CHAUTAUQUA BEST EVER

This Year's Chautauqua Was the Best Ever Held Here—The Attendance Was Large—Entertainers Fine.

No one can say that the Lincoln Chautauqua which began in this village last Thursday and ended Tuesday night was not worth attending; far from it.

It was a series of splendid meetings, with only a few entertainers who have appeared here before, and it is a real wonder that a village of this size is permitted to have so extensive talent show here. Many of those on the program are people who command fine paying engagements in the lecture, lyceum and theatrical world while others are people who engage in other work in the winter and travel on a Chautauqua circuit in the summer, both for the money earned and for a change of scene and work.

There is a great deal of work in managing an affair like this and the committee feel pleased that the season passed off so well. Local people are well satisfied and say why do they do this, and why do they do that, but the committee has gone ahead, unconcerned about remarks and tried to give the town a few days of pleasure, and if some refuse to take advantage of the opportunity to enjoy good and new things without going out of town, why then they alone suffered.

The profits are not large, because of the expenses, and it is not a paying money making scheme as insinuated. Other towns have these summer meetings and people turn out in large crowds to appreciate them, even if in sympathy with the policies of the committee in charge. In Elgin this week the average daily attendance for the very same Chautauqua has numbered 2000.

The tent was a very nice one with an outer canvas curtaining the entrance, an improvement over other years when the passing public and disturbers annoyed. The programs were carried out as advertised and, if out of so much excellent entertainment, a few excellent, then let it be said that the four speakers—Charles Palmer, Prof. Morgan, Dr. Hill and Charles Poole—were the finest, with an especial word of praise for Dr. Hill. The musicians, vocalists, readers and artists all held the attention of the audience during their appearances, some appealing to one kind of people and others having admirers in another class. All denominations and factions in the whole vicinity were represented in the audience; many of them being from the neighboring farms.

Some critics complained that the management had said there would be no happy on the subject of prohibition and that they had some talk; but, very little was said on the subject and anyone taking exception was certainly easily annoyed. A great many young men were present and it would not be expected that men in sympathy with the suppression of the liquor traffic would allow such a chance to go by to say a word that might help one of these boys to lead sober lives, as far as liquor drinking is concerned. There are many interesting habits, besides that of the liquor habit, a fact sometimes forgotten by too ardent prohibition workers, who feature drunkenness as the only sin.

Ticket subscriptions for next year were satisfactorily arranged so that another series of meetings is assured for next summer.

A New Local Artist.
George Beaulieu of Lake Street, who recently moved with his family to Barrington is an artist of excellent ability, without instruction at institutions, is capable of having his work compared by the leading engravers. His residence here has been mentioned in the Century and St. Nicholas; his pictures have also appeared in Judge and Puck; numerous publications, and he was for years in charge of the art department of the advertising master of the International Harvester company.
Mr. Beaulieu is a brother of Ella Parker Beaulieu of New York who is a writer of this period of some note and the author of the amusing book, "Pigs in Pigs," which has been an extraordinarily successful story in the village by our favorite village reader, E. Williams.

"Hill House" in Lake County.
The scholars of "Hill House" will hold a mass meeting at the Armory, Waukegan, this evening. It is expected that each township in Lake County will be represented in the meeting. Owing to the state convention which will be held at the Armory, the meeting will be held at the Armory, Waukegan, this evening. It is expected that each township in Lake County will be represented in the meeting.

MAY TEACH DOMESTIC SCIENCE.

Board of Education May Add Course in Domestic Science to the Local High School.

Prof. E. S. Smith states that the board of education is contemplating placing a course of domestic science in the high school next year and hiring a special teacher for the work. This could not help but be liked by the people, for instruction in cooking, sewing, hygiene, care of children, practical nursing, serving, knowledge of plumbing and many other subjects related to the care of the home are more necessary to the girls than over study of Latin and the many "ologies." Knowledge of which is of course nice to have, but which in the lives of so many of the girls when they become wives and mothers is not of practical use. Better to have the ability to cook well and know how and what to buy for the table, than to be able to converse in Latin over to tell the recipe of some old king's better to understand the care of a baby than to be able to name the fifteen decisive battles of the world. But special instruction is needed in home making and therefore no up-to-date high school is without some sort in what is called "Domestic Science."

BASE BALL NOTES.

News About the Games Played by Barrington's Two Teams at Home and on Other Ground.

The locals suffered their third defeat of the season last Saturday when they played the last Mercury club of Chicago. The final score was five to one, Tageshulte scoring the O. V.'s only run in the third inning. The locals would have scored again in the fourth inning, when after two men were out, the next three men secured clean hits and were left stranded when "Dutch" Landwer hit a grounder to the shortstop for the third out. This was the last chance the locals had to win. They were pitched good games for the locals and with perfect support would have held the Mercury to two runs. It is hoped that another game can be secured with this club as the boys believe they can win if given another chance.

The Omnes Vita club has a good game scheduled for next Saturday. Don't miss it.

Next Sunday the Wauconda and Lake Zurich teams will meet at Wauconda. The last time these two teams met Lake Zurich won out by one score. Several Barrington boys will be seen in the Wauconda lineup. A good game is promised.

