THE CURE OF WORRY.

Clear, Simple Common Sense Applied to the Business of Life to the Business of Life There are two reasons why man should not worry, either one of which must operate in every instance—first, Decause he cannot prevent the results he fears; second, because he can prevent them. If he is powerless to avert the blow, he needs perfect mental concentration to meet it bravely, to light the blow, he needs perfect mental concentration to meet it bravely, to light the blow, he needs perfect mental concentration to meet it bravely, to light the blow, he needs perfect he will be fears, then be has no need to worry, for he would by wo doing he dissipating energy in his very hour of need.

To cure one-elf of worry is not an easy task. It is not to be remored in two or three applications of the quack medicine of any cheap philosophy, but it requires only clear, simple common sense applied to the business of life. Man has no right to waste his own energies, to weaken his own powers and induence, for he has inalienable dutles to himself, to his family, to society and to the world.—William George Jordan in "The Kingship of Self Control."

How Browning Read Political Matter.

I have read the newappers only through Robert's eyes. He reads them in a room sacred from the foot of woman, and this is not always satisfactory, as whenever Robert falls into a state of disgnst with any political party he throws the whole subject over. Every now and then he ignores' France altogether, and I, who am more tolerant and more curions, find myself suspended over a hintus. I sak about
