Those Broken Ranks

A Memorial Day Poem by Marion Courtney Smith.

[Copyright, 1908, by Marion C. Smith.]

A LONG the vistas of the land we view the marching files; We thrill to drum and bugle beat. To parting tears and smiles, The sighs of many a long farewell. Bound in our dreams we are, And, hark, the battle thunders over Across the gulf of years!

How strange, how swift, the after day! Spurred by the spirit of the ages by voices of sorrow and of praise In lessening murmur die; The ranks are thinned, their work long done.

The steady hands grown white, And brave old comrades one by one Pass out beyond our sight.

AND, HARK, THE BATTLE THUNDERS SWELL!

Now hope, now triumph, projects woe.

Have filled the nation's heart.

Strong men, once children at our side,

Now fill their destined part.

But, as they stand—those broken ranks—

To share with spirits dear

The income of a people's thanks

Upwing year by year.

Alas, how these young heroes

Will vanish from our view,

Their noble memories be no more.

Of man's old valor, others know;

Yet from the past,

With fiery fraught,

Their praises still shall ring.

And tribute to the graves be brought,

In lavish bloom of spring.

First, First and Last Shot.

In a fact of unusuality known that the man who died the first one in the civil war was killed with another不久后 not long after the close of the conflict. Edmund Miller, who was a member of the command of General Grant by firing the first canon shot, owned a large plantation on the James river, with many slaves. He was an old man, but intensely loyal to the south. By the time of his death he was 90. He was disappointed and humiliated was Rufus by the failure of the southern cause that on the 17th of June, 1865, at Amelia Court House, Va., the old man loaded a musket and killed himself.

Barrington Review.

M. T. LAMEY, Ed. and Pub.
BARRINGTON, ILLINOIS.

Some of the great Atlantic liners employ 150 firemen.

Japan is steadily increasing her exports of jinrikishas.

Everybody will rejoice to hear that the hens are laying only strictly fresh eggs this year.

Balls created a scare lately in a street in Mexico. They do that regularly in a street in New York.

The aristocrat's favorite way of dying society is to persist in going and staying where they are not wanted.

Lard is one of the chief Mexican imports from the United States. The figure for 1907 was nearly 7,000,000 pounds.

When man says that he never objects to fair criticism, he means usually that he doesn't protest against compliment.

We are glad to announce that in spite of the recent stringency in regular spring demand for fishhooks it is as brisk as ever.

The famous automobile racers around the world seem to do pretty well when they are loaded into a railroad car or a steamship.

German leads the world in the production of best sugar. British India in cane sugar and the United States in millionaire sugar refiners.

Judging by the thickness of the dust on the farmhouses, it is early in the season there appears to be no diminution this year in the popularity of the automobile.

At Mayville, Ky., high school students are striking because they do not like the new teacher. That unfortunate instructor should beware of juvenile night riders.

A large and very fine wildcat has been captured alive in eastern Ontario. This seems to put the quietus on the theory that all these animals are located around Cobalt.

Manchuria doubtless cherishes hopes of ceasing to be a bone of contention soon. There is no restriction placed on anyone's dreaming, but it is often necessary to try to make dreams a reality.

Why not put the anarchists in a nice large field and give them plenty of bombs to play with? The field would be well plowed when they were through, not to mention such a thing as fertilized.

How is this for a verbatim copy of a personal in the Boston Transcript: "Italian duke, agreeable manners, desires continuous wireless correspondence with American lady of means. Object Macaroni."

Announcement is made that the drought has so affected the Cuban sugar crop that the yield will be a mere fraction off—a small amount. Cuban refineries will be compelled to import large quantities of supplies from Europe, where the beet sugar industry flourishes. Is this not a hint to Americans? asks the Troy (N. Y.) Times. If the world makes a conspicuous success of beet sugar production, why cannot our people do the same thing?

Plans are maturing for the erection of a statue of Alexander Hamilton in Washington. It is rather curious that the man who is described by Bryce as "the greatest constructive statesman of the nation" should be represented at the capital by no monument, when so many lesser men appear in marble or enduring bronze. Perhaps, however, it will be time to make a monument which would overtop his own great work, the "Federalist."