What Do You Think?

To the Editor:—
"Considerable comment has been heard as to just why an entertainment can be given in this village on Sunday under the name of 'Chautauqua meetings' and be upheld by strict church members and pastors, who think ordinarily that all Sunday amusement is so wicked.

This is not said as criticism of the meetings, "Oh Chautauqua," itself, but of the people who went to this village show, band concert, almost vaudeville, when a ball game is so scorned by them, on Sunday as a wicked, wicked gathering, when a concert down town on the street would be thought a disgrace and a lecture in the town hall on agriculture would be "breaking the Sabbath."

The Chautauqua is a good thing and is full of fine instruction on various subjects and is entertaining, but it is a test show as truly as those other traveling shows that come here, and some of the performers are really the same ones who play at theatres in the winter season; and yet many people will look to see these people out here in the country and would feel it wrong to see the same performers in regular theatre. The general criticism is—Why the distinction? Surely, it is very inconsistent.

It all goes to show that the desire for "amusement" is existent in all of us, those narrow and those liberal in their ideas. More pleasure, interspersed with the hard work in this village, would help to make people good in their daily habits, as well as so much "show shall not smile, nor spend good money for pleasure."

SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

How Mrs. Reed of Peoria, Ill., Escaped The Surgeon's Knife.

Peoria, Ill.—"I wish to let every one know what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. Forty years I suffered. The doctor said I had a tumor and the only remedy was the surgeon's knife. My mother bought me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and yesterday I am well and healthy woman. For months I suffered from inflammation, and your Sanative Wash relieved me. I am glad to tell anyone what your medicine has done for me. You can use my testimony in any way you wish, and I will be glad to answer letters."—Mrs. CHRISTINA REED, 106 Mount St., Peoria, Ill.

Mrs. Lynch Also Avoided Operation.
Jesse, Pa.—"After the birth of my fourth child, I had severe organ inflammation. I would have such terrible pains that it did not seem as though I could stand it. This kept up for three long months, until two doctors decided that an operation was needed. Then one of my friends recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and after taking it for two months I was a well woman."—Mrs. JOSEPH A. LYNCH, Jesse, Pa.
"Women who suffer from female ills should try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, one of the most successful remedies the world has ever known, before submitting to a surgical operation."

NOT ALWAYS SO.

Glady—So you're broken with him.
Virginia—Yes. He was entirely too hard to please.
Glady—Glady—how he must have changed since he proposed to you!

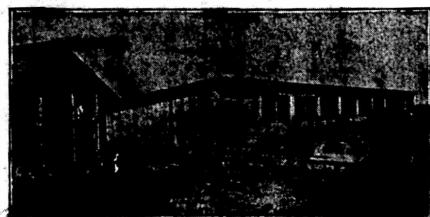

Worth While.
"See here!" cried the boy's father. "If you don't behave I'll whip you."
"I want you would," replied the boy.
"You do, eh?"
"Yes, 'cause when it's all over me will give me some candy."

A Perfectly Obedient Breakfast Makes Nervous For the Day.

Everything goes wrong if the breakfast lies in your stomach like a mud pie. What you eat does harm if you can't digest it—it turns to poison.
A bright lady teacher found this to be true, even of an ordinary light breakfast of eggs and toast. She says:
"Two years ago I contracted a very annoying form of indigestion. My stomach was in such condition that a simple breakfast of fruit, toast and eggs gave me great distress.
"I was slow to believe that trouble could come from such a simple diet, but finally had to give it up, and found a great change upon a cup of hot Postum and Grape-Nuts with cream for my morning meal. For some time a year I have held to this course and have no further complaint when indigestion threatens my day."
"I have been a teacher for several years and find that my entire digest of breakfast means a saving of nervous force for the entire day. My plan for the average school girl cannot be too highly commended to the value of Postum."

"Postum has been just what I needed."—Mrs. J. H. Smith, Peoria, Ill.
"There's a man." Hand the little book, "The Road to Well-being," in place of the usual breakfast. It is a book of health and happiness. It is a book of health and happiness. It is a book of health and happiness.

REQUIREMENTS FOR THE SUCCESS OF THE KEEPING OF POULTRY IN SUMMER

Part of New Poultry Plant at University.

BY PROFESSOR J. W. LLOYD, University of Illinois.

