HER HAIR
By James Whitcomb Riley
The beauty of her hair bewilders me—
Pouring down the brow, its cloven tide
Swirling about the ears on either side
And storming round the neck tumultuously.
Or, like the lights of old antiquity
Through mullioned windows in cathedrals wide.
Spilled moltenly o'er figures deified
In chastest marble, nude of drapery.
And so I love it—either unconfin'd
Or plaited in close braidings manifold
Or smoothly drawn or indolently twined
In careless knots whose coils come unroll'd
At any lightest kiss or by the wind
Whipped out in flossy ravellings of gold.

DEATH OF OLD SETTLER.

Was Well Known, Having Resided Here Nearly Fifty Years.

After an illness of weeks, helplessly bed from paralysis, Godfrey Neuman, a farmer living south of Honey Lake near the district school, died Sunday afternoon, June 14th, at half past two. In the morning he was seized with a violent hemorrhage, presumably from the stomach and did not recover his senses. It is thought.

Being a resident in this country since for nearly half a century, he had a wide acquaintance and was always favorably known for honest dealing and industry as a workman. His life was spent in labor and he seldom went far from home. He was a member of St. Paul's Evangelical church, but belonged to no associations or lodges. On December 17, 1837, Mr. Neuman was born in Grosskreutz, Pommern, Germany and of his father's family only one sister is living who resides in Germany. In 1863, he immigrated to America and came to Chicago at once where he was engaged to work on the Kimberly place at Honey Lake and has remained in that vicinity since then.

In 1870 he married Miss Minnie Mergerson, who was born and raised on the old Kimberly place, now the Horgan farm, near the lake.

The past thirty-four years their home has been on the farm where he died and ten children were born.

Five children are living who were all here to the funeral and Mrs. Neuman is also living. Their names are Benjamin of Dubuque, Iowa; Clarence of Chicago; Fred of Barrington; Mrs. H. C. Sprague and Mrs. H. Sprague of Miranda, South Dakota.

Tuesday the funeral was conducted by Rev. G. H. Stanger at the home at one o'clock and burial was in the Main street cemetery.

LAST WEEK OF SCHOOL

Seven are Graduated, Rev.

Father Fox, Delivers Baccalaureate Sermon.

A class of seven bright young women were graduated from the Barrington high school this week, the second class to complete the full four years course now taught at this institution.

The finishing of Barrington school days brings a great change into the lives of each one, separating them from one another, perhaps forever, and leaving them to their own devices.

As these admirable young men and women of the class of '08 leave our village schools, at Sateadota, we congratulate them on attaining a state of mental development fitting them for graduation; we encourage them to realize that commencement week is followed by many opportunities for development in mind and morals; we all wish them joy and success, whether they remain in this locality or go to other homes.

UNDAY EVENING THE CLASS WAS GRADUATED IN THE ASSEMBLY ROOM OF THE HIGH SCHOOL BY THE REV. FATHER E. J. FOX OF ST. ANNE'S CATHOLIC CHURCH, BARRINGTON. THE HIGH SCHOOL TEACHERS WITH PROF. AND MRS. S. J. FULTON, WERE SEATED IN A BODY AND THE GENERAL PUBLIC FILLED THE SEATS.

After a hymn sung by the graduates, Father Fox offered a prayer and then spoke for an hour on the general theme of the value of an education. If it is sought and used, with Christian habits and respect for God and superior, the gentleman is a most pleasing orator, speaking in simple, forceful language in a conversational tone that holds the undivided attention of those fortunate enough to hear him.

His remarks were beautiful and convincing; his thoughts beautiful, and his knowledge of theology and the world gathered by years of study and travel, so great that he gives real pleasure and instruction to his listeners.

Father Fox believes worldly achievements, money, education and position to be valueless, if one's character and habits are not good and pure.

Another hymn closed the meeting.

ALUMNI BANQUET.

Although the Alumni association of the school here is small, being organized by the Class of '07, with sixteen members, nevertheless, an evening was given for its reception and initiation of the Class of '08 to membership.

The banquet was served in the Methodist church parlor for forty-five there being present, fourteen members of the Class of '07, six of the Class of '08, the teachers and invited friends. The graduates were made to stand in a row with raised arms during the reading of the supposed rule of the association and then were seated at the table in high chairs, made to wear old cloth hats and wooden spoons and plates. Roy Cole, alumni president, was toast master; George Froelich, '07, spoke on college life; William Gottschalk, '08, toasted the Class of '08 and Miss Helen Riley, '08, addressed the Alumni.

W. Mattison gave a short talk.

The menu follows:

Olives Cold Meats Pickles
Fruit and Nut Salad Potatoes Salad
Ice Cream Cake
Confections

A program at the high school was enjoyed later in the evening, consisting of: reading, Miss Lucy Walker; piano solo, Miss Virginia Allen; vocal solo, Miss Sadie Hocks; vocal duet, Misses Luella Landwehr and Mildred Effrinks; piano duet, Misses Payette Lawton and Maude Meyer; short address, Prof. Fulton.

CLASS DAY EXERCISES.

The third affair of commencement week was "Class Day" exercises on the evening of Tuesday at the school. The platform was trimmed with flowers and banners. The graduates were seated facing the large number in the audience and the program began with a song "Class of '08" written by Miss M. Plagge and very appropriate to the occasion, sung by the Misses Plagge and the Misses Boehmer and Pomeroy.

Victor Riecke, president, gave a short speech on education; Miss Lillian Volker, piano selection; Miss Virginia Allen read the Class Poem which she had written in good meter and expres-

Good Program.

The Odd Fellows Memorial service last Sunday afternoon in their hall in the Groff building was a most interesting service to those present and all pronounced the program arranged by C. H. Morrison a splendid one.

Two good speakers from the city lectured on lodge affairs and very pleasing vocal and instrumental music were enjoyed; the Misses Morrison, Blocks, Fletcher and Solt and the Barrington band were the musicians.

Chaplain A. C. Lines and Rev. J. H. Gagner of the Baptist church assisted and C. H. Morrison gave biographies of three departed brothers, Dr. C. H. Kendall, Silas Robertson and Charles Beckwith.

Bro. Louis Finger.

Fredrick Rogman, the 9 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Rogman of this street, was the victim of a regrettable accident last Friday afternoon about six o'clock.

He was leading a cow by a long rope on Williams street and when the animal started to run, he tried to wind the rope around a tree, but was dragged until his left hand was pulled across the back, and the flesh on the third finger stripped from the bone to the first joint. The child ran several blocks and was found by neighbors who hurried him to Dr. Richardson. The bone was immediately cut off in order to save the rest of the finger, leaving about half of it.

He was a brave little lad and bore the suffering and fright remarkably well.

Dragged by a Pony.

