VOLUME 28, NUMBER 21

BARRINGTON, ILLINOIS, THURSDAY, AUGUST 29, 1912

$1.50 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE

FAIR TIME IS AT HAND

McHenry County Fair Is In Full Swing This Week—Lake County Is Next On The List.

Today is the big day at the McHenry county fair and agricultural exposition, and a number of local people are in attendance.

The fair commenced last Tuesday morning at Woodstock, and will continue until tomorrow night. The attendance has been very good, the reduction in the price of admission to 30 cents and the admirable weather contributing to this end. That it is up to its usual excellent standard is the statement of all who have visited there.

Today the races are the principal attraction, with a ball game this afternoon between Marengo and Huntley.

Music is furnished every day by the Oliver Typewriter company's famous band.

Lake Comes Next.
Next week Lake county will have its inning on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday in the fifty-ninth annual fair of the Lake county agricultural board.

The officers of the agricultural society say that the exhibits this year promise to be larger and better than at any previous time. They have made a special effort to clean up the midway this year, and an event unsurpassed in previous years is promised. There will be two baseball contests every day, one in the forenoon and one in the afternoon, and as a liberal purse is offered, some good nines have been secured.

By no means a lesser attraction will be the horse racing. A $3,525.00 racing program with fifteen great speed events has been arranged. The complete program may be seen in the advertisement on page eight.

If the weather is favorable, the fair next week should be the greatest in the history of Lake county. Plan to attend.

LABOR DAY PLANS.

Many Local Business Houses Will Be Closed Next Monday.

Next Monday, September 2, is Labor day, and while there will not be any general observance of the day in Barrington, more than the usual number of local business houses have signified their intention to close on that day. The Barrington pharmacy and most of the stores and markets will be closed a part of the day, while the following firms will not open at all, until Tuesday morning: Plagge & Company, Lageschulte & Hager, Lamey & Company, Gus Rehndt, T. H. Schultz, Barrington Bank, Barrington Review, the Barrington Mercantile company, and all of the hardware stores, blacksmith shops and barber shops. In the former years, the blacksmiths and the barber have been the only ones to close during the day.

Labor day is now being pretty generally observed throughout the country, but little attention has ever been paid to it here for the reason that there are no large industries and no unions demanding the day. Now that business men are taking notice of the holiday, however, it will probably soon become a general custom here as in larger places.

Teachers in Session.

The Lake County Teachers' institute opened Monday at Waukegan with the largest attendance it has ever had on opening day. Professors have been retained to lecture daily for the teachers. The meeting is to last the entire week.

The Cook County Teachers' institute held in Chicago, commenced Monday and closes today. For the first time in the history of this institute, the public was allowed to attend the lectures and instruction without cost. A feature of the meeting was an entire country school class transported to the convention—teachers, pupils and all—conducted before those at the meeting.

Nearly every school teacher residing in this vicinity is attending one or the other of these meetings.

Must Fix Bad Roads.

The government postal department at Washington has notified the local postmaster that all the roads which are in poor repair on all rural mail routes, or portions of such routes, must be fixed before bad weather this fall. If they are not fixed, the carriers will not be required to travel them.

The new law is up to the highway commission to get busy if they wish the mail delivered regularly upon the routes in their respective districts.

WELL KNOWN MEN DIE.

Death Came This Week to Two Local Men, Frank Walker and Will Hager.

WILLIAM HAGER.
William Hager, a native of Barrington township, died Monday morning in a Chicago hospital. Death was the result of a general nervous breakdown. The remains were brought to Barrington Monday evening, being received by a delegation from the Modern Woodmen lodge, of which order the deceased was a member. The funeral was held Wednesday from the late residence of the deceased, the Woodmen being in charge. Religious services were conducted by Rev. George E. Lockhart of the Baptist church and Rev. H. H. Thoren of Salem church. Interment in Evergreen cemetery.

Mr. Hager was born June 24, 1851, and was married October 19, 1880, to Miss Carrie Miller, who died August 30, 1904. Three children were born to this union. Fred, Emma and Ray, all living. About a year ago, after having been a widower for several years, Mr. Hager married Mrs. Eva Tuttle, who survives him. The deceased was well known locally as an electrician. He was of a particularly energetic nature, and it is believed that excessive application to hard work was largely responsible for his fatal attack of illness.

