thing but Face of Glova.

Leather is, of course, the best material, but canves can be used for everpthing but the face, of the glove. It leather is used, a heavy piece should be selected for the face and a lighter weight for the back; if you lay these pieces face to face, and use a "regular" glove for a model, front and back may be cut out at one time.

Then take a piece of cloth or of thin leather, a trifle smaller than the glove is to be, and isy the hand upon it with the fingers outstretched. Mark around the fingers with a pestical and sew the piece on to the back of the glove, as shown by the dotted lisses in the picture. Than sew the first course of the glove hand, and sew it on so that the rear edge comes about half-way down the fingers when they are slipped into the glove. This piece protects the ends of the fingers and stiffens the whole glove; the addition of a strap and buckle completes the back. On the piece of heavy leather which and Honest.

"What kind of a boy does a business man want?" repeated a shrewd, practical man of many concerns, the other day.

"Well, I will tell you. In the first place he wants a boy who doesn't know too much; business men generally like to run their own business, and prefer some one who will listen to their way, rather than try to teach them new kinds; secondly, they want seven of-lock as exactly evens, not ten minutes past; third, an industrious boy, who is not afreid to put in a little sextra work in case of need; fourth, an honest boy—honest in his service, as well as in matters of dollars and cents; and fifth, a good-nainred boy, who will keep his temper if his employer loses his own now and then!"

"But you haven't said a word about his being smart!" was surgested.

"The second of the first the second of the last, thing we worry over. The fact is, if a boy is modest, prompt, pleasant, industrious and honest, he've beseant. Industrious and honest, he've.

the last thing we worry over. The fact is, if a boy is modest, prompt, pleasant, industrious and honest, he's quite as amart as we care about—and that's a fact."