About the middle of the morning last Saturday, Herman Sandman, young son of Fred Sandman of Elm street, was dragged by his pony along Franklin street on the north side, from a barn near the Martin residence to Pomeroy's mill, a distance of two and a half blocks. The boy's foot became tangled in a rope which he had fastened to the horse and when the animal began to run, was unable to release himself. One arm was torn below the elbow and bruises on his body were bad, but he managed to keep a half sitting position and to keep his head from the ground, so that he escaped serious harm.

A Grand Family Medicine.

Lester M. Nelson, of Naples, Maine, says in a recent letter: "I have used Dr. King's New Discovery many years, for coughs and colds, and I think I saved my life. I have found it a reliable remedy for throat and lung complaints, and would not more be without a bottle than I would be without food." For nearly forty years New Discovery has stood at the head of throat and lung remedies. As a preventive of pneumonia, and healer of weak lungs it has no equal. Sold under guarantee at Barrington Pharmacy, 58c, and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

France is confronting a serious problem in the excess of the death rate over the birth rate. It is more than a national—it is a world tragedy for a nation so conspicuous in history and in romance, in poetry and gallant achievement as France to be compelled to face, even remotely, the prospect of dying out.

A foreign nobleman who has been turned to the United States says that American girls are foolish to marry for titles, as the titled husbands are no good, and do not represent the best of their class. He need not be giving this out for information, after the titled fortune hunters themselves have been doing everything in their power to publish broadcast the same knowledge.

A new German law provides that the German language shall be used at all public meetings and in the courts of the empire. This is part of the systematic effort to bring about the Germanization of Alsace, Germany, Poland and the Danish districts in Schleswig-Holstein. The number of people affected is about 4,000,000. Language is the mightiest implement of conquest.

There is in New Haven about 4,000 persons who have come from a single province in Italy. They pride themselves—and well they may—on the fact that during the last 20 years not one of them has been sentenced to jail in New Haven, there has not been a single divorce case, no one has been implicated in a murder case, and there have been few civil actions among them. It is evident, either that these Italians are more uncommon good people by nature, or that the "land of Connecticut" makes it still the "land of steady habits."

WOULD MODIFY LAW

WASHINGTON STAR ON THE REGULATION OF TRUSTS.

Believes That Features Applying to Existing Conditions Should Be Added to Statute—For Adjustment to Business Needs.

The Hartford Times takes a peep into the future.

In the end we prophesy the American people, with their eyes open, will sweep the Sherman anti-trust law of the statute books, and all its advocates and exponents out of power. They will do this because not to do it means a paralysis of all the business of the country and an end to all prosperity.

To what party does the Times look this service? The Republican party, which enacted the law, shows no desire to repeal it, and we may be sure the Chicago convention will not promulgate in favor of repeal.

Now will the Denver convention advocate repeal. Whether the Democratic candidate is Mr. Bryan or another, he must stand upon the record as respects the trusts, and that record is not brilliant.

As for Mr. Hearst's party, inspired as it is by him, and he inspired by his observations in New York, leaning toward trusts is about the last thing to be expected of it.

The Times should have predicted a modification of the Sherman law. That is likely. That would probably serve a good purpose. It has been years have gone by since the law was passed, and in the time many changes have taken place in business methods.

Evils which called the law into being have multiplied, and some have taken new form. This is plain to all eyes.

The law has not met the expectations of its friends, or redressed the grievances of the country. The law should be brought up to date.

There are 1800 it would require a good deal of space to describe.

The country is more convinced than ever of the necessity of government regulation of the trust power. The Sherman law is grounded in public necessity.

No party is going to "sweep the law off the statute books." To give the trusts full power would place directly into the hands of the capitalists.

The Sixty-first congress should deal with the subject. It might have been well had action of some kind been taken at the session not closing.

The bulk of the business community was large, and there was not time for everything that pressed for attention.

AS TO CAMPAIGN PUBLICITY.

Is Mr. Bryan Quite Bure That His Own Bkirts Are Clear.

Now that Mr. Bryan has got into the limelight on the subject of publicity of campaign funds as one of the "leading candidates" for the presidency, it is interesting to note that he is coming out.

Discovery has been made in New York that Thomas Fortune Bryan contributed $10,000 to the Nebraska campaign in 1904 to make Mr. Bryan a senator in congress and to induce him to give campaign support to recently may be late.

Mr. Bryan is not wholly pleased with the experiment and that Mr. Bryan is not happy.

We are inclined to think this measure of "publicity of campaign contributions" is too far in the class of ancient history to be of value.

Gov. John A. Johnson of Minnesota—himself a candidate for presidential nomination, though not one of the "leading candidates" of our respective parties—is more up to date and pertinent. It is that full publicity should be given the expenditures of candidates for nomination and for election before the holding of the nominating conventions or of the elections.

Should impel Mr. Bryan to a prompt proof by example of the sincerity of his precept. We might recommend the same to Mr. Taft. How much has the eminent Nebraska and his friends spent to procure the coveted nomination of "Denver"?

We have heard through The Commoner that the money power has been trying to buy unscrupulous denigrations. The charge indicates knowledge, and knowledge such matters may be gained through competitive bidding.

Mr. Bryan ought to tell the public how much his campaign has cost and for what purpose the expenditures have been made.

He might also make public the contributions of the opposition, on which he appears to be well informed. He ought to do this just to show at what small expense virtue and assurance can triumph.

The Currency Bill.

Despite Senator La Follette's blistering tactics, the Aldrich-Vreeland bill has passed the senate and will soon take its place in the statute book.

The country is, we think, to be congratulated on the outcome; for the measure, with all its faults, is better than none and should suffice to avert the peril of panic. It is enough to know that the currency may be given to the public.

IN LINE WITH HIS PARTY.

Bryan's Limitations Are Those of the Democracy.

While the common creed with respect to William Jennings Bryan contains a clause relating to his unwavering honesty and transparent sincerity, there are some modifications of this confession of faith upon the part of his followers.

A man embodying all the virtues is rarely a politician. While the honesty and sincerity of Mr. Bryan are still secure from severe assault, there is a modification that has come to light and is being made much of.

Mr. Bryan is of an adventurous habit, and dips into all kinds of problems and questions and has come to be thought by the rank and file of his party as a man of wide range of information and ideas upon all public questions. It comes with a shock to the popular impression, therefore, that a prominent banker, after hearing the Democratic sashen's recent talk about finance, should be convinced that the Nebraska does not know what a bank deposit is.

As a matter of fact, the criticism may be passed upon Mr. Bryan that his limitations of knowledge are in proportion to his command of verbiage. He does not seem to be a man of fundamental ideas on any leading question. His flaunting of the railroad question, with the subsequent strident and abandonment of the issue is a case in point.