FRANK WALKER.
Our community was shocked on last Monday by the sudden news of the death of Frank Walker, manager of the H. I. Miller farm about a mile west of town. Mr. Walker was in robust health within a few days of his death. He met with an accident that seemed but slight, some time ago, but after suffering from severe headaches he lost control over his muscles, and evidently had paralysis developing in its incipient form, until it was impossible for him to move or communicate. The best help available was secured but he passed away on Monday forenoon.

Mr. Walker was still a young man of only forty years, having lived here about five years. He was married to Miss Stella Dagler of Rushville, Indiana, February 28, 1907. An only child died in infancy a few years ago. There are three brothers and two sisters of the deceased who join with the sorrowing friends in mourning their loss. The brief funeral service was held on Monday afternoon at the home, conducted by Rev. H. H. Thoren of Salem church. The Misses Plagge sang several songs, and the Odd Fellows attended in a body. The remains were taken to Rushville, Indiana for interment. The bereaved widow has the sympathy of the entire community. Miss Clara Wolhausen, nurse, accompanied Mrs. Walker to Indiana.

New Insignia for Conductors.

A change has been made in the coat sleeve insignia of the passenger conductors on the Chicago and Northwestern Railway system, which is now in effect. This insignia is made up of stars and bars on the coat sleeve, instead of the stripes formerly worn on the sleeve. They are placed on the left coat sleeve the same as heretofore and are of a very neat design. One bar denotes five years in this service, two bars ten years and so on. A bar for every five years. The star denotes twenty-five years of continuous service and after fifty years in the service they receive two stars.

Electric Current Cheaper.

The Public Service Company of Northern Illinois, the company supplying electric current for this village and vicinity and for most of the towns around Chicago, has announced a reduction in its rates for residential lighting. The new rate will take effect September 1. Just how much cheaper it will make the cost of the current, the company's local agent is not yet definitely able to tell, but it is expected that it will effect a reduction of about fifteen per cent.

Will Moosers Up Against It.

Boone county members of the bull moose party opposed by all the newspapers of the county. They arranged a big meeting to be held at Belvidere last Saturday afternoon, and the Elgin Courier is authority for the statement that not a single paper in the county would give them a notice.

Will Moosers Will Meet.

A meeting of Progressive delegates from the tenth congressional district will be held in the Board of Education building, 427 E. Evanston avenue, Chicago, tomorrow to decide whether or not a candidate for the office of congressman from this district shall be placed in the field.

MILK PRODUCERS MEET.

Dairymen Ask Increase Over Prices Paid Last Year—Contract Books Open September 15.

At a meeting of the Milk Producers' association in Chicago Tuesday, the members of the association fixed a schedule of prices which they will demand of the bottling companies when they open their contract books for their winter supply, which will be on September 15.

Following is the specific schedule asked, per hundred pounds, for the six winter months beginning with October:

October.....$1.50 January.....$2.05
November.....2.00 February.....2.00
December.....2.00 March.....1.90

This will make an average price of $1.98 2-3, the same as that which they have asked for the past two years. In 1910 the companies paid the average of $1.86 2-3, all of the dairymen signing up at this price, and last year the price offered was on an average, $1.79 1-6.

Farmers say they must have the advance in price this year because cows are worth more money, labor is higher, and in this vicinity hay is very scarce by reason of the alfalfa crop winter-killing.

Secretary J. P. Grier said Tuesday after the meeting: "On September 15 the bottling plants will announce the prices which they are going to pay, and we must take it or go out of business, and a lot of us are going out of business if their prices are not up to the ones we have demanded."

NEW BAPTIST PARSONAGE.

Aurand & Garbush Secure Contract for Beautiful New Baptist Parish House.

The building of a new Baptist parsonage on the 62x100 foot lot just south of the church and fronting on Grove avenue, has begun. The firm of Aurand & Garbush has secured the contract; the price being $2,875. The house will be 26x30 feet, with an eight foot porch and supported by six cement piers. The building will be of square construction, two stories high. It will contain a reception hall, living room, dining room and kitchen will be added to the south side of the dining room. The lower floor will be finished with red oak. Two pairs of colonnades will connect the hallway, living room and dining room. A ten-foot square bay window 18 inches deep and containing a full length box seat, will be added to the south side of the dining room.