Poultry needs shade. Last summer many choice birds perished from lack of shade. In some cases it was the owner's fault or misfortune in not having made sufficient provision for shade in his poultry runs; in others the birds wandered into unshaded enclosures, and being unable to find their way out, died from over-heating within a few hours. While in seasons of less intense heat, the lack of shade might not lead to such fatal results, nevertheless it is generally recognized among poultrymen that shade runs are essential to the proper development of young chicks and the summering of breeding stock. The prize winners in adult classes in fall shows are usually birds that have been kept in shaded runs the preceding summer. It is surprising what a difference there is in the plumage of birds that have been exposed to different amounts of shade during the summer. It is developing the new coat of feathers. There is also a great difference in the general health and vigor, especially of male birds, depending upon how much shade they have received during the hot summer months. Shade in the summer time is one of the prime essentials in successful poultry keeping. Another thing that poultrymen do in order to keep healthy and develop properly is plenty of free range. A few birds may be kept in a small enclosure under artificial conditions, providing constant attention is given to keep their quarters in a sanitary condition, to supply them with all the elements of food needed for their bodies, and to insure their taking sufficient exercise for their own welfare or for that of the egg basket. Young birds grown in confinement, especially if there are too many in a single flock, are likely to be lacking in both size and vigor, unless special care is taken to supply their every need. On the other hand, if the birds are removed from the brooder house when eight or twelve weeks old and put in colony houses placed at sufficient distance apart so that the flock occupying each house has undisputed right to a considerable range of the proper kind, there is no need to worry about balancing the birds' rations or inducing them to take exercise. The flocks, being free to range, will keep themselves freshly cultivated ground. Ranges are also an advantage, for they afford hiding places for insects and furnish material in which the birds can scratch even though the ground may be wet.

Poultry needs green food and animal matter. One reason that birds on free range are likely to do so much better than those in confinement is that they have access to growing vegetation and to a variety of animal food, chiefly insects and earthworms. The recent success of many poultrymen in inducing hens to lay during the winter months is attributed to the green food and the liberal use of green food in the form of sprouted oats, steamed alfalfa, etc. Green food is as essential during the summer as in the winter, and when drought cuts off the natural supply, as was the case in many places last summer, provision should be made to meet this demand.
Since poultry needs shade, free range, fresh dirt, green food, and an abundance of insects, and since fruit trees provide all these requirements, the tillage and ample space and need green cover crops and protection from insects, the combination of poultry and fruit is an ideal one. The permanent poultry house may be built at the edge of the orchard so that the mature fowls may range to the interior as far as they like. The colony houses for the growing chicks may be scattered through the orchard, far enough from the permanent houses so that the adult fowls will not interfere with the chicks. The tillage of the orchard turns up a fresh supply of animal food every few days; the fallen leaves furnish scratching material; the insects that persist about the base of the trees in spite of as close tillage as is possible with horse tools, affords sufficient green food even in the season, while the cover crop sown between the trees furnishes the autumn supply. From the standpoint of the fruit, the poultry is an advantage in adding to the fertility of the soil and in helping control certain injurious insects, notably the curculio.

VEGETABLE GARDEN AND ITS INSECTS

BY J. J. DAVIS, Assistant Entomologist for Northern Illinois.

(From the Report of State Entomologist, S. A. Forbes.)
Vegetable gardening is now one of the most important of the various agricultural interests of Illinois. According to the census of 1900 there were 356,213 acres in vegetables in Illinois in 1899, and the value of the products amounted to $10,248,797, this being the fourth largest valuation of any crop in the state. The average valuation of vegetables was $28.09 per acre, while that of all crops together was but $10.04. The figures for that year serve to indicate the relatively great importance of vegetable growing in Illinois.
Chicago is the principal center of the truck garden industry of this state, and for a distance of 12 to 18 miles north, south and west of the city, agriculture is almost wholly gardening. This is a specially well adapted to such farming, as the more or less sandy character of the soil permits early tillage. The market attracted by Chicago and the supply measure as well as the labor supply, are other reasons why this is an advantageous location for truck gardens. Probably the most important vegetable product of Illinois is potatoes. The area in this crop in Illinois in 1900 was 129,464 acres, and the estimated value of the product was $4,702,628. Cook county alone there were 15,232 acres in potatoes. Onions and cabbage are important crops, as are also asparagus, celery, beans, and other classes of vegetables known as general truck, which includes radishes, lettuce, parsnips, carrots, rhubarb, beans, etc. The growing of sweet corn, tomatoes, beans and peas for canning and of mushrooms for pickling is becoming a prominent industry, and the same is true of other growing in many parts of the state.

The more intensive the culture of a crop, the more important becomes the control of its insect enemies. Land especially desirable for vegetable gardens near the market centers and so close are inevitably large cities, such land has a high value, and the farmer who grows in it must be able to protect his crops from insect attacks. In the summer likewise, and especially early in spring, it is important to keep down the weeds, for they promote a rapid multiplication of insects and provide temporary breeding places for some species. It is a common observation that healthy and vigorous plants withstand the attacks of insects much better than weak and neglected ones.
Crop rotation is one of the most valuable of the cultural measures for preventing insect attacks. As a rule it is bad practice in truck gardening to grow two successive crops of the same vegetable on the same place of land; and further a crop should be planted as far as possible from the location of the same vegetable the year before. Especially is rotation desirable when the crop was badly damaged by insects the previous year. Fall plowing is another important means of insect control. In northern Illinois where the winters are severe the value of the measure is considerable, for its main object is to bring the insects in the soil nearer to the surface where they may be killed by the cold. It is often possible to avoid insect attacks by either early or late spring planting.

Decrease in Shocks.