Are slovenliness and general lack of neatness in one's dress a personal failing or a social failing of conscience? If so, it behoves all testators to beware of their raiment and of their personal cleanliness. Future contestants of their last wills and testaments may be watching them and taking notes of their appearance and manner of comporting themselves. Besides, personal neatness in man or woman is an attraction, and it costs nothing but a little care.

Again is proof furnished that weather is not all that counts to the United States. Germany is having an extraordinary instance of winter. Lingering well into spring. Heavy snowfalls are reported in many parts of the empire, with cold more suggestive of January than April. Italy also is a witness to the cold weather. A small patch announcing that intense cold prevails throughout the country, snow falling in towns where ordinarily the climate is very mild, including Milan and Perugia. Sunny Italy appears to have lost its balance for the time being.

J. M. Barrie recently headed a delegation representing a large majority of the dramatic authors of England who petitioned the British home secretary for the abolition of the dramatic censors. In introducing the delegation Mr. Barrie said: "We are not here to protest for the better, this there had been in the English drama for the last 50 years. Whether dead or alive, great or humble, English men of letters had been united as an almost solid body in a passionate protest for nearly 200 years against the humilia- tion of the censorship."

BOLD BANDITS ARE FOILED

TRY TO ROB BANK MESSENGERS IN BROAD DAYLIGHT.

Bravery of Men Attacked and of Woman Frustrates Crime on New York Streets.

New York.—The broad daylight in one of the densely populated parts of the city that day late Monday afternoon, a gang of bandits held up and rob a trio of bank messengers as they were carrying $42,000 in cash from one of the bank's branches to its main building.

Black pepper was showered upon the messengers, one of them was hit by a bullet and another was grazed with a knife. The desperate bandits, of their assailants to seize the money and escape with it before the arrival of assistance. That they failed to get clear with the values filled with cold and blizzards which the messengers resisted the attack and to the bravery of a young Polish waitress in a restaurant.

The messengers were employees of the Jefferson bank and were on their way to the bank on the corner of Houston street to the main branch on Canal street. On First street three men jumped upon them and threw pepper in their faces, the leading thus attacking Samuel Edelman, who carried the bulk of the money, grabbing him and attempting to pull him with it. The other two took care of Joseph H. Velzer and Abraham Stern, the other messengers.

Edelman tried to shake his assailant off, but was fading badly under the pummeling when Mrs. Eva Javornicka, waitress in a nearby restaurant, grabbed the bandit by the hand and held him by the arm. She screamed loudly for help that a patrolman came running up, frightening the other two thugs away, and was right at the heels of the man who had attacked Edelman. The patrolman had managed to shake himself free from the waitress and the other messengers.

The man arrested gave his name as Casimo Riccobono. The police later arrested Riccobono's father, Giovani Riccobono, and his two brothers, Salvatore and Domenico Riccobono, who are held as suspects for a further examination.

Sixty Perish in a Wreck.

Antwerp.—One of the worst rail accidents in Europe in recent times occurred in Consten, about six miles south of this city on the main line, at eight o'clock Thursday morning. The exact number of victims has not been determined, owing to the difficulty of removing the bodies from the cars, but the latest estimate places the number at 60 killed.

Senator Platt Wins Suit.

New York.—Mark W. Platt, whose suit for an antitrust decree against United States Senator Thomas C. Platt of New York has been on trial in the supreme court here for several days, was committed to the Tombs prison late Thursday after Justice O'Conor had dismissed the complaint in her action and ordered her held in $5,000 bail on a charge of perjury.

Log Disastrous to Shipping.

New York.—Dense fog banks which have been sweeping in from the sea for several days, enveloping the eastern coast of the United States, have detained and delaying all shipping, including two coastwise steamships—the Clyde Line steamer Seminole and an unknown steamer—off their courses. Monday on the shifting shoals that fringe the Jersey coast; caused a mid-night collision of two ships. Monday night in the harbor, which had over 300 passengers into a state of panic and snarled ferryboat service.

MRS. VANDERBILT DIVORCED.

Wife of New York Millionaire Is Granted Decree.

New York.—Mrs. Ellen French Vandebilt, granted an interlocutory decree of divorce from Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt by Justice O'Gorman in the supreme court Monday.