The story top will contain four bedrooms and a bath room. The larger part of the subscriptions have been already secured.

It is expected that the building will be ready for occupancy by a resident pastor by the middle of November of this year. The new parsonage will be entirely paid for when completed.

Births.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Henry Landwehr of Lima street, Thursday, August 22, a daughter.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Frank Biere of Lake Zurich, Friday, August 23.

Mr. and Mrs. Chris Rasmussen, residing three miles north of Cary, are the parents of a son born Tuesday, August 27.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Louis Tuguel, Tuesday, August 27, a daughter.

A son was born Sunday, August 25 to Mr. and Mrs. John Miller, residing on the Howarth farm in the town of Cuba.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Schroeder this morning.

Nearly Killed By Colt.

Ralph Johnson, 9 years old, of Chicago, who has been visiting with his uncle, Henry Johnson, living on a farm south of this village, met with an accident yesterday afternoon which may cost his life. He was knocked down and trampled on by a colt when he entered the stall with the animal. His left arm was broken and his body badly bruised. He was also internally injured. He was sent to Augustana hospital, Chicago, on the 5:32 train last evening, where everything is being done in an effort to save his life.

Elgin Butter Market.

Butter was declared firm on the Elgin board of trade Monday at 25 cents, the same price that it has been quoted at for several weeks. The board adjourned for two weeks, next Monday being labor day, and this price will stand until the next meeting.

Modern Woodmen Pay Promptly.
We desire to thank the Modern Woodmen of America for the promptness in which our claim of $2,000, as beneficiary under a policy held by our son was paid.

WEDDING BELLS RING TWICE.

Meiners-Miller and Volker-Williams Nuptials Occur This Week.

MEINERS-MILLER.
On Thursday afternoon, August 22, a few minutes after five o'clock, Herbert L. Meiners and Miss Emma Miller were quietly married at the Salem church parsonage by Rev. H. H. Thoren, pastor of that church.

Hardly anyone in town knew of the event, but the news spread rapidly, and soon the vocal wires were hot with transmissions of the facts of the wedding. The boys immediately planned for a good time, but the newly married couple stole a march on them by quietly housing themselves in the Meiners cottage at the campground for the night, where they were sheltered and safe under the ten o'clock curfew rule of the campground.

The contracting parties are well known to the community. Mr. Meiners being a son of J. L. Meiners and Miss Miller a daughter of August C. Miller; and both are held in high esteem by their friends and acquaintances.

VOLKER-WILLIAMS.

Miss Angela Williams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Williams, 4011 West 25th street, Chicago, and Carl Volker, elder son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Volker of this village, were united in marriage at St. Mel's church, Forty-third street and Washington boulevard, Chicago, at three o'clock Tuesday afternoon. Rev. Fr. Shields performed the ceremony in the presence of 45 friends and relatives.

After the ceremony a reception was given at the home of the bride's parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Volker departed on the 10 o'clock train for Detroit, Michigan. From here they will make a 10 days' trip on the great lakes.

On their return they will make their home at Ravenswood where Mr. Volker is employed in the post office department.

CHURCH NOTES.

METHODIST.
9:30 a. m. Sunday school session. Singing by the choir, under the charge of Mr. Lovell Bennett. The lesson for the coming Sunday will be "The Death of John the Baptist." There were several accessions to the school on last Sunday.

10:40 a. m. public worship and sermon by the pastor, J. P. Mattison. Following the sermon, the sacrament of the Lord's supper will be celebrated. It is earnestly hoped that every member of the church will be present. This is the final communion before the season of the annual conference. The morning sermon will be "A Greater than Solomon is Here."

At 6:30 p. m. the devotional meeting of the Epworth League will be held. It is expected that reports of the religious agencies in Lake Geneva will be given by the delegates who were present from this place. Hence, there should be a very full attendance.

There will be 7:30 union service at the Baptist church.

Wednesday evening the mid-week service for praise and prayer will be held. Scripture for study will be the fourth chapter of James.

SCHOOL TIME HERE.

Public School Will Open for Fall Term Monday—All Is in Readiness.