ECZEMA CAME ON SCALP

Lebanon, O.—"My eczema started on my thigh with a small pimple. It also came on my scalp. It began to itch and I began to scratch. For eighteen or twenty years I could not tell what I passed through with that awful itching. I would scratch until the blood would soak through my underwear, and I couldn't talk to my friends on the street but I would be digging and punching that spot, until I was very much ashamed. The itching was so intense I could not sleep after once in bed and warm. I certainly suffered torment with that eczema for many years."

"I chased after everything I ever heard of, but all to no avail. I saw the advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a sample. Imagine my delight when I applied the first dose to that awful itching first on my leg and scalp, in less than a minute the itching on both places ceased. I got some more Cuticura Soap and Ointment. After the second day I never had another itching spell, and Cuticura Soap and Ointment completely cured me. I was troubled with awful dandruff all over my scalp. The Cuticura Soap has cured that trouble." (Signed) L. R. Fink, Jan. 12, 1912.

PATHOS IN CHILD'S BRAVERY

Fortitude Shown by Little Sufferer in Hospital Treated Lady Henry Somerset.

Lady Henry Somerset, whose labors in behalf of the children of the London slums are constant and earnest, is telling this affecting story of the way in which her interest in these little ones was aroused:

I was moved in that direction by the rare patience and imagination of one little boy. His example convinced me that patience was one of the qualities I needed most, and in seeking it I gave into that work.

I was in a hospital on visiting day, while the doctors were changing a plaster cast which held the crippled boy's limb. The operation was exceedingly painful, I was told. To my surprise, the little sufferer neither cried nor whimpered, but made a curious humming sound with his mouth. After the doctors left I said to him: "How could you possibly stand it?" "That's nothing," he answered. "Why, I just made believe that a bee was stinging me. Bees don't hurt very much, you know. And I kept thinking that I must have forgotten about its being a bee if I didn't."—Youth's Companion.

The Gleaner.
"Jane," said her father, "how does it happen that I find four good cigars on the mantelpiece this morning? Did Henry steal them for me?"
"No; he took them out of his vest pocket to avoid breaking them last night, and I guess he forgot all about them afterwards."
The laugh that followed made her wish that she had been as careful with her speech as Henry had been with his cigars.—Detroit Free Press.

Agents everywhere have been told that Daisy Fly Killer is the best fly killer in the world. It is a sure and reliable medicine for infants and children.

Save the Babies.

INFANT MORTALITY is something frightful. We can hardly realize that of all the children born in civilized countries, twenty-two per cent., or nearly one-quarter, die before they reach one year; thirty-seven per cent., or more than one-third, before they are five, and one-half before they are fifteen!
We do not hesitate to say that a timely use of Castoria would save a majority of these precious lives. Neither do we hesitate to say that many of these infantile deaths are occasioned by the use of narcotic preparations. Drops, tinctures and soothing syrups sold for children's complaints contain more or less opium, or morphine. They are, in considerable quantities, deadly poisons. In any quantity they stupify, retard circulation and lead to congestions, sickness, death. Castoria operates exactly the reverse, but you must see that it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. Castoria causes the blood to circulate properly, opens the pores of the skin and allays fever.

Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. A. P. Fowler, of St. Louis, Mo., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria in many cases and have always found it an efficient and speedy remedy."
Dr. Frederick D. Rogers, of Chicago, Ill., says: "I have found Fletcher's Castoria very useful in the treatment of children's complaints."
Dr. William C. Bloomer, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: "In my practice I am glad to recommend your Castoria, knowing it is perfectly harmless and always satisfactory."
Dr. B. Down, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria in my practice for many years with great satisfaction to myself and benefit to my patients."
Dr. Edward Harris, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I have used your Castoria in my own household with good results, and have advised several patients to use it for its mild laxative effect and freedom from harm."
Dr. J. B. Elliott, of New York City, says: "Having during the past six years prescribed your Castoria for infantile stomach disorders, I most heartily commend its use. The formula contains nothing deleterious to the most delicate of children."
Dr. C. G. Sprague, of Omaha, Neb., says: "Your Castoria is a most valuable medicine for children, and I frequently prescribe it. While I do not advocate the indiscriminate use of proprietary medicines, your Castoria is an exception for conditions which arise in the care of children."
Dr. J. A. Parker, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Your Castoria holds the status of the medical profession in a manner held by no other proprietary preparation. It is a sure and reliable medicine for infants and children. In fact, it is the universal household remedy for infantile ailments."
Dr. H. P. Merrill, of Augusta, Me., says: "Castoria is one of the very finest and most remarkable remedies for infants and children. In my opinion your Castoria has saved thousands from an early grave. I can furnish evidence of its usefulness from this locality as to its efficiency and purity."

INFANTILE PARALYSIS SPREADS.
The increasing prevalence of infantile paralysis in many parts of the world is disquieting, and in England some agitation has been caused by Dr. Reece's theory that a recent epidemic in Devon and Cornwall was caused by the dust raised by automobiles. Dust has been more of an issue there than in this country, perhaps because the country is more compact and the main roads more densely occupied by motor vehicles. There have been many complaints of the depreciation of property because of the incessant dust clouds raised by the endless procession of automobiles whirling past at high speed, and this modern nuisance, combined with the unprecedented epidemic of infantile paralysis, has naturally led many to accept Dr. Reece's view. In this country it has been received skeptically. Dr. Herman Biggs, general medical director of the New York board of health, observed that if Dr. Reece is right there should be a continuous epidemic along motor routes, which is not the case. Yet is this sound logic? Dust clouds might spread the disease when it existed, and yet not carry it to a considerable distance.