Mr. Bryan speaks in all fields, but not with discrimination. The charges that he does not know is the most serious that could be brought against the Democratic champion, who confesses no limitations. There was some disposition to sneer at Mr. Taft because he honestly acknowledged that he did not know as an expert upon the tariff revision. But it is vastly more manly for a man of ideas, who can readily enough broaden out his fund of information upon a subject, to acknowledge limitations than for one who proceeds upon the assumption of all knowledge to seek to gloss over his weaknesses by the charms of speech.

But Mr. Bryan is as well informed as his party. They together represent the perversion of national experience and the denial of the obvious.

DUTY DEVOLVING ON STATES.

Properly Fulfilled, Leaves Little Need for Federal Interference.

Imbedded in Secretary Wilson's gratifying report as to the efficiency and adequacy of the federal machinery is the following valuable though not novel hint:

"Much of the responsibility for the sale of tuberculosis and other diseased beefs must be assumed by the individual states. We cannot touch plants which do not transact interstate business, and with tuberculosis on the increase every precaution against its entrance to the markets must be taken."

"It would be well if some of the states would pay greater attention to this branch of public hygiene. Such an increase of caution would aid materially in giving the purchaser a guarantee that his meat is in perfect condition."

Secretary Wilson's words ought not to need such painful emphasis, and yet a good many men throughout the country who are so much alarmed at the uses of federal authority developed recently may need something as violent as platitudes to bring them to a realization that the best of all ways to check the expansion of federal powers is to exercise state powers to their full and proper extent.

If the state does this few adjectives need to be used to describe the result. Furthermore, unless the state does this, the fullest exercise of the federal power will not fully protect the individual.

Appropriations Not Excessive.

The appropriations by the congress just adjourned sum up $1,095,804,494.57. It is the first real billion-dollar session, the largest amount appropriated at any previous session being that made by the final session of the Fifty-ninth congress, aggregating something over $967,000,000.

Chairman Tawney of the committee chiefly responsible for the national appropriation items, calls attention to the fact of essential importance in connection with the annually increasing expenditures by the national government when he shows that they have maintained an almost uniform proportion, except during the period of the civil war, in comparison with each $1,000 of national wealth. While it is true that our national expenditures exceed those of any other country in the world, it is also true that the aggregate of our national wealth pretty nearly doubles that of the richest nation on earth.

Behind the billion-dollar congress there is the country with an aggregate wealth of about $150,000,000,000.

There is considerable work of an important nature left over for the second session. But the Sixtieth congress, John D. Rockefeller, who has made a record for himself, and which will doubtless receive the thoughtful approval of the country.

A Concord dispatch says the New Hampshire Democrats gave "a big majority" against Bryan instructions. The New Hampshire Democracy might be expected to give more solid support to Bryan's instructions, and still the majority would not be "big."

THE OTHER SIDE OF THE BIG CONVENTION.

The Room and Bath Ordered Four Months in Advance.

ARGUE COAL ROADS CASE

GOVERNMENT SUITS BASED ON THE COMMODITY CLAUSE.

Admit Allegations, But Defendants Contend Their Mining Privilege Cannot Be Taken Away.

Philadelphia.—With many prominent lawyers representing the various interests in attendance, among them Attorney General Bonaparte, argument was begun before Judge Dallas, Burdett and Gray in the United States circuit court in this city Tuesday in the proceedings instituted by the government against seven coal-carrying railroad companies for an injunction to restrain them from treating anthracite coal in interstate commerce from mines in which they are interested financially.

The suits were instituted under the commodity clause of the Hepburn act, and the companies named as defendants are the Pennsylvania, Reading, Lehigh Valley, Delaware, Lackawanna & Western, Central Railroad of New Jersey, Erie, Delaware & Hudson.

The answers filed by the companies to the government's bill by the complaint admit the allegations concerning their interest in the mining and shipping of anthracite coal.

The defendants, however, contend that the mining privilege was conferred by state statutes and is not within the meaning of the commodity clause. All the defendants attack the constitutionality of the clause on the ground that it is confiscatory and class legislation and that it denies equal protection of the law.

Besides the attorney general the government was represented by L. A. Wilson, William T. C. Spelling, his special assistants. John G. Johnson of this city is chief counsel for the defense. Among the interested persons in court was President Baer of the Reading company.

Mr. Wilson opened the argument on behalf of the government at 10 o'clock. He was followed by Mr. Spelling, and after the other side had presented its arguments the attorney general closed for the government.

MOTOR CAR RUNS INTO RIVER.

Four Persons Drowned in Accident at New York.

New York.—Four persons were drowned Monday night when an automobile carrying a pleasure party of six became submerged in the Hudson river.

The machine turned over its plunger from the pier, holding the four victims fast in their seats. The dead are: Adeline Berdon, aged 18 years; Mrs. Rose Coleman, aged 23 years; John Coleman, aged 27 years, and Virginia Coleman, aged 21 years.

John Bauer, the chauffeur, was carried into the river with the machine and managed to free himself and swim to safety. John Nolan, one of the party, jumped from the runaway machine as it neared the river.

Theft Returned Four-Fold.

Washington.—Secretary Cortelyou has received, in an envelope postmarked Jersey City, a conscience contribution of $5,000, which has been turned into the conscience fund of the treasury.

In an unsigned letter the sender says that many years ago he and another man took a considerable sum of money belonging to the government and that this $5,000 makes a total of $40,000, or four-fold the amount originally taken by himself, that he has returned to the treasury from time to time in several years.

Stars and Bars Hauled Down.

Oswestry, N. Y.—A Confederate flag flying from the printing office of William J. Phylco on Main street was hauled down Monday by Commander A. B. Smith of the United States Army. Phylco was cited to appear before the post and explain his action in hoisting the flag so that it overlapped the American flag, and, flying from poles on the roof.

Kills Mother-in-Law, Shoots Wife.

New York.—Enraged because his wife planned to secure a divorce, John Blankmeyer, former inmate of Sing Sing prison, where he served a term for wife-beating, went to his home on West One Hundred and Forty-fourth street, Tuesday, and killed his mother-in-law, Mrs. Christina Meisner, and shot his wife, Mrs. Edna Blankmeyer, when she sought to interfere. Mrs. Blankmeyer is in a critical condition. Blankmeyer's mother had not been captured up to a late hour.

Plagues of Locusts in Venezuela.

Willmetts, Island of Curacao.—The invasion by locusts of the state of Zulia, in Venezuela, of which the capital is Maracaibo, is now on a very serious character. Fears are entertained that crops will be destroyed.

Ethel is of the mature age of five. Recently her grandmother concluded that it devolved on her to instruct the child in religious matters.

"You must be a good girl, Ethel," she said, "then you will go to heaven when you die."