The local public school will open next Monday for enrollment and assignment of lessons in order that everything may be in readiness for a full day work Tuesday.

The teachers are: room one, Miss Elsie Gainer; room two, Miss Cassanova Gainer; room three, Miss Elizabeth Forbes; room four, Miss Irene Zimmerman; room five, Miss Myrtle D'Arcy; seventh and eighth grades and high school, Misses Ida Castie, Lillian Holbrook and Alfreda Ackerman. Mrs. Stella C. Mosher is supervisor of music, and Erman S. Smith commences his fifth year as superintendent.

The janitor, Henry Meier, with the assistance of decorators, has been very busy getting the building in readiness. The assembly hall, class room, laboratory and rooms three and four have been caulked; the woodwork both inside and outside has been repainted; all the desks have been varnished; in fact, everything has been put in first class shape.

Domestic science and manual training for seventh grade and higher pupils has been added to the curriculum. Part of the equipment has been ordered and the balance will probably be ordered this week, and will be installed at once. The regular work in these subjects will begin the latter part of September.

A GOOD ENGINE.

Arnold Schauble Receives Compliment for Fine Engine.

On another page in this issue appears an advertisement of the Barrington gasoline engine, manufactured by Arnold Schauble. Mr. Schauble has been manufacturing these engines for a long time and many of them are in use about here. We have yet to hear of any word of complaint concerning them. Below is published a few words of appreciation from a recent purchaser: "THE RASCH FERTILIZER COMPANY, PORT WYNE, INDIANA, 'August 14, 1912."

"Mr. Arnold Schauble,
Barrington, Illinois.

"Dear Mr. Schauble:—
I wish to compliment you on the fine engine you installed on our farm last year. You will remember it was a 16 horse-power engine of your own make. It has been giving us excellent satisfaction in every way. I have seldom, if ever, seen a gas engine that is as reliable as the one you have installed for us. We use it to fill the silo, on a 14 inch cutter, for shredding, and in the winter for wood sawing. I can highly recommend this engine to anyone who may need a gas engine."

"I also wish to thank you for the promptness with which you have come to the farm and gone over the engine while we were learning how to run same."

"I am very much pleased with the great amount of power we are able to get out of the engine, and particularly with the small amount of gasoline used by the engine. It is also easy to get at to regulate and clean when necessary."

"Trusting you may be able to sell many more like mine, I am,

"Yours very truly,
"William E. Webbe."

Mr. Schauble is also agent for feed grinders, ensilage cutters, etc. When local farmers are in need of anything in that line they would do well to call on him.

Wednesday evening at 7:30 o'clock

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Tragillis of Evanston, Ill., will sing at the church Sunday morning, and Miss Arph of Palestine will sing Sunday evening.

There will be a union service at 7:30 o'clock in the evening. Our Methodist brethren will join with us. The pastor of the Baptist church will speak.

The monthly communion will be observed at the close of the morning sermon.

A very important meeting of the members of the church will occur at the close of the communion. It is exceedingly important that all members be present.

ZION CHURCH.

The Zion annual Sunday school picnic will be held Saturday, August 31, in the Lageschulte grove near Evergreen cemetery. A good program has been arranged and a most enjoyable time is expected. Any and everybody is invited to attend.

GREAT CROWD SUNDAY

United Evangelical Campmeeting Came to a Close Sunday After a Ten Days Session.

BY REV. H. H. THOREN.

Last Sunday meetings at the Barrington park camp grounds were crowded. Automobiles, trains and carriages brought in many from distant points, who enjoyed the day. Though the atmosphere was sultry and the sun hot, yet the beautiful shade trees in the park made it possible to be comfortable.

Bishop W. H. Brinker of Naperville delivered four splendid sermons, and his winning way got him the full attention of everybody in the tabernacle. He brought greetings from eastern camp meetings to the people here. He left again on Monday morning to attend the camp meeting near Geneva. Henry Moser of Sheridan spoke interestingly on "Present Needs," and presented plain truths to help workers in the Sunday school. A visiting evangelist, J. D. Clark of Allentown, Pennsylvania came unexpectedly, having just completed his summer bible school work at another camp. He led a number of meetings and was very practical, even humorous in his earnest appeals to the people to make good in the christian life.