The decree provides that Mrs. Vandebilt may marry during the lifetime of Mr. Vanderbilt, but prevents him from marrying another during his lifetime.

The only child of the marriage was awarded to Mrs. Vanderbilt. No provision was made for alimony.

Mrs. Vanderbilt was Miss Elean French, daughter of the late Francis Ormond French, president of the Hanover Trust company and a member of the French family.

The crisis in the domestic affairs of Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt developed on April 1 last, when Mrs. Vanderbilt filed an action for divorce against her husband within an hour after he had sailed for England. The couple, it was reported, had not been living together from marriage, but during the lifetime of the son of William H. Vanderbilt, the only child of the marriage, was awarded to Mrs. Vanderbilt. No provision was made for alimony.

STRANGLES WIFE TO DEATH.

Ohio Man Confesses He Committed the Brutal Murder.

Newark, O.—Ernest Terwiler, self-confessed wife murderer, is lodged in the city prison and special agents of police reserves is on duty to prevent possible violence at the hands of infuriated citizens.

Terwiler was arrested Sunday morning following the discovery of the body of his wife, who had been strangled to death in her room, and in the afternoon he admitted the crime. As soon as the confession spread people began to congregate about the city prison where he was lodged, and by night the crowd became so large that the authorities considered it best to take precautions to insure the safety of the prisoner.

None Killed by Airship Fall.

Happenings in Illinois

News Notes of Interest Gathered in Cities, Towns and Villages of the State.

SAOLON MEN START TOWN.

Part of Town in Wet Township Denied Licenses.

Westville.—As a result of the local option election, April 1, when Georgetown township, in which a large part of the mining town of Westville is located, voted dry, and Danville township, in which the rest of the town is situated, went wet, many complications, the latest of which is a town hall fight, have arisen. After the town had refused to grant licenses for loans in the west part of town, an effort was made by the saloon men to oust Mayor Dowdall on the ground that he is not a naturalized citizen. This case is now pending in the courts, but in the meantime an agitation for the establishment of a town wholly within Danville township, but lying immediately adjacent to Westville on the north, was begun. An election was held Saturday, May 16, and two negative votes, the establishment of the new town, which will be called Belmont now being assured.

Turkey's Elaborate Armories.

Turkey prides itself on its armories and claims that no other country in the world can equal them. Constantinople boasts the roomiest and handsomest of all. The armories there are like palaces. In all the efforts and conveniences modern genius has put into them. These buildings are all erected on high ground and in many cases strike the eye of the approaching tourist before the gates of Constantinople are reached. This is true particularly of the Harem. There are many armories which always arouse the admiration of newcomers to the Turkish capital. The armories are surrounded by huge gardens with large courts and terraces, and require credit upon the Turkish authorities.

"You have myopia, haven't you?" asked the eye doctor who had called at the public library to look at a reference book.

"I don't know, sir," said the near-sighted attendant, blinking at him, "but if we have you'll find it in the catalogue."

Co-operative Farming.

It will take a long time for the American of adventurous habit to fall in line with common ownership, and probably the last to yield will be the farmer. It is not solely the profit on his plant which the farmer takes into account in sizing up his gains, but his independence. And he likes his old hours and chuckles even in hard times at the thought that come rain or drought or frost or sun he can pay his taxes and plod along somehow. But in co-operation the farmer may find steady customers for his small proprietor, and the government commission which has been suggested to aid in extending the co-operative system seems to have in it the germ of great usefulness.

Under the present commercial system the farmer is generally isolated. He must buy of the merchant and manufacturer and sell to them, but he deals in small quantities and can seldom take advantage of the state of the market. It has been shown by experiment that some of the disadvantages under which the individual farmer labors can be removed by co-operation. He can buy and sell on better terms, can keep in touch with the best markets, can buy in bulk, for that he can be part of a great commercial and industrial unit while remaining an independent factor. An intelligent government commission should be able to systematize the many co-operative features which have sprung up almost at random among agriculturists and aid in extending the best of these features indefinitely. What is needed is a general way is a co-ordination of the various forces and agencies devoted to the same end, and on this line the commission, in the light of experiments in other countries, should be given a wide field of opportunity.

