WHAT ARE YOU DOING It seems but the other day that we took an inventory of our front and back yards and decided that April was not one bit too early in the season egin our outdoor beuse-cleaning: and yet a year with all its changes has again confronted with the question of what we can do to make our homemore attractive and beautiful.

efore the public mind than this one of making the home and its surround-ings so full of sweetness and beauty of misking the slower and its variety in the property of the streets and the same property of the streets and the same property of the

Brother Jonathan Bond

Its the acme of perfection in bond writing paper. Its value lies not so much in the keen personal satisfaction you find in using the clean, crisp sheets, as in the influence the paper adds to the message it carries.

Modern business is done by letter. Stationery that was considered good a few years ago, does not measure up to the standard of today. Letters and literature claim our attention on all sides, and if they are to step out of the mass they must stamp the individuality of the writer.

Brother Jonathan bond invariably bespeaks consideration—it prohibits the waste-basket habit, so to speak. We use it for letter heads, bill heads. envelopes, checks, diplomas, insurance policies, folders, circulars, announcements, envelope slips and all sorts of artistic advertising matter.