Never before have we seen more unanimity of opinion and a greater harmony in every line of work at a camp meeting than that seen here during these ten days. The plain truth was presented in sincerity, and faithful advice were made. The christian life of those who attended should be more strong and of a higher level on account of these meetings.

Men and women were seen in the grip of truth, and many have renewed their consecration for more effective service and an upright living. Either they were new converts or had been absent. At several meetings when appeals were made for all who are God's children to arise, the entire audience with but two exceptions, arose. At the Sunday evening meeting, the draw to attend more faithfully the mid-week prayer meeting was taken by nearly every person present. All were on their knees, pleading for better and more loyal service. The result of these meetings should come out in the months to follow.

Over $500 was raised for the purchase of additional grounds. The offerings were liberal and hearty, and about $200 was given in the several offerings for expenses. The management is greatly encouraged. John C. Plagge has served well as general manager, and upon him has rested much of the burden for the success of the camp meeting.

The children's meetings have been unusually successful, with a daily meeting under the supervision of Mrs. Frank Gleason and Miss Elsie Burkhardt, and under carefully planned evangelistic efforts, over twenty children have consecrated themselves to the loyal service of God, and a number of very bright conversions were in evidence. The list of converts was long, and many were very thoughtful, and calmly led them step by step to intelligent decision for a christian life. It now depends on the development of the good seed of thought and conviction in their life, to bring them to proper christian maturity.

The presiding elder, Rev. H. R. Schultze, has endeavored himself to the people. He was busy every day and seemed to enjoy it. He and his family may stay for some time longer in the park to rest up and enjoy the quiet of the country.

At the last meeting on Monday morning, greetings were received from Mrs. T. L. C. Suh of China. Mrs. Suh is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred A. Lageschulte of this village, and is one of the missionaries in Hunan, China. Mr. and Mrs. Suh were sent to that country by the American Board of Christian missions, and then the circle was formed for the last farewell. Good cheer prevailed, and another christian fellowship meeting has closed.

The orchestra of Barrington talent, the male quartette from Chicago, the solo, duet and octet by ladies and the chorus led by V. Guthrie, all have contributed to the success of the work. Miss Almada Plagge deserves great credit for her loyal work as pianist throughout the meetings.

The past few days we have had a variety of experiences during the camp meeting, covering well the duties of a pastor's work. He was in prayer meetings, teachers' meetings, preaching services, preaching and baptizing, baptised three children on

ARMY MULE

Army Mule Vindicates Ability to Deliver Goods

WASHINGTON.—The army mule has rather vindicated itself. In a fair and free for all contest against the auto-truck and instrument, or vehicle designed for the purpose of getting its goods, the mule proved his right to remain in the American army. They tried to oust him, but he kicked—the mule may, at all times be depended upon to kick.

The proposal to discharge the army mule without a pension, without even an honorable discharge, began to find supporters when the mule driven army wagon first appeared upon the scene. It was argued that the old order would have to give way to the new, and that the all conquering automobile would certainly replace the mule to the rear. But they reckoned without full knowledge of the latent possibilities of the mule. A mule is a very deceptive creature. He is as hard to fathom in his various moods and tempers as his counterpart, the "coon," or the senior senator from Illinois. He is sometimes grossly misunderstood; this is because in spite of a long and close association with mankind—making yet fails to become on intimate and cordial relations with the mule. His disposition and character do not invite affection or confidence. At times he appears as innocent and unsophisticated as a candidate for congress—this is the time to beware of him—for back behind those innocent eyes and drooping ears there lurks mischief—mischief in large and violent doses. With half closed eyes he is watching you, and in an unguarded moment—unguarded on your part, he is likely to apply his strong white teeth to the fleshy part of your arm and leg and you will imagine that you have been bit by a shark. Either that or he will give you a swift and sudden kick with iron shod foot somewhere in the region of your carburetor, and you will land in the next county, where you can leisurely contemplate the desecrative qualities of the mule.

But to get back to his contest with the auto truck, the question was decided in favor of his muleship in Iowa over rough roads. The mule won. Whatever his faults are, the mule can and will pull. He has never shown any great fondness for work, but he can perform and does so effectively when there is no way to get around it.