He was serving a company in North Wales and while playing at cards with a boy of his district got into a dispute. His opponent's sister, who was watching the game, fiercely defended him. The future hero decided to stand up to the girl and bided his time. The girl, however, got the upper hand and fought so desperately that he was forced to retire from the field ignominiously vanquished. London Chronicle.

The Ocean Liner Purser.

The purser on a transatlantic liner is an exceedingly busy man when his ship is in port under a seaboard of quarantine. His trouble begins five days before the steamer arrives at New York Hook and continue until every passenger has left the pier. The purser is besieged by passengers who wish to exchange foreign money for American; he has to tell them when the steamer is expected to dock, when to set their watches ahead and reply to hundreds of other trivial questions. New York Tribune.

Sitting on His Hat.

I can vouch for the fact that in parliament hats are still sat on. How, indeed, can a man who has just put all his mental energy into a peroration be expected to remember that his hat is on the seat directly beneath him? Down he sits and with an explosive crackle converts what has been a tall and giddy into the semblance of a half closed concertina. Amid the more childlike joys of the house there is no incident that can compare with this—R. C. Lehmann, M. P., in Cussell's Magazine.

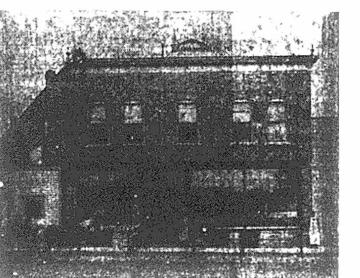

The Flank March.

"Stone wall died," ran one of the most popular fables, "and two angels came down from heaven to take him back to heaven. The angels did not find him. He was not there. They went to the hospital. He was not there. They went to the objects. He was not there. They went to the prayer meeting. He was not there. So they had to return to heaven. In the meantime, however, he had disappeared; they found that he had made a flank march and reached heaven before them."—Stone wall, by Lieutenant Colonel G. F. R. Henderson.

The Fight on Little Round Top

Valor of the Twentieth Maine at Gettysburg.

By FRANK H. SWEET

How Colonel Chamberlain
Won the Medal of Honor.

Copyright, 1908, by Frank H. Sweet.

THE war council of Federal generals the night before the second day's battle of Gettysburg became preoccupied with the frantic pretension of scanning the unknown. Outside on the lengthening rimps and between the abrupt ridges of the intersecting hills lay the encampments of the two hostile armies, ominous and solemn. There were few campsites. At first the ear could be heard the voice of a sentinel, challenging or the drawn out clatter of a horseman on the stone pavement of the cemetery. Daybreak found cautious General Meade still listening to the reports of his division commanders, to their stories of misfortune and plans for the repelling of the battle.

The unexpected was again to befall both officers and men, and they must be ready to perform miracles if need be. An instance of this kind was the fight of the Twentieth Maine on Little Round Top, in token of which the colonel of that regiment, Joshua L. Chamberlain, for his daring, deserved the medal of honor.

Little Round Top had escaped the vigilance of the Federal commanders. This was the smaller of two rough hills strown with boulders and bare, sharp rocks, and sharply separated from a great, long, behind which lay the Confederate battle line. At the foot of Little Round Top a body of Union troops had been posted.

It was now afternoon. Lee's attack was expected momentarily, and every man was watching intently with his gun at the ready. The long gap separated the two armies. Just at this time, by a fortunate chance, it occurred to General Meade to order General Warren to ride over the field in the direction of the Round Tops. Warren did so, and when he reached the foot of Little Round Top he left his saddle and climbed to the summit. What was his surprise to find at this point only one soldier, an officer of the signal corps! He no sooner looked about him than it became instantly clear to him that the top of this hill was in reality the key to the whole position. Chamberlain gave place to consternation.

With his glass he noted the thickly wooded ridge beyond the swamp.

"Captain," he said, "fire a shot into those woods."

The captain of the rifle battery did so, and a diminutive dark smoke-puff barrel and bayonet revealed the northern general the presence of a long line of the enemy far outskirting the position of the Union troops. The fact thrilled him. It was most appalling.

A strong force should have been moved up to the top of the hill, but it was now too late. He rushed off a messenger to General Meade with a penciled word to send General Warren at least a division to hold the position at Little Round Top.

