Deliberation 1. Clarrying.
Without waiting for a decision in the debate going on all over the country as to the lowest limit for income desirable in married life, a Harvard professor and a Boston prescher have undertaken to fix a limit decignation. It is reported that the professor holds it to be a "lain against the country for a man to marry uses and that the received of the professor holds in the country for a man whose income is tess than $12 per week. The justification for the limit is essentially the same in each case.

The professor holds that children cannot be properly brought up on an income less than $20 a year, and an attempt to do so would "lower the standard of American clifsonship." The prescher thinks that marriage on less than $12 a week "tends to the increase of poverty." These views are noteworthy at a time when restrictions are being pieced upon marriage in haste. The restrictions, however, have to do with the legal status of the union. The taking out of a license leads to some deliberation and is not without moral effect. As a rule all who are interested in the marriage of any particular couple, except some deliberation. Restrictions, therefore the likely to become unoppalar uneliberation. Restrictions, therefore, re not likely to become unpoundar unmass they tend to discourage wedlock, trungerly enough, this tendency of urs to place restrictions of one sort of another upon marriage is contem-orary with a movement in France to bate long standing restrictions which re believed to have discouraged marperieven to have discouraged mar-ge and worked harm for the coun-and for society. Perhaps there is healthy middle ground and we shall sell it after a stage of experiment.

A Little Japanese Fiction.

It must have required some clever conclusing to work the present generation of Japa up for the bearty wellow, the property of the wellows they recently gave our battle-ship deet. The keynote of the wellome seems to have been that the unserteans brought greatness and prosectify to Japan and that the demonstration of 1008 was only an answer o the call of Commodore Petry fifty ears ago, when Japan was opened up of the world.

It has never been of the second force and guns that counsetted the Japan is INSO or Perry's diplomatic way of nating the whole question. It was not unanimous them with the nation. Civil serife followed. Finally the Liberties was, although they had to concede about everything to the universal prejudice against forcigares. How they could have been explained to the present day Japan, who worship their same store and the horizons. It is a fidtle. Perhaps there is a Japanese fairy love in which the American smile and the American touch always work right for good Japanese fairy for growth for good Japanese way work right for good Japanese way work right for good Japanese fair, the for good Japanese fairs, the for good Japanese fairs the for good Japanese fairs.

Tradition and Farming.

The part that acleace can play in successful farming is up for discussion. We are even told that agriculture is all a matter of science, whether the buy learns it at college or behind the plow. The ways of nature have to be mastered somehow, and it is plain that science cannot charge them. Professor I. It. Balley of the Cornell Agricultural college says that mere knowledge of the laws underlying production will not make a man a good farmer. He must see the laws as work.

farmer. He must see the laws at work.

The ley on the farm sees the laws at work. The lew len may never know the why and wherefore of the phenomena why and wherefore of the phenomena to wood and mutton here and to hair and milk there. But his father tells him the lesson which he learned from his father—that if it the right thing to feed the cows and sheep on the same grass. Traditions are the product of applied science. They record bitter fail ure as well as happy success in the life and death strugtles man has waged with the soil.

Dwellers in the canal zone, where there hasn't been a death from yellow jack in two years, think the United States health bureau good enough to be passed around.

Somehow a hard winter doesn't cut as much lee now as it did shortly be-fore the issue was placed "in your keeping, my countrymen."

Aeroplanes will not be likely to sup-plant autos as Christmas presents un-til it is more clearly determined what they are good for.