The race between the mule and the auto trucks in some respects recalled a memorable one between the hare and the tortoise, though not even the mule's most bitter enemies will assert that he is in any respects like the tortoise.

Joke Dinner for Congressmen, Joker Not There

At 6 o'clock the other afternoon members of the house began to flock into the dining room of Congress hall in droves.

At 5 minutes after 6, fifty members were in the room. At 10 minutes after 6 half a dozen members rushed to with heads of perspiration trickling down their faces. The late arrivals explained to each other that they had dinner engagements at 6 o'clock. Each member inquired of the head waiter for Representative Francis Burton Harrison of New York. The head waiter had not seen Mr. Harrison all day.

Time passed. Members looked at their watches. Finally each prospect dinner announced to his neighbor that he was waiting for Mr. Harrison. It dawned on the assemblage that Mr. Harrison was going to give a dinner in the way of a surprise party. More time passed, and the clock struck 8:30. Members began to ask each other if they were sure that dinner was fixed at 6. Every one was positive he was to meet Mr. Harrison at 6 promptly. Members who had broken engagements to meet the New York member began to call up his office and his secretary replied that he had not seen him in several hours. That started the exodus. Every one was sore, including the head waiter who saw great prospects ahead.

An hour later half a dozen members walked into the grill of a downtown hotel and found Mr. Harrison dining alone.

"Hello, boys; mighty glad to see you," Mr. Harrison greeted them. "Come over and dine with me. I hate to eat alone."

They did, but not until he had convinced them that he was inviting them to a dinner at 6 o'clock.

Mr. Harrison passed up his legislative duties for one day. The morning he spent in explanations. He is still looking for the joker.

Pajamas Are Suggested for Unclad Lobsters

IF the next time you go marketing, you see a lobster or a crab clad in pajamas, don't rub your eyes or offer sympathy to be plucked to see you are awake. Just take it as a matter of course.

For pajamas have been suggested by certain humanitarian persons to prevent crabs and lobsters from biting off each other's claws and legs and feelers and whiskers while they are in captivity, the transitory state between the deep blue sea and the cooking pot. At present lobsters generally have their claws "choked" with small sticks of wood, which are said to be painful assurances of quiescence. That is not as it should be, a member of the Pennsylvania Women's Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals declares, and she has demanded some kind of clothing for the shellfish.

Her demands have not been taken up in Washington.

"We must remember that the cold-blooded animals are not so sensitive of pain as the warm-blooded," Secretary John P. Heap, of the Humane Society, said.

"This form of life, lobsters and crabs, is very low," Mr. Heap stated. "It is not imbued with the same feelings as the higher order. It is an approach to the vegetable kingdom. Therefore, there is in such cases these suggested hardly any cause for controversy."

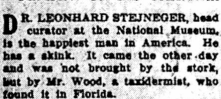

"We have had complaints about such cruelties as turning turtles on their backs and leaving them in that position; but fish and reptiles seldom afford any ground for complaint."

Dealers in crabs and lobsters have not taken the pajama suggestion seriously. They have laughingly replied to questions as to the feasibility of the plan that, "if the ladies preferred to recommend pajamas rather than hobbie skirts, pajamas would have the right of way."

The modern minister likes to have things quiet when he talks. It disconcerts him to hear a baby cry or a woman cough or an old man snore. If he is put out by such trifles as these it is interesting to conjecture what he would do if he were to take hold of a congregation where everybody brought nuts to crack during the sermon. Worshipers used to do this in England, and even in our own states during colonial days. This disturbance was not a weekly occurrence by any means; if it had been, the poor preacher would have undoubtedly left his congregation to administer spiritual consolation to himself.

But as it only happened once a year he was forced to endure it. This one day which was attended by such remarkable license came the Sunday before Michaelmas day and was called crack-nut Sunday. Nobody, no matter how pious he might be, hesitated to avail himself of the peculiar privileges granted him, and men, women and children came to church with their pockets stuffed with nuts, which they complacently cracked and munching during the sermon. It can be easily imagined that when forty or fifty people get to cracking nuts at their own might the noise is apt to be something terrific, and many times the minister was hard put to it to "bear himself think." The custom, from being regarded with high favor for many years, finally came to be looked upon as a nuisance, and in the beginning of the present century the habit was suppressed, although the act of suppression was attended with considerable difficulty, so firmly had the nut-cracking fever taken hold of the fancy of the people.

