Whatever else may be said about the pedicy pursued in Korea by Japan, which has taken the 'herinit nation' under its wing, there will be no discut as to the windom of previding good roads. Such highway everyther control of the conce which Korea has ever keeps until now, and the fact furnishes one explanation of the slow development of that country. Public roads are among the first essentials to civilization, and without them any land, no matter how blessed with natural advantages, must 'ag behind the procession.