The war in which the Nobel prize have been bestowed since their founding does not make good reading for those who believe that America is at the forefront in all forms of activity. Our country, with only two prizes to its credit, does not make a distinguished showing. At present America is decidedly in the "also-ran" class. Germany has received 16 awards. France has 10, England 7, Holland 6, and Russia, Italy, Switzerland and Sweden 4 each. The United States lines up with Denmark, Spain, Belgium and Austria, with two.

A woman in New York has solved the wife-beating problem for the abused sex. When her husband, whom she supported, choked her because his supper was not ready promptly, she laid open his scalp with a coal shovel, had him arrested, was complimented by the magistrate for her deft dealing with the situation and was allowed to select her recent spouse's sentence for him. The hand which can wield the coal shovel to such good purpose need not wait for the ballot.

A man in Pennsylvania died from the effects of smoking 185,000 cigarettes in ten years. He probably beat the record, but beyond this, did nothing for himself and made his life of little value except to help along the cigarette business, which seems hardly worth while, as the end and aim of one's existence.

The summer hotels and boarding houses in New York state are to be investigated. Still, the girls needn't worry. It's hard to follow a canoe in the shadows on a moonlight night.

NO LAWYER TO GUIDE
Illinois Went Through Civil War Without Legal Head.

History of State's Oldest Office Reveals Interesting Facts and Its Origin in Ancient English Practice.

"Did you know, that Illinois went through all the exciting days preceding and during the Civil War without an attorney general, although the constitution recognized that office?" asked an old attorney of the department today. "I didn't know it either until I accidentally stumbled upon the fact while I was looking up some information the other day."

The truth of what the attorney had said was easily confirmed. The state was without an attorney general from 1848 to 1868, and passed through the trying years before and during the war without the guidance of such an officer.

Other interesting facts developed in a quick inspection of the history of this essential department. The Oldest Office in State. It is the oldest office in the state. It existed when Illinois was only a Virginian colony. It was recognized when Illinois was a territory and the state constitution of 1818 made certain restrictions respecting it. It is the only executive office in our present form of government which traces its origin directly to the ancient English government.

And it is also true it has come through to the present day without material changes in form, duty or power. The constitution of 1818 disqualified the attorney general as a member of the general assembly by whom the office was to be filled.

Many Years Without an Officer. The constitution of 1848 recognized the office and prohibited its incumbent to hold a seat in the legislature, but from that date to 1867 the general assembly ignored the office and made no provision for filling it after an appointment or election. Hence the remark of the old attorney. In 1867, two years after the close of the war, the assembly made the office elective, empowering, however, the governor to appoint to fill out the time to the date of the next following general election.

General Selected by Legislature. Governor Oglesby selected Robert G. Ingersoll, who served for almost two years. Washington Bushnell of Ottawa was the first attorney general elected by popular vote. There is a vein of sentiment connecting and associating his administration of the office with that of William H. Stand, who now seeks re-nomination; for the two men bore the close relation to each other of teacher and pupil.

Made Constitutional Office. The constitution of 1870 made it a constitutional elective office. James K. Egan of Lee county was the first to be elected under its terms. The Duties of the Office. The ancient English attorney general was the chief law officer of the crown and its only legal representative in the courts.

His position in Illinois today is practically the same, except that his sovereign is the people. His powers in England were never defined definitely. He performed such legal duty as he deemed necessary for the enforcement of the law, the preservation of the peace and the protection of public rights.

The Illinois legislature has never specifically enumerated his duties and the courts have not undertaken to define their limitations or extent. The Supreme court has held that he is vested with all the powers of the English office and, in addition, those imposed by statute. His statutory duties fall under two heads, the advisory and the court.

The Hour of the Rose
By Dorothy Arthur

(Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.)

"It's no deal, of you, Aunt Rose, to come all the way up from Virginia, just for my wedding."

"Why, child, don't you know what a romantic old maid I am at heart?" laughed Miss Carruthers, laying off her wraps, and sitting restfully down in an easy chair before the fire. "I wouldn't have missed it for worlds. It needed the joy-bells of a wedding to rouse me from my sleepiness. I was turning into a regular Miss Van Winkle."

"The idea! You don't look a day over 25, auntie." Bettina knelt down on a heap of cushions and looked up adoringly at the face over which the freckle played. It was a piquant, changeable face, that time had been too much in love with to deface with many lines. The eyes were tender and endearing under their long lashes.

"I am 46, Bettie, and proud of it, proud to have attained such a dubious age and found life sweeter, filled with richer opportunities than ever. Why, I am just beginning to wake up to what a lovely splendid old world it is. When I was your age, dear, I felt a hundred years old, and was—"

The door opened suddenly. It was Bettina's younger sister, Grace,—"Bettie, the bishop's here," she said. "Don't you think you ought to greet him? He asked for you the first time."