Curator of the National Museum Gets a Skink

DR. LEONARD STEINBERGER, head curator at the National Museum, is the happiest man in America. He has a skink. It came the other day and was not brought by the stork, but by Mr. Wood, a taxidermist, who found it in Florida.

The skink is not a well-known animal to say—as his name would indicate. He does not belong to the cat family. His scientific name is Leopoldina. In appearance he resembles a lizard, but unlike an elongated lizard, he has four legs which he does not use, they having become paralyzed from lack of exercise. He gets his food by lying in wait, with his sticky tongue extended, for something to come along.

He lives by waiting and hauling in. The deersucker pants attached to his sides indicate that his remote ancestors walked. The present day specimen walks not so docilely, but swims in the same way he lives. He is a reptile and a blooded the skink does not need much air. He spends much time in sand beds far removed from the busy world. From the standpoint of the scientist the skink is most interesting because he resembles skinks found in Persia and the Mediterranean, making the old world and the new close kin.

Experts at the National Museum say that the modesty of the skink coupled with his ability to swim through sand many inches deep, has made him a favorite with the taxidermist. He is a variety of skink.

Ringa Chame Each Other When Paper is Turned to Right or Left—Hoops Change Positions.

There are some tricks that can be played on a person's eyes which are pure illusions. Hold this paper a foot or more from your eyes and turn it gently round to the right or left, in small circles, keeping your eyes fixed on the three small rings, as shown in the illustration.

As you move the paper round like the hands of a watch you will find that the rings in these circles seem to chase each other in the same direction and the longer and more intently you look at it the faster they go.

Circles can be made with spokes in them which to some persons seem to be going in the opposite direction to that in which the paper is turned, but the illusion is not so perfect unless Chasing Rings.

The circles are much larger than there is space for in this column.

Another curious optical illusion that has puzzled a great many persons who have tried to account for it is also shown.

If we suppose these to represent wire hoops which of them is nearest you A or B? The answer is that it is the one you first made up your mind is nearest you. But now if you look steadily at it for a few moments your eyes will get tired of that idea and it will suddenly shift the rings to the furthest away from you, in spite of your wishing to keep it as it was, and after you have looked at

NOVEL NUT-CRACKING CUSTOM

Nobody Hesitated to Take Advantage of Peculiar Privilege Allowed in Olden Days.

The modern minister likes to have things quiet when he talks. It disconcerts him to hear a baby cry or a woman cough or an old man snore. If he is put out by such trifles as these it is interesting to conjecture what he would do if he were to take hold of a congregation where everybody brought nuts to crack during the sermon. Worshipers used to do this in England, and even in our own states during colonial days. This disturbance was not a weekly occurrence by any means; if it had been, the poor preacher would have undoubtedly left his congregation to administer spiritual consolation to himself.

But as it only happened once a year he was forced to endure it. This one day which was attended by such remarkable license came the Sunday before Michaelmas day and was called crack-nut Sunday. Nobody, no matter how pious he might be, hesitated to avail himself of the peculiar privileges granted him, and men, women and children came to church with their pockets stuffed with nuts, which they complacently cracked and munching during the sermon. It can be easily imagined that when forty or fifty people get to cracking nuts at their own might the noise is apt to be something terrific, and many times the minister was hard put to it to "bear himself think." The custom, from being regarded with high favor for many years, finally came to be looked upon as a nuisance, and in the beginning of the present century the habit was suppressed, although the act of suppression was attended with considerable difficulty, so firmly had the nut-cracking fever taken hold of the fancy of the people.

Willing to Wait.

Parson—Wouldn't you like to come to Sunday school and hear about heaven and the beautiful gold streets?

Little Lola—Yes, sir; but it will take away the surprise when I get there.

Plenic Date Was Uppermost.

The Parson—I'm glad to see you on your way to Sunday school, Algeron. What do you expect to learn today?

Algeron—Well, I expect to learn the date of the picnic, for one thing.

PORTABLE LAMP FOR CAMPER

Convenient Form of Light Consists of Acetylene Gas Generator and Reflector.