Ethel seemed scarcely pleased with this reward for exceptional conduct, and she said, "Don't you want to go to heaven?" asked grandma, with a look of reproach.

"Oh, I don't know," temporized Ethel. "I guess not."

"Why not?" demanded grandma, severely.

"Because maybe I couldn't get out," answered Ethel.

"You wouldn't want to get out," replied grandma.

"Oh, yes, I should," returned Ethel, with conviction.

"No," argued grandma. "You would not. Why should you want to get out of heaven?"

BURTON NOMINATES TAFT

Representative's Speech at Republican National Convention Is Greeted by Wild Cheering--New Calls Session to Order.

Chicago.—Wild cheers from thousands of throats greeted the placing in nomination of Hon. William Howard Taft of Ohio for the presidency by Representative Theodore E. Burton at the Republican national convention at the Coliseum. More than 700 of the 850 delegates to the convention rose in their seats and yelled themselves hoarse when Mr. Burton had concluded his speech introducing the name of Roosevelt's right hand man to the body of delegates gathered ous to Senator Lodge's occupation of the chair. Flags, banners, bunting; in fact everything portable which happened to be at hand was tossed into the air and an enthusiastic woman advocate of Taft's candidacy used a Knox banner for the purpose of expressing her elation. Outbursts of cheers at times during Mr. Burton's speech interrupted him, but after a few moments' pause he continued. It was at the end of his address that the real pandemonium broke loose. Hundreds in the remote parts of the Coliseum had not heard a word of the speech because of the monstrous proportions of the building, but Mr. Burton's resuming his seat on the speakers' platform was signal enough to convey the idea that Taft's name had been placed in nomination, and then the demonstration broke loose.

Burton Starts on Lincoln.

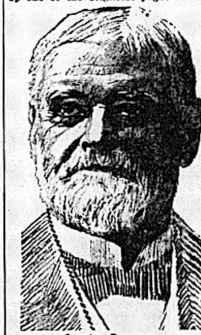

Mr. Burton said: "This convention enters upon the grave responsibility of selecting a presidential candidate with the serene assurance that the Republican party will continue to rule this people. It is especially appropriate that this gathering should be held in this marvelous city of Chicago. Here it was that the righteous uprising against slavery and Bourbonism, sprung from the nation's conscience, raised its first triumphant voice when Abraham Lincoln was nominated. And here, again, with notes of thunderous acclaim, ensnared through greeted the naming of Garfield, of Blaine, of Harrison, and of Roosevelt.

"Again Ohio presents a candidate to the national Republican convention. The most perplexing questions of today arise from the beautiful development of our material wealth. Such a development can not occur without the creation of inequalities and dangers to the social fabric. Most strenuously deny that the American business man or the American citizen cherishes lower standards than the citizens of any other country.

Pays Tribute to Roosevelt.

"Against all these abuses and in the work for restoring old ideals of honesty and equality, as well as for higher standards of civic duty, one man has stood pre-eminent, and that man is Theodore Roosevelt. Against corruption in every form he has set his face with grim determination, prompt and fearless in action and with that intelligent leadership which has assured the establishment of a better era in which the strong and the weak alike must submit themselves to the impartial execution of the law. The story of his achievements will make up one of the brightest pages in the history of this or any age and will prove that today, as in any critical hour of social unrest or of danger, the man will appear who can grapple with the emergency.

"Who so fit to take up the tasks which this wondrous generation demands should be wisely and impartially performed as his great war secretary? Since the day when, in Hon. John Harrison's administration, these two first met—the one as solicitor general, the other as a member of the civil service commission—they have been bound together by like ideals and aims, by close ties of friendship, and by the exchange of mutual counsel which with his own individuality and characteristics keeping constantly in view the emboldening vision of a better and a greater America. Since the day when, less than 30 years of age, Mr. Taft denounced, with burning words, a member of his profession who had been guilty of flagrantly vicious practices.

"And so today in the presence of more than ten thousand, and with the inspiring thought of the well-known thousand times ten thousand who dwell within our borders, I nominate for the presidency that perfect type of American manhood, that peerless representative of the noblest ideals in our national life, William H. Taft, of Ohio."

ROOSEVELT DEMONSTRATION.

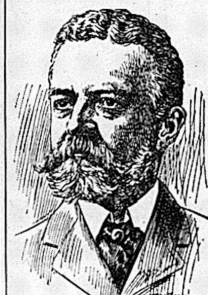

Delegates and Spectators Wildly Cheer President for 45 Minutes.

The second day of the Republican national convention brought the long-expected Roosevelt yell, a whirlwind of enthusiasm which raged within the vast amphitheater of the Coliseum for full 45 minutes Wednesday, and for a time presented to the timid the specter of a Roosevelt stampede. This demonstration was decidedly the feature of a day otherwise notable for a stirring speech from the permanent chairman of the convention, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts, for much practical procedure in placing the convention on a smooth running basis, and for the final defeat of the plan to reduce the representation of southern states at future national conventions.

Taft Men All Seated.

Probably the most important act of the day, and the one having greatest significance, was the adoption of the report of the committee on credentials, seating the Taft delegations practically in toto. If there had been any lingering doubt of the Taft strength it disappeared before this decisive action, which in effect placed upwards of 700 delegates in the Taft column.

Temporary Chairman Burrows called the convention to order promptly at 12:20, but the delay of committees in reporting gave an hour for diversion before the serious work of the day was begun. This time was given over to the visiting clubs, with bands and vocal choruses, bearing banners and strange devices of G. O. P. elephants. In front of the delegates played this motley throng, eliciting laughter and applause.

Great Roosevelt Demonstration.

Mr. Lodge early in his address launched his sentence which electrified the assemblage into its first real demonstration of enthusiasm.

"The president," exclaimed Mr. Lodge, "is the best abode and most popular man in the United States to-day."

This was the long awaited signal. Instantly a shout broke from the galleries and was echoed but from the floor, at first only a tempest of detached yells, and cat-calls, and shouts of "Teddy," but gradually gathering into a roar of conversation and motion, as delegates and spectators rose en masse, mounting chairs, waving banners, hats, handkerchiefs, flags, newspapers, anything which could be seized upon to add turbulence to the scene.

For three-quarters of an hour the tumult continued, and then Chairman Lodge finished his speech and the business of the convention was resumed.

Called to Order by New.

Promptly at noon Tuesday Chairman Harry New of the Republican national committee rapped smartly with his gavel on the presiding officer's desk in the Coliseum, and the Republican national convention of 1908 came to order.

The great building presented a magnificent sight. Every seat was occupied and the hundreds of flags and beautiful costumes of many women served to give brilliant color to the scene. For an hour the brass bands at either end of the building had been alternating in playing patriotic airs, while the delegates and spectators were gathering. When Mr. New arose the roar of conversation and the cheering of noted persons as they entered ceased. Mr. New spoke briefly and then introduced Bishop P. J. Muldoon of Chicago, who delivered the invocation.

