A New Woman's Marriage.

Mrs. Elinor Glyn, the English novellat, who attempts, in her little books, to shock in the French manner, defided the "new woman" at a dinner in New York.

"These new women, with their clubs and their fierce chins," she said, "make me think of a conversation I heard once at a dance.

"So your sister, the sefior wrangler, one girl said to another, 'is very happily married, I hear?" "Indeed she is,' the other girl answered. She is most happily married. Hor husband daren't open his mouth in her presence."
