She was born June 14, 1863, and was married John Dravis with whom she has lived happily, and for about 22 years lived at Des Plaines, until recently, when they moved to Barrington for the sake of being close to their only daughter, Mrs. Beulah Platter.

Mrs. Dravis was an honored member of the Congregational church, and was a large attendant on Sunday morning at the church service.

LOGGERS HOLD MEMORIAL

Services at Baptist Church and Decorated Graves of Their Departed Members.

The annual observance of a lodge memorial day took place in this village Sunday morning and this occasion was established here by the Modern Woodmen of America.

The lodge is designated as "Woodmen Memorial Sunday" but for several years past other organizations have joined in the ceremonies at the cemetery.

The exercises began with the attendance of the Woodmen and ladies of the Floral Society, who gathered at the Baptist church where Rev. H. L. Lockhart addressed the gathering it took as follows:

We live in a world of process where everything moves towards different ends, and the modern world is full of things without moving to over-throw, purposeful ends. One of the things which are the result of the progress of the varied fraternal orders, significant social phenomena with a purposeful end.

Modern Woodmen of America, a fraternal future work most liberally and selflessly in a practical way of the things which are the result of the progress of the varied fraternal orders, significant social phenomena with a purposeful end.