Chairman Burrows Presented.

Again Mr. New arose, and this time called forth Senator J. C. Burrows of Michigan, whom he presented as temporary chairman. Chairman Burrows delivered a carefully prepared speech in which he reviewed at length the history and achievements of the Republican party, discussed the growth and development of the country under its rule, and praised in turn the work done by each of the nine executive departments, the army and navy and the pension bureau.

BLACK HANDS SHOT

THREE KILLED, ONE WOUNDED IN NEW ORLEANS.

VICTIMS QUITE UNHARMED

Wealthy Italian Merchant and His Son Dine the Blackmailers and Then Open Fire on Them.

New Orleans.—A "Black Hand" tragedy with the unusual sequel that all the blackmailers, numbering four, were killed or wounded, while their victims escaped without a scratch, was enacted here Wednesday in the historic former home of Gen. Beauregard in the French quarter, and now the residence of Pietro Giaconca, a wine merchant, reputed to be one of the wealthiest Italians in the south. Giaconca is 61 years old and how he and his son, Carrada, managed to kill three armed and desperate men is not yet clear to the police. It is certain that the Giaconcas invited the blackmailers into their house and wine and dined them for several hours before the shooting. The Giaconcas claim that the unusual feast was practically forced on them and that they did not shoot until after one of their guests had opened fire. The dead are Giovanni Baracca, Ciro Cusimano and one unidentified Italian.

The wounded man is Francisco Vattall of St. Louis. Vattall claims to have been shot while passing Giaconca's house, leaving the possibility that the four guests may have escaped, despite his wounds.

SHELLS STOP LUSITANIA.

Cunarder Delayed by the "War Game" at New York.

New York.—Projectiles from the batteries of 12-inch guns whizzing across her bow abruptly stopped the liner Lusitania in her run out to sea Wednesday. The great Cunarder was passing through the narrow water between the batteries of Fort Wadsworth and Fort Hamilton, manned for the attack of a fictitious enemy in the war game in progress, were in action.

The giant guns of Fort Wadsworth were directed at a target off Coney Island, while those of Fort Hamilton were hurling their fire toward a target off Sandy Hook. The shells tore over the water at an angle, crossing each other with mighty splash and falling into the water of the bay. Soon the firing ceased and, following a 20 minutes' wait, the Lusitania forged ahead.

Army officers at Fort Hamilton declared that the batteries had been very careful to cease firing when vessels approached and that the Lusitania would have been in no danger. Her approach was observed and the officers were ready to stop the bombardment as she drew nearer, they said.

CONGRESSMAN WILEY DIES.

Representative from Alabama Who Saw Service in Cuba.

Hot Springs, Va.—Representative A. A. Wiley of Alabama, who served in Cuba as Gen. Lawton's chief of staff and as civil governor of the eastern province, and a member of the last four congresses, died at a hotel here Wednesday. He was about 50 years of age.

He suffered for weeks with inflammatory rheumatism and general physical breakdown and during the last of his illness became irrational through the protracted strain on his system.

MORSE IS INDICTED AGAIN.

He and A. H. Curtis Accused of Making False Entries.

New York.—The federal grand jury Wednesday found a third indictment against Albert G. Morse, president, and Charles W. Morse, vice-president National Bank of North America, charging them with making false entries in response to the comptroller of the currency and the misapplication of funds for speculative purposes, amounting to about $1,250,000.

Primary Results in Florida.

Tallahassee, Fla.—Returns received from Tuesday's Democratic primary indicate the nomination of Albert Gilchrist for governor, over J. N. C. Glick, and for the United States senatorship Duncan U. Fletcher leads Gove, throwed by about 1,000 votes.

Farm Lands Inundated.

St. Charles, Mo.—Four hundred feet of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas railway, and surrounding, which served as a levee protecting St. Charles county farms from the Missouri river, gave way Wednesday and 4,000 acres of farm lands were inundated.

Lexington, Va.—The degree of doctor of laws was conferred Wednesday upon United States Senator Owen of Oklahoma by Washington and Lee university.

Widow Gets All Belmont Estate.

New York.—The will of Oliver H. P. Belmont was filed Wednesday. Mr. Belmont is to receive all the real and personal property and she is named executrix of the estate. The value of the estate is not given.

Bunker Hill Day Observed.

Boston.—The observance of the one hundred and thirty-third anniversary of the battle of Bunker Hill in Boston and surrounding cities and towns Wednesday was confined almost entirely to sporting events.

INVALID'S SAD FLIGHT.

After Inflammatory Rheumatism, Hair Came Out, Skin Peeled, and Bad Sores Developed—Only Cuticura Proved Successful.

"About four years ago I had a very severe attack of inflammatory rheumatism. My skin peeled, and the high fever played havoc with my hair, which came out in bunches. I also had three large bad sores on my back. I did not gain very rapidly, and my appetite was very poor. I tried many 'sure cures' but they were of little help, and until I tried Cuticura Rheumatism I had had no real relief. Then my complexion cleared and soon I felt better. The bad sores went away after a few applications of Cuticura Ointment, and when I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment for my hair it began to regain its former glossy appearance. Mrs. L. J. An All-Round Book.

The book agent had spent a discouraging morning, and when he had an opportunity to scan the face of Eli Hobbs at close range, he felt that there was small chance of making a sale. However, he had more than one method of suggestion.

"Sitting out here on the piazza afterwards with your wife, this would be the very book to read aloud," he said ingratiatingly, to Mr. Hobbs, taking the other rocking chair and opening the large red-covered volume.

"I don't read," said Mr. Hobbs, replying to Mr. Hobbs, dryly.

"Dear me!" said the book agent. "Well, if your wife is dead, perhaps there are children. Now, children find this book."

"There are no children," interrupted Mr. Hobbs, and there's nobody but myself and my cat."

"Well," said the book agent, "don't you ever want to read a good book? I throw at her, just to ease your feelings."—Youth's Companion.

"Internal Revenue" Collections.

The term "internal revenue" has been restricted in its meaning to such revenues only as are collected under the internal revenue bureau.

connected with the treasury department, and does not include all revenues that are, properly speaking, from internal sources, that is, from sources other than duties levied at the frontiers upon foreign commodities. Thus, money arising from the sale of public lands, from patent fees, or the revenues of the postal service, are not generally known as "internal revenues."

Water, Water, Everywhere.

During the flood of 1903 an old dairy living in a good barn, bottomed awake one morning to find his premises four feet under water. Later he was found by a party of rescuers walking about the yard prodding into the ground with a fishing pole. He was asked his purpose.

