better. It stayed that way for about six months; then I got a set of the Cutieura Remedies, and in about a week I noticed a big difference, and in three weeks it was well entirely and I have not had the trouble any more, and as this was seven years ago, I consider myself cured. Medicine of Bamboo Sap.

In India the sap of the female bamboo tree is used for medicinal purposes. "Tabasheer," or "banslochan," is sold in all Indian bazars, as it has been known from the earliest times as a medicinal agent. It is also known in Borneo, and was an article of commerce with early Arab traders of the east. Its properties are said to be strengthening, tonic and cooling. It has been analyzed and has been shown to, consist almost entirely of silica, with traces of lime and potash. From its remarkable occurrence in the hollows of bamboos the eastern mind has long associated it with miraculous powers.
