Lost Mis Name.

One may, it seems, lose one's wits without altogether losing one's wit. Hearl Mellhac, a French dramatic author, who always had some clever thing to say, was troubted in his last days by a sad loss of memory. One day be exclaimed to a friend who called:

"Hurresh them."

called:
"Hurrab, I've got my name back!
Tou know 'twas forgotten."
"Why, nobody forgot your name"—
"Yes, I dd, and I should say that was quite enough!"
This was Meilhac's last joke. He died within a few days.

Eternal Fitness of Things.

The mistress of the house is a cultivated Bostonian of much musical taste, and the whistling of the footman, who believed himself alone to the house. Freited her artistic soul.

"Joseph," she called at last from the head of the back stairs, "please don't whistle those vulgar ragtime things."

"Yes, men," returned Joseph meek-th, "I how, mem," he continued, with mezypected spirit, "but you can't expect a rhapeody of Lisst with cleaning the knives. That will come later when I'm polishing the aliver." — Youth's Companion.

A Wonderful Happening

Port Byron, N.Y., has witnessed one of the most remarkable cases of healing ever-recorded. Amos F. King, of that place says: "Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured a sore on my leg with which I had suffered over 80 years. I am now eighty five." Guaranteed to cure all sores, by Barrington Pharmacy 52c

The Seatch Jures.

In Scotland in a civil case jurymen get 10 shillings a day for their services, and the litigants must in addition provide them with litigants must in addition provide them with litigants must be added to save tried consecutively on one day and the same jurymen officiate, they get 10 shillings for each case. But the Indian service of the same jurymen officiate, they get 10 shillings for each case. But the English and a Scottish jury is this: An English jury when returning their verdict must be unanimous, and if they fall to agree after a certain length of time they are dismissed, and the whole proceedings are begun again de nove before a fresh jury. This is a most expensive mode of administering justice. In civil cases, in order to avoid this result, the litigants sometimes agree to accept the verdict of a majority. In Scotland the jury can always give a verdict by a majority in civil cases after the lapse of three hours.—Chambers Journal.

Quaint Fish Has Numerous Names.
The monkfish is a quaint creature.
It is a sort of share, which looks much more like a skate, and other curious resemblances have given it a variety of popular names. It is called "monks fair" from its dechiedly cowilite bend;
"fiddle flah" because of its general share, and "augustlah" because the transfer of the property of the state of the property much like a very had winglike pectoral fins make it to the eye of fancy very much like a very bad angel. "Shark ray" is yet another name, and a composite photograph of a shark, a ray, a shate, an angel, a mouk and a fiddle would really give a very fair idea of this fish. Science is on the side of the angels, "with the name "squatina angelus." — Dundee Adver-tiser.

The Way of the Child.

A small boy who had recently passed his fifth birthday was riding in a suburban car with his mother, when they were asked the customer, the control of the conductor passed on to the next person.

The boy sat quite still, as if pondering over some question, and then, excitage that full information had not been given, called loudly to the conductor, then at the other end of the car, "And mother's thirty-one?"—Human Life.