"Good gracious," he said, "what do you think Ah an' doin'! Ah an' tryin' to find mah doggone well so Ah can git mahself a pal of watah."

"TWO TOPERS."

A Teacher's Experience.

"My friends call me 'The Postum Preacher,'" writes a Miss school teacher, "because I preach the gospel of Postum everywhere I go, and have been the means of liberating many 'coffee-pot' slaves."

"I don't care what they call me so long as I can help others to see what they lose by sticking to coffee, and can show them the way to steady nerves, clear brain and general good health by using Postum."

"While teaching girls I drank coffee and had fits of trembling and went through a siege of nervous prostration, which took me three years to rally from."

"Mother coaxed me to use Postum, but I thought coffee would give me strength. So things went, and when I married I found my husband and I were both coffee toppers, and I can sympathize with a drunkard who tries to leave off his cups."

"At last in sheer desperation I bought a package of Postum, followed directions about boiling it, served it with good cream, and saved my husband how he liked the coffee."

"We drank three cups apiece, and what a splendid feeling! My husband's conversion has lasted several years and will continue as long as we live, for it has made us new—nerves are steady, appetites good, sleep sound and refreshing."

Trees as Soil Builders.

Studies of the various regions of the country and of the trees adapted to culture in each are made by the forest service at Washington, and one of these studies recently has been to point out how waste and neglected spots may be turned into wood-lots to serve the double purpose of furnishing timber and improving the soil. Results of these studies and experiments may be had by application to the agricultural department.

Many poor soils now waste spots on the farm would become profitable if planted with the right kind of forest trees and cared for in the right way. Trees will often grow where grain and grass will not, and certain forest trees thrive in the very soil where fruit trees fail. Swamps, stony ridges, exhausted fields and washed hill-sides need not be abandoned. There is money in most of them if they are set to work producing wood-lots and forests. But knowledge and judgment are necessary, and a bad guess may be costly.

Many trees do well in these soil-conditions bearing trees in particular. The farmer is fortunate whose land has no poor spots. Few landowners are so well off. Fertile acres are usually fairly productive, but the gravel bar, rocky knolls, marshy swales and exhausted and eroded slopes are not. Scarcely one of them need remain unproductive. They will grow (hillsides, pine, locust, poplar, orange, oak, oak, chestnut or some other kind. But the soil must be studied and the species selected to suit it. Failure might follow the planting of walnut on soil suited to white pine, or vice versa.

It is decidedly worth while to keep all of the farm at work. The owner pays taxes on all his land and is out of pocket for whatever is not earning him something. Further, by growing a tree crop on land which is too poor to plow the quality of the land itself is improved. Forests add humus to the soil, better its character, and it has lately been discovered that the decaying leaf litter has also the power of gathering from the air a certain amount of nitrogen, the most important of plant foods. In this respect the forest does for the soil what leguminous crops, like clover and alfalfa, do. Wood growing on worn-out land thus becomes doubly profitable. The land is made useful and improved at the same time.

A Good Word For Trade Schools.
The fact that a green boy who wants to do right will be given instruction in the average machine shop does not solve the apprentice problem, according to a writer in the current Engineering Magazine. Preparation for doing right is lack of the success of money, and want of preparation in the average machine shop does not solve the apprentice problem, according to a writer in the current Engineering Magazine. writer, who says:

The boys from these schools are somewhat different from others. A young man who has ambition and persistence enough to go through one of these schools is worth more than the ordinary "scrub" and is more capable. But just as we must recognize that our shops have many youngsters made of just as good timber. However, the shop trained boy is liable to get false ideas of the value of his "card" and, moreover, is affected by his home training, whereas the trade school boys enter the shop knowing that they have much to learn. To quote further:

They will try to run their tools and produce the work as directed by the foreman. You will notice that they have learned the lesson to obey at school, while the other boys have not learned this either in school or at home. This defect of home training is being felt throughout the whole country in all departments of work, and what we shall do in the future for good all around mechanics is a mystery to me. Many of our shops are willing to teach boys, but what do they get in return? When the apprentice has been in the shop about two years he becomes discontented and goes to work for another shop as a journeyman. I believe that manufacturing concerns should require a written certificate as to the past whereabouts of men applying for positions. It would tend to correct this evil.

The decay of any real power of thinking is an adequate explanation of a great deal of the mortality of prosperous middle life, says the London Lancet. The business man of forty is often content to live in the more or less perfect habit that he has acquired and dies from stupidity. There is nothing left to keep him alive.

Every foreign observer, says the London Spectator, believes that the grand struggle between the "haves" and the "have nots" which is to mark the century will be fought out first of all upon American soil.

The Chinese government "commands" all viceroys and governors to encourage the people to cultivate cotton. This is because the demand for cotton goods increases in China every year, and the people must buy from the hated foreigner. As an imperial wish has all the force of a command in China, it goes without saying that this demand will be made to increase now and then by good authority that the digging goes right on. The recent report to that effect by Secretary T'ao is assuring. It ventures the guess that the work of digging can be finished in three years.

The locks and dams are the great uncertainties about the canal. The ditch can be dug, and in we prove that the project of a waterway across the isthmus is feasible. The work is to last for all time practically, and what remains to be added to the ditch to make it available for commerce should be well done. The health and the labor problems seem to have been solved. Patience and economical management will do the rest in time.

Digging the Panama Ditch.

And all the speculation and controversy about the cost of the Panama canal, the time required to complete it and the uses to which it can be put in the future, it is a relief to be reminded now and then by good authority that the digging goes right on. The recent report to that effect by Secretary T'ao is assuring. It ventures the guess that the work of digging can be finished in three years.

The locks and dams are the great uncertainties about the canal. The ditch can be dug, and in we prove that the project of a waterway across the isthmus is feasible. The work is to last for all time practically, and what remains to be added to the ditch to make it available for commerce should be well done. The health and the labor problems seem to have been solved. Patience and economical management will do the rest in time.

The Dominion of the Mind.

Some novel and interesting observations on the action of electricity upon the human body have recently been contributed to Nature-Knowledge by Dr. Otto Fromm. This German scientist affirms that the action of electrical currents upon the human body may be modified and even neutralized by the state of mind of the person in contact with them. It is stated in the article that when electricians touch parts of electrical machinery purposely to ascertain whether there is any current in them a powerful current will do them no harm, but an unintentional contact with the same current will prove fatal.

A case is cited where an unexpected shock of 250 volts was terrible, though not fatal, whereas an expected shock of 500 volts made little impression. In another case an expert picked up one end of a broken wire containing 250 volts without suffering the least harm. Dr. Fromm calls this a control of electric field and adds, "There is something imposing in the fact that the will power in such a case operates as an opposing equal force and comes out triumphant."