"I'll be down in a minute," sang back the little bride-elect. "Aunt Rose, did I write you that I am to be married by the bishop himself—the dear splendid bishop that I've loved and cherished ever since I could toddle?"

Miss Carruthers looked attentively at Bettina.

"What bishop, child?" "Hepburn. Don't you know him, dear? He used to be rector of St. James, oh, years and years ago."

Rose smiled. She had surely played a strange trick on her after 20 years. It was foolish, she told herself, that at 46 her pulses should play traitor and start to beat at the mere sound of a voice, the sight of a form. Was it only 20 years ago, 20,000, since the morning he had found her alone in the old rose garden at Twin Towers? He had been such an eager, boyish wooer in spite of his sober clerical garb. And she, in her blind, girlish passion, had sent him from her. She did not care for the life of a clergyman's wife, she told him. She loved society and movement and action. She would share no dreamer's life. She meant to travel and revel in variety. She had told him that a man who donned the cloak of the priest in these days was a shirker of the real battle of life.

Now, they called him the fighting bishop. She had followed his career closely, tenderly, through the years. Wherever there had been a chance to raise the standard of the church militant, he had pressed forward. She who had loved action, had slipped into her serene old-maid's life down at Twin Towers in Virginia, and he, at whom she had laughed had become the fighter, the man of action.

Bettina was actually introducing them in her eager, girlish fashion. The bishop's rich, deep voice broke in on her words.

"But we are old friends, are we not, Miss Carruthers? Do you still teach the roses how to grow?" He had drawn her a little apart from the others. Tall, lean and clean shaven, with his keen, merry eyes, he made her think of the young rector. Most unaccountably, Miss Carruthers lost her sense of humor and her tender, beautiful lips quivered.

"Paul, Paul, how I wronged you! Oh, don't be kind to me now and try to smooth it over. I was a selfish, ungrateful girl. I hope life has given you in full measure all the happiness you deserve."

to her room. She would not be missed in the wedding rush of guests, she knew. She had just seen at the face the bishop had just seen after 20 years. Unsurprisingly she raised the window shade, and there before her stood the man of action. She moved the little dressing table over in the full daylight and sat down before it to look at herself. And a sudden glow came over her face as on her arms and sobbed quietly, almost pitifully for the stupidity of that girl who had taught the roses how to grow 20 years before.

"Do you know, auntie?" Bettina told her in strict confidence that night, when she came in to bid her good night. "I am almost sure our bishop is seriously smitten with Grace. Wouldn't it be interesting to have a bishop in the family? Keep us all in good order, I think. He admires Grace immensely, and she's 19—almost. How old is the bishop?"

"Forty-four," answered Rose, smiling.

"That won't do at all." But he is such a dear, and I do want to keep him before the first to bid her good night.

"So do I, Bettie," laughed Miss Carruthers. But the bishop remained heart-whole and very much content. The wedding was a joyful function, and the girls eddied around him like brook wavelets around the roots of a sturdy oak.

Miss Carruthers was to take an early train. It was in the dim twilight that she found her way into the bishop's parlor, and as it started, saw the bishop hastily arranging his suit cases in the section across from her. When he found out he was discovered he crossed the aisle. "But I said goodby to you last night," exclaimed Rose.

"That was only good night, but I could have seen your eyes and lips. There were two more spectators. You know, Rose, I never liked spectators. Therefore, I am going down to Virginia with you."

"To Virginia? Why?" "I am going into the old rose garden with you, and ask you the same question I did 20 years ago, Rose."

"Now, don't scold, or plead, for I am surely going. And, dear, if I could have your eyes and lips, I should have come years ago. They have grown so tender, so infinitely tender, dear. Surely, they betray you, they are betraying you now."

Rose looked at him wistfully. "But—the roses are gone."

The bishop laughed. "You can't scare me off this time, going to be near you. I wish the snow of the sundial and read the old legend on it. See how well I remember it, dear. I only record the hours that are bright. Let us forget our own lost hours and gather the bright ones, while we may. Shall we, Rose?"

"Don't ask me," she answered, softly. "I would rather tell you that in the garden."

WITH HIS AUTOGRAPH AWAY
Goes Society's Vain Quest, Ever Signature in Quest, and the Curious of the Quest, in His Wake.

His mind curls up in signatures across a fly leaf page. In every other matter he is sensible and sage, but antics with his fountain pen condemn him to a cage. He gathered at a banquet to a literary lord and tried to trace his moniker in salt across the board the while our guest of honor made, a speech that fairly soared. And when the speech was ending he sat up and looked alert which made him seem absorbing all the wisdom of the spurt of oratory's finish—where the speaker bulged his shirt. O, he was up to something and we passed around the wink as the whole address finished and the orator did sink to his chair for further orders and perhaps another drink.

Then the chairman did his blameworthy to string out a brief which started with an anecdote which finished with a sigh. Next, he said, we'd hold reception if right quickly we'd pass by. So the hero of the evening tired his arm at shaking hands—good fellow, frat, Masonic, and a dozen different brands of hearty sort of squeezes they pass out in western lands. The lineup was quite cheerful though it did tread on toes, but the bunch was quite good natured in its semi-full dress clothes. Slowly they passed by the author, who struck up a classic pose.

