ON THEIR WAY TO STOTT'S AMUSEMENT PARLOR

Gurran's Comment.
At a dinner table in London the conversation turned on public speaking.
Gurran stated that he could never address an audience for a quarter of an hour without mistaking his life.
"I have the advantage of you there," said Sir Thomas Burton, a pompous and pretentious member of parliament. "I spoke the other night in the house of commons for five hours on the subject of Omie and never felt in the least thirsty."
"That is very remarkable indeed," replied Gurran. "For every one agrees it was the driest speech of the session."
Physiology Up to Date.
After a lesson on digestion the teacher, anxious to know just how much her instruction had been understood, questioned the class. The first answer was rather discouraging, as the girl called upon made this startling statement:
"Digestion begins in the mouth and ends in the big and little testaments."
It was the same teacher who receded the following note:
"Please teacher do not tell Mary any more about her incides it makes her so proud."—School Education.
In France.

L'Amie-Oh, (graciously, is it true that you are to be married?)
L'Engueue-Quite true.

L'Amie-And to whom? Tell me, is he rich, handsome and well born?
What is his name? Who is he?

L'Engueue-I do not know, cherie, but I am to be married, for mamma says she is keeping her eyes open for a son-in-law, and, as thou knowest, I also am doing my very best.

Her Lost Jewels.
Backlots-What's this I hear about Mrs. Sweetman having robbed her jewels?

Backlots-Fact! They're gone, and Mrs. Kraft is the guilty party.

Backlots-What! You don't mean to say she stole—

Backlots-What else can you call it!
She offered the cook 50 shillings a week and the chambermaid 20 shillings, and now she's got 'em.—London Mail.