A very fine point is involved in this discussion, for it may be that it is the superior mind in controlling matter and not altogether the power of the current which leads to deadly results. Other students of the subject have touched dangerous wires when asleep and escaped without serious injury and that an ordinary deadly current did not harm rabbits while they were under the influence of chloroform. The power of the mind in controlling matter, physical sensations and in overcoming certain forms of mental disorder has long been recognized by scientists and philosophers. It is generally assumed that one may enter a serious ailment through the imagination. Conversely a healthy frame of mind or a mind refusing to believe in danger, sickness and pain might be able to counteract what would prove serious in the presence of mental indolence and passiveness. Necessity for mental activity and moral courage has been known to cause the sick and weakly to become healthy and strong.

A Foreign Study of the "Panle."

In a recent report to parliament the British commercial agent in the United States, Mr. Seymour Bell, presents a clear and frank opinion of the many causes of the acute financial depression which set in at the close of 1907. Among the causes enumerated are high wages, high cost of living, tremendous industrial activity in the way of improvements and extensions, speculation and personal extravagance. To quote further:

"The situation was peculiar. On the one hand, there were the manufacturers with more money than they knew what to do with, enlarging their plants, merchants selling at auction at prices well above the market, labor in such demand that even with the scarcity of the 1907-1908 season it was necessary to employ inefficient workers at good wages. On the other hand, there was dear money owing to the scarcity of funds in New York. The situation was thrown on the management of the city, public confidence, which had previously been undermined by certain industrial failures, was shaken, and the result was a severe money panic. Careful students of the situation had foreseen a collapse before the end of the year, but they had believed that it would come with such suddenness."

Fortunately, warning of the impending trouble was given early, and it was possible to take steps to ward off a complete disaster. On this point Mr. Bell observes:

"The panic was entirely financial. It was, it is true, brought about by a widespread suspension of trade and industry throughout the country, but there continued to be no throwing on the market of more than a moderate amount of securities. The component of industrial panic, the manufacturers, on the contrary, found themselves without delay proceeded to curtail the supply and thus reduced the chances of a serious market panic. In the meantime the market was stabilized."

As to the length of time the present depression lasted, it is difficult to form an opinion. It must not be forgotten that the farmers, who form the backbone of American prosperity, have not been affected by the financial situation."

According to the New York Tribune, there are nine Confederate major generals surviving. Of the civil war surviving Federals the Confederates three, to one at the time. It is a little singular that the southerners show up so well on the survivors' list.

As a social reformer alone Tolstoy would never have commanded world-wide appreciation. It was as a novelist, a novelist only, that he gained the peak of supremacy.

The man who does not believe in making playgrounds for his little children at the public expense has probably never been in a crowded residential district on a summer day.

The death of a veteran of sixty battles, more or less, in an auto accident shows that peace also has her perils no less vicious than war.

It has received in the Barrington school. Walter Sears played a beautiful concert solo in the absence of Miss Davarak, violinist. Mr. Sears is one of the popular musicians of this vicinity and has wonderful musical genius widely admired.

Dr. C. Blanchard, president of Wheaton college, won the affections of all the moment he began to speak; whether it was mostly his noble, fatherly appearance or his pleasant tones and ways is undecided, but he was popular at once and all listened to his lecture intently. The subject was "The Best Things in Life" which the doctor declares to be doing the best you can always; commanding the respect and confidence of your associates; loving and serving God.

The gentleman cleverly inserted stories, humorous and pithy, to illustrate his points. He believes that a good name makes better men and more than earthly possessions. "What is truly are and not what we seem to be, is what counts. He also feels that if a man's family, wife, children and relatives love him and trust him, that the opinion of the world matters little in his judgment of him."

Dr. Blanchard is the father of six daughters and one son. He has traveled widely in this country and abroad. Since the age of fifteen he has taught and is also a Congressional minister.

After a sweet soprano solo by Miss Emma Pomeroy, Prof. S. J. Fulton presented the diplomas, which are usually given by the president of the Board of Education, unless the Superintendent is retiring, and as Prof. Fulton is leaving Barrington, he was asked to officiate. He also drew attention to the fact that although the class seems small, its per cent of the students is really large, for it is a matter of statistics that an unsatisfactory number in all parts of the country are completing high school courses.

The Beethoven trio of violin, piano, bass viol. W. N. Sears, Prof. Sears and E. Wilmer closed the exercises with a rendition of difficult composition. Today the class with about a dozen friends are enjoying a picnic at Lord's Park, Elgin.

"Safely" Invested.

"Tell yer what, John," said a farmer just returned from London to his son, "I've been an idiot to let my money stay in the 'ol savings bank at 2 1/2 per cent all these years when they pay 5 per cent in London."

"I don't believe they pay no such interest," said John, with a determined frown.

"Oh, yer don't, Mr. Smarty, don't yer? Well, I've just lent £20 at that very rate today. I'll tell you how I done it. I met a young man in front of the Mansion House, and he says to me, says he, 'Sir, I would like to borrow £20, for which I will pay 5 per cent interest.'"

"But," says I, "I don't know you, and how am I to tell you that you will pay me the interest?" If you doubt me, sir," says he, "I will pay you 5 per cent in advance."

"Well, that looked safe enough, so I gave him two ten-pound notes, and he paid me 20 shillings back for the interest on the spot. I'm to meet him at the same place every year and get the interest. I tell you what, John, it makes me wild to think what I've lost all these years."—London Queen.

A Novel Rudder.

During the Abyssinian war a company of the naval brigade assisted the troops in transport work. The sailors had great difficulty in managing the galleys, and George A. Henty, the author, who acted as a correspondent during the war, pointed out that a small boat being led by a sailor with another sailor walking behind holding the animal by its tail.

"Hello, Jack," cried a sailor. "Where are you going?"

"Don't know," replied Jack. "I'm only towing this 'ere craft. Ask my mate behind; he's doing the steering!"

Think Horse is Stolen.
A week ago Monday, June 8th, Robert Comstock, liveryman, rented to an insurance agent of the North American company from the Elgin office, a horse and buggy valued at $100. The man hired the same for several days and stopped one evening at the Hansen farm.

He wrote several policies at different places but was dismissed for drunkenness from work when he returned to Elgin. He disappeared and all efforts have failed to trace him in the Fox river towns.

The company is conducting the search for Mr. Comstock.

"E. C." Girl Here.
Miss Beatrice Eay, of Chicago, representing the Egg-Sereal company, is in town today. She is one of the "E. C." young ladies, widely advertised in city papers at present, who give a dollar bill to each housewife who has purchased a round package of "E. C. Corn Flakes," a new breakfast food.

Taking Care of Husbands.
There's no romance left in the world, anyway. Time was when girls dreamed of Prince Charming and didn't bother about anything less important than the color of his eyes and the way he tied his cravat. Now they're thinking of a lunk about so large that almost any man will be quite indistinguishable hidden behind it. They're doing worse than that. I overheard two sisters of girls, neither of them older than thirteen, exchanging confidences.