In that cheerful line of grabbers there befell a sudden stop. All those of us belated him then believed we'd have to drop, for the busy autographer now was on the job to "cop." The hero of the evening held the fatal fountain pen and with a nervous flourish he belted tracks just like a hen as he signed a "first edition" and then signed a book again. He grew a little weary when he'd scratched in volume five. Why, that author looked as if he'd like to eat some one alive, but it was there to come it did not, alas, arrive.

Well, at last the scene was ended and the lips began to sway, and the eager autographer tucked his merchandise away, though we felt we'd like to wipe off that translucent look so gay.

People take a wonderful interest in a discovery that benefits them. That's why Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs, Colds and other throat and lung diseases is the most popular medicine in America. "It cured me of a dreadful cough," writes Mrs. J. F. Davis, St. Charles, Mo., "after doctors in treatment and all other remedies had failed." ## Their Dinner Party

By Rosalie G. Mendel.

"I have an idea," exclaimed Marjory as she burst into the room, throwing her hat on the table, her coat on the chair and her gloves on the couch. The "B. A. C." sewing circle prepared to listen.

"Well," the boys of the "X. Y. Z." have been so perfectly lovely to us that I thought it would be nice for the "B. A. C." to give them a dinner party. What do you think, girls?"

"Splendid!" "Fine!" "Just dear!" "Good!" "Delightful!" were the replies.

"But let us make this a progressive dinner party," suggested Marjory. "Never heard of a progressive dinner," put in Lulu.

"A progressive dinner progresses—that's all!" explained the instigator of the plan. "You see, we all start at one girl's home and partake of the first course of a dinner. They proceed to another's for the second course, and so on until we finish with the dessert at the last house. See?"

"A perfect inspiration!" "Jolly!" "Simply wonderful!" Marjory, you are a genius!" declared her friends.

"I'm glad it's going to be a dinner, because Dan is so fond of good things to eat," said Louise. "I'll take the dessert course. Our cook makes splendid meringues."

"Indeed not!" dissented Marjory. "Each girl must prepare her allotted dish without any assistance whatsoever. No mother, sister, sister-in-law, aunt, friend or servant will be allowed to help the hostess in preparing our dishes. We can live without anything we can do nothing but go and dance. Let us show them that we also know something about the culinary art!"

"Yes. Remember what the poet said about reaching a man's heart through his stomach," sighed the romantic Irma.

After much lively discussion in assigning the dinner course to the members, naming the escorts and issuing the official invitations to the X. Y. Z. club, the B. A. C. adjourned its weekly meeting.

The following Tuesday evening as the X. Y. Z.'s and the B. A. C.'s entered Lulu's house they found her in tears. She explained between sobs: "I just feel perfectly terrible! It's most embarrassing! But they never came! The aristocrats, I mean! I've been telephoning frantically. Can get no satisfaction! Oh! it's dreadful!"

"Never mind!" said George soothingly. "We can live without aristocrats. Don't worry, little girl. Let's proceed to the soup."

So with one accord they started for Irma's home.

The bouillon was brought in and the bouillon was taken out—tasted, and only tasted.

"I don't see how it happened! It's a mystery! Don't be polite and try to drink it, I beg of you. It's burnt, irrevocably burnt. The gas range is to blame. I'm mortified."

The guests consoled Irma as best they could.

Forward! Forward! was the watchword.

"I'm getting kind of nervous," whispered Marjory to Lulu. "I hope my ducks are all right. They ought to be. I haven't thought of anything else for a week! I've seen ducks running around even in my dream!"

Marjory's expression was a study as the crisp and brown fowl were placed before her at the dinner table.

"My goodness! Impossible! How awful! What made me do it! I completely forgot to draw my ducks before placing them in the oven!" A hungry crowd left Marjory's ducks and started for Louise's desert.

"It was meant for ice cream meringue, but the ice cream just wouldn't get hard," apologized Louise. "If you drink it, like frappe, it won't taste so bad! Our cook's meringues are always dreams!"

"Say, fellows, I'm beastly hungry!" declared Bob. "Let's go down town and give the girls a real dinner. They're all right, even if they don't know how to cook. Come on, before we perish with hunger."

As the B. A. C.'s and X. Y. Z.'s entered the restaurant the head waiter overheard Marjory suggest to her friends:

"Girls, suppose we change our sewing club into a cooking class!" And the answer quickly came, "Suppose we do."

Credie-Robbers.

Two or three young men were exhibiting, with true satisfaction, the results of a day's fishing, whereupon this young woman remarked very demurely:

"Fish go in schools, do they not?" "I believe they do; but why do you ask?"

"Oh, nothing; only I was just thinking that you must have broken up an intact class."

Monstrous Event.

"Condemned his picture! Where is the fellow who did it?"

"What time is it?"

"Four-thirty. Why do you ask?"

"A train from the east is due at this hour. The fellow has been probably gone in the night to see a new headed picture show."

Riches of Malay Peninsula.