On the summit were the signs of a force that had been advancing, and were beginning to fire. He folded up his flag and was going to leave, but at this moment Warren came back and induced him to keep the flag waving.

"It may puzzle those people," he said, meaning the enemy, "and may keep them back for a few minutes."

The young battery lieutenant spoke.

"General, what is the matter?"

"The deuce is to pay!" was the reply. "I hope you can hold out until the infantry comes up."

"I guess I can," answered Lieutenant Hazlett.

As a matter of fact, he stayed until he was killed.

The veteran Chamberlain thus describes what followed:

"Seeing the desperate situation, I had ordered my men to use the cartridges of the fallen, friend or foe. When they had fired their last cartridge into the faces of a rallying force I resolved to make a counter-charge. I had a sword and I dashed my officer on the winged bank, on whom the brunt was to fall. Returning to my center, I was about to order the movement when Lieutenant Melcher, commanding the now salient center company, came up and asked if he might be allowed to charge. I said, 'Yes, go ahead and rescue some of our wounded before the enemy should trample them underfoot. I admired his tenderness and courage and answered: 'Yes, sir; I will give you a charge. I am about to order a charge a few paces to our center and shout: 'Forward!' But no mortal could hear this, the roar of fire and shouts of my men drowning all words."

"We made a sickle sweep, a great eight wheel, with our whole line, astonishing the enemy into surprise, or so I thought."

"We charged, whole wallet between Little Round Top and brought back 400 prisoners. I had lost

half my men on the center and a third of the entire regiment on the line. The company I had sent out on our left

was not at first in the charge, but was soon to be nearly more than 200 men.

We later advanced in midnight

blackness, clambering the rough sides

of Great Round Top, beyond which

the remnants of Hood's division had retreated, and with the aid of two regiments had repulsed the assault.

The heroic leader of this remarkable action, besides receiving the medal of honor for his work at Gettysburg, was made a brigadier general on the field in a later engagement by General Grant, and in 1865 General Chamberlain was brevetted a major general "for conspicuous gallantry in action."

At the ceremony of the actual surrender of the arms and colors of the army at Appomattox Chamberlain was designated to command.

so that only 308 muskets were in line. We first fought without seeing the extent of the opposing force, and the fire was correspondingly increasing. Then the two tanking regiments (Fifteenth and Fourteenth Alabamians) and the Fourteenth Alabama, "turning attack," were met by a change of front. I sent also a strong company out on that flank to strike this attack in flank.

No sooner had Chamberlain's little force reached the portion of the hill assigned to it than it was engaged by the Fourth Alabama.

Soon a dozen men of Confederacy were sent toward the left-flank regiments of the enemy, containing a thousand men, had been ordered to turn the Union flank at exactly that position. Discerning in a dash the grave peril of his command, the Maine colonel sent out a company to swing back until it formed a line at a right angle to the front. At this instant the Alabamians attacked them on front and flank, opening with a murderous fire. There were five successive charges by this force.

Colonel Chamberlain with drawn sabre moved up and down his line, shouting, "Charge!" and the men responded with increasing enthusiasm. (Colonel and asked if he might be allowed to charge. I said, 'Yes, go ahead and rescue some of our wounded before the enemy should trample them underfoot. I admired his tenderness and courage and answered: 'Yes, sir; I will give you a charge. I am about to order a charge a few paces to our center and shout: 'Forward!' But no mortal could hear this, the roar of fire and shouts of my men drowning all words."

"We made a sickle sweep, a great eight wheel, with our whole line, as astonishing the enemy into surprise, or so I thought."

"We charged, whole

wallet between Little Round Top and brought back 400 prisoners. I had lost

half my men on the center and a third of the entire regiment on the line. The company I had sent out on our left

was not at first in the charge, but was

soon to be nearly more than 200 men.

We later advanced in midnight

blackness, clambering the rough sides

of Great Round Top, beyond which

the remnants of Hood's division had retreated, and with the aid of two regiments had repulsed the assault.

The heroic leader of this remarkable

action, besides receiving the medal of

honor for his work at Gettysburg, was

made a brigadier general on the field