The taller one was all for marrying money. The shorter one said the man to be an architect and earn her own living.

"But if you'd marry a rich man you wouldn't have to," objected the taller girl.

The midget answered up her face shrewdly.

"You can't never tell about money," she said. "He might go and lose it, and then where'd I be with him to support if I couldn't work?"

"And would you try to support him?" asked the first girl, a bit awestruck.

The other nodded.

"I'd give him car fare every morning and 15 cents for lunch," she said magnanimously.—Washington Herald.

Glass of Wine by His Own Fire.
When Drury Lane theater was first destroyed by fire Sheridan, its owner, was occupied in the company with his parliamentary duties, and his sympathetic colleagues immediately voted the adjournment of the house and hurried off to see the conflagration. Sheridan himself opposed the adjournment, but, being outvoted, went and watched the destruction of his property from a neighboring house, sharing a bottle of port with Harry. His apparent indifference prompted some friends to exclaim with him, whereupon the author of "The School for Scandal" petulantly observed, "It is hard when a man cannot drink a glass of wine by his own fire." This fire completed Sheridan's financial downfall, and, forsaken by his friends, he died soon after the new theater began its checkered career.—Westminster Gazette.

CAUSE OF BAD ROADS.

Businesslike Methods Not Used In Highway Construction.

THE RIGHT SYSTEM LACKING.

Road Bosses Should Be Removed From Politics and Made to Pass an Examination Showing Their Efficiency. Change Needed in Road Laws.

A buck number—the bad country road is a buck number. It is as much out of place and date as the grain cradle or fall thrasher. They had bad roads away back in grandfather's time—ever since people began to travel, to haul stuff in modern narrow tired wagons. They had good roads away back in Caesar's time in the old world. What progress have we made in road building? Very little. Over three-fourths of all the miles of country roads in the midwest are still unimproved, says the Agricultural Southwest. In most states 90 per cent would be more nearly correct. Of course every bit of road gets its annual tearing up by the road officials, who draw a salary for calling it road "improvement."

Why is it thus? There's a reason why country roads are bad. Can't say it to the weather or the road material either. As one farmer says, "I have seen in twenty-three years hundreds of thousands of dollars of taxpayers' money expended on the roads in town and country; but, after all, our roads are still as bad as ever. I can't say it to the weather or the road material either. FIERCE WIND RAZES CAMP

THREE THOUSAND TENTS AT PINE PLAINS BLOWN DOWN.

Gale Sweeps Away the Paymaster's Fund, Minors Attack New York City by Ships Planned.

New York.—Pine Plains, the concentration camp of the federal soldiers and national guardsmen, was torn up from end to end of the seven miles of territory, Sunday by the most severe wind and rain storm that has visited that section for years.

Three thousand tents were blown down, mess shelters were leveled and more than 100 horses stampeded and escaped from their corrals.

It was the soldiers' first drill of the field maneuvers, which take place this week under Gen. Fred D. Grant, commander of the department of the east, but it was not of the kind anticipated. Paymaster John S. Mallory was paying off the Twelfth United States Infantry when the storm descended. He had arranged the money in heaps of bills, preparatory to distributing them among the men. Mal. Mallory and his assistants made an attempt to get the money back into the strongboxes, but they were unsuccessful, and in a moment the air was full of currency.

Bills of many denominations were found scattered over a territory of a mile or more, and probably the greater part of the money will be recovered. The troops will be kept busy with day and night maneuvers, solving various problems of defense and attack, outpost duty and other activities of troops in the field at war.

While the regulars, a brigade of Massachusetts militia and a regiment and several troops of a battery of the New York National Guard are struggling with the rules and rigors of military camp at Pine Plains, ships classed as foreign vessels will endeavor to capture New York city, which will be defended by regulars and a new National Guard regiment of the coast artillery. Under the direction of the regulars the militia will carry the task of operating the big defense guns in the four forts guarding the harbor approaches.

JOHN VINES WRIGHT DIES. He Was the Oldest Living Ex-Member of Congress.

Washington.—John Vines Wright, who was the oldest living ex-member of congress, died Friday at his home in this city. Although near 80 years old, he had been regularly at his desk in the general land office until two months ago, when he had a stroke of paralysis. He held the unique distinction of making more treaties with the Indians than any other man. Judge Wright was born in McNairy county, Tennessee, in 1828 and was educated in Louisville. He was admitted to the bar in 1852 and was elected to congress in 1854, serving in the memorable sessions preceding the civil war. He resigned when the state of Tennessee seceded in 1861 and served in the army until he was elected a member of the conference congress. While colonel of the Thirtieth Tennessee regiment his horse was shot from under him at the battle of Belmont.

After the war Col. Wright served as chancellor and judge of the supreme court of Tennessee. During Cleveland's first administration he was appointed chairman of the northwest Indian commission. In 1890 he was a factor for governor of Tennessee but was defeated.

HOT ONIONS FOR PNEUMONIA.

Dread Disease Robbed of its Terrors by Simple Remedy.

Owing to the prevalence of pneumonia and the great mortality which attends its ravages during the winter and spring, several boards of health in northern New Jersey have been taking measures to protect the citizens of their towns from the disease. The health board of Washington, N. J., has published a remedy which is said to be a sure cure for pneumonia, and other health boards are looking into the matter with a view of having the same thing published for the good of the general public. This is the publication as it has appeared in the papers of Washington:

"Take six or ten onions, according to size, and chop fine, put in a large spider over a hot fire, then add the same quantity of rye meal and vinegar enough to form a thick paste. In the meanwhile stir it thoroughly, let it simmer five or ten minutes. Then put in a cotton bag large enough to cover the lungs and apply to chest as hot as patient can bear. In about ten minutes apply another, and thus continue by reheating the poultice, and in a few hours the patient will be out of danger. This simple remedy has never failed to cure this loathsome, fatal malady. Usually three or four applications will be sufficient, but continue always until the perspiration starts freely from the chest. This remedy was formulated many years ago by one of the best physicians New England has ever known, who never lost a patient by the disease, and won his renown by simple remedies."

Milder Definition. At Emerson's dinner table one day there was mention of a woman well known as a lion hunter; and, in speaking of her, Mrs. Emerson used the word "snob." Mr. Emerson objected, saying she was too harsh; he didn't like that ugly class of words beginning with "sn." His wife inquired how he would characterize the lady. "I should say a 'very slowly'—she is a person having great sympathy with success."

An Important Line. "She is a most accomplished woman." "Is she?" "Why, have you heard her sing?" "Yes." "And seen her paintings?" "Yes." "Then how can you say?" "I have never tasted her pie."