One of the richest countries in the world is that part of the Malay peninsula known as the Federated States. These provinces are still under the rule of their native chiefs or sultans, though they are assisted by a British adviser. The tin mines of these small states are more valuable than most gold mines, for they produce nearly half the world's supply of tin, and the result is an overflowing treasury for the states. Vast forests of rubber trees are also proving extremely profitable.

MEXICAN REBELS BLOW PASSENGER TRAIN FROM TRACK AND KILL VICTIMS.

After Sacking Express and Baggage Cars Zapatistas Pour Oil on Coaches and Set Them Afire—Bodies Are Cremated.

BOMB PLACED ON RAILS

Mexico City, July 23.—In an attack by Zapatistas Sunday on a passenger train between this city and Cuernavaca, Morelos, more than sixty persons were killed and many wounded. The Zapatistas, who are said to have numbered 500, placed a mine under the railroad track, which exploded as the locomotive passed over it. The overturned engine hardly had settled when the Zapatistas sprang up from all sides and poured a murderous fire into the train.

First the object of their attack was a second-class coach in which were riding a federal military escort with a captain and two lieutenants. The federal got out of the car as quickly as possible and answered the fire of the assailants, but their efforts were futile. All of the command, with the exception of five who were wounded and two who escaped, were killed.

Thirty passengers in the second-class coaches were killed and many wounded. The conductor, an American named Aller, is not expected to live. After the train had been swept by fire and the bodies of the passengers or crew not killed or wounded, the Zapatistas rushed on their victims and began killing the wounded.

After sacking the express and baggage cars, the rebels poured oil on the cars and, putting the bodies of the dead on board, set fire to the train. When the relief train arrived there was nothing but debris and a few persons, most of whom were hurt, to tell the tale.

GOVERNOR DENEEN FOR TAFT

Illinois State Republican Nominee Will Stay by Party—New Ticket Is Promised.

Chicago, July 24.—Gov. Charles B. Deneen and the other nominees on the Republican state ticket told the Progressive party committee of five Monday they were first of all Republicans; that they expected to support the Republican national ticket, and that they would not endorse Theodore Roosevelt and his new party.

When this information was conveyed at noon to Senator Joseph M. Dixon, manager of the Roosevelt campaign at the Congress hotel, he said it could mean but one thing—the nomination of another state ticket composed of men who were identified with the new political party.

None of the Republican state nominees left the committee of five long in doubt. The Progressives—McMill McCormick and Chauncey Dewey of Chicago, J. T. Williams of Sterling, R. P. Harris of Champaign and F. G. Allen of Moline—went into conference with the governor at the statehouse in Springfield and in two hours had received the answer of all the nominees.

BEEF TRUSTS PLAN TO DISSOLVE IS SATISFACTORY.

Department of Justice Will Drop the Prosecution Following Conclusion of Agreement.

Washington, July 23.—The voluntary dissolution plan of the National Packing company has been approved by the department of justice and all prosecution of the packers now pending will probably be dropped.

This much was practically admitted by Attorney General Wickersham on his return from New York, where he has been for several days.

"I know nothing of the plan of dissolution other than what I have read in the newspapers," said the attorney general. "It looks as if the packers had at last decided to throw up the sponge and surrender."

The newspaper articles which Attorney General Wickersham read included the statement issued by United States District Attorney Wilcox of Chicago and the outline of the plan was official. It is understood that the only thing which can prevent an agreement between the department and the packers is for the complete plan of dissolution to be submitted in a day or two, to differ from the outline already presented.

JUDGE HANFORD OUT

FEDERAL JURIST AT SEATTLE QUILTS AS HOUSE COMMITTEE IS INVESTIGATING.

He Telegraphs Resignation to President While Last Witnesses Wait to Testify in Impeachment Proceedings—President to Await Letter.

Seattle, Wash., July 24.—United States district court Judge Cornelius H. Hanford, whose conduct on the bench has been under investigation for nearly a month by a subcommittee of the house judiciary committee, telegraphed on Monday last his resignation to President Taft.

The impeachment proceedings against the judge were the direct outgrowth of a decision rendered by him last spring declaring forfeited the naturalization papers of a resident of this city named Olson because of his Socialistic views. Hanford based his action on the ground that Olson had deceived the court and that his radical opinions constituted a menace to the institutions of the country.

The impeachment resolution was introduced in the house by Representative Victor Berger of Milwaukee and on its adoption a subcommittee headed by James M. Graham of Illinois was appointed to conduct an investigation in this city.

When the committee met here Monday it was believed the last oral testimony would be presented before night and the committee members were ready to begin consideration of the mass of documentary evidence already in the record.

While the range of subjects to be considered was not known, it was thought probable the trial of Charles F. Munday and those of the other Alaska coal land operators would be investigated.

To a question put by a reporter as to whether the resignation of the judge would relieve the committee from further duty, the chairman declined to answer.

Washington, July 24.—President Taft will take no action in connection with Hanford's resignation until he has received a letter which the judge has written. The president made this statement:

"Judge Hanford has telegraphed me that he has written me a letter," said the president. "I shall do nothing until I have received it."