A very convenient form of lamp has recently been devised for the use of campers, hunters, etc. It consists of a portable acetylene gas generator, and a burner arranged with a reflector which is open at the front for the escape of heat. The walls of the reflector are imperforate, to prevent the passage of air through the reflector when the lamp is being moved about or is exposed to the wind. In this way the danger of extinguishing the light is avoided. The accompanying illustration shows in Fig. 1 how the lamp may be attached to the head of a man, while the gas generator is secured to his belt. The details of the head attachment are shown in the sectional view, Fig. 2. The burner, A, is attached to the flexible tube, B, which runs the generator. The reflector, C, in which the burner is fitted, is provided with a flange along its outer edge, to which the arms, D, are secured. These arms are fastened to a cage, E, provided with a strap, F, which is strapped about the head of the wearer. As an additional support to the lamp a small bracket, G, connects the bottom of the reflector directly to the head. When it is desired to use this device on a boat or in camp, it is mounted on a stand, H, as indicated at Fig. 3. This stand is formed of two sections, one of which is hinged upon the other, so that the lamp may be moved laterally. By means of a thumb screw, I, the two sections may be clamped at any desired position. The lamp is taken out of the head gear by unscrewing the bolts, J, and it may be then fastened in a bracket, K, which is secured on the upper end of the stand. The swivelled bracket is provided with a handle, L, which enables one to move the lamp in any desired direction.

NEWS OF ILLINOIS

Alton.—W. E. Williams, engineer, and F. J. Brown, brakeman, both of Springfield, were killed at Clifton, when a work train on the Chicago, Peoria & St. Louis railroad jumped the track. Five other persons were hurt. The engine left 100 feet down an embankment into the Mississippi river.

Lincoln.—Mrs. T. W. Dunham of Atlanta, has filed suit for divorce. Her husband is a grand opera singer. She was married in New York in 1905. In her suit she charges cruelty and asks the custody of her three-year-old daughter and alimony. She says Mr. Parvis possesses $50,000 and has earned $20,000 annually. In detailing her cruelty charge Mrs. Parvis says that her maid prevented her being choked to death once at Barcelona, Spain, and that the cruelties inflicted on her at Villa Paris, Saxony, Italy, compelled her to flee to her old home.

Winnetka.—One town has been found where the book agent is welcome. The agent who sells the Bible is given a particular welcome, at least by the police. One of the residents of Winnetka asked the police to arrest an agent, who it was said was annoying the people. When the police responded they found the man trying to sell copies of the Bible. They not only refused to arrest him, but told him to place as many of the books as possible in the homes of the residents.

Springfield.—Dan F. Rice of Chicago instituted suit against Springfield to recover $9,000 on a pump made by the city. The city officials and repudiated by another. The amount asked is a balance said to be due on the purchase-price. The pump was purchased during the administration of Mayor Roy R. Reese. It was delivered after another set of officials had been elected and they refused to acknowledge the machinery as the city's property.

Peoria.—After having been imprisoned twenty-five and one-half hours at the bottom of a 35-foot cistern beneath the surface of the Illinois river in the excavations being made for a new railway bridge near Pekin, F. J. Schmidt was hauled to the surface by a derrick and expired within five minutes.

Calto.—In a head-on collision between two freight trains on the Rock Island at Mount City, a carload of valuable race horses on route from the Vienna fair to the Anna fair, was caught in a wreck and badly shaken up and a number of horses injured.

Springfield.—Governor Deneen issued a regulation on the governor of Texas for the return to Chicago of John King, under arrest in Dallas, and wanted in Illinois on a charge of obtaining goods and money by means of a confidence game.

Springfield.—Ruth Powers, aged twenty-one, white, servant at the home of O. B. Caldwell, was shot and killed by Arthur Johnson, a negro chauffeur. Johnson escaped. A lynching is feared if he is captured.

Erie.—John Hatton, grandson of President William Henry Harrison, at Mount City, died at his home here. He was ninety-eight years old.

Springfield.—Yegman cracked the safe at the post office. He escaped a trace of his identity. Residents of the town who heard the explosion made no effort to investigate the cause and the robbery was not discovered until daylight. Miss Margaret Hardin, the postmistress, says she will not know the loss until the accounts are checked up. The thieves emptied the safe of its contents, including stamps and cash, amounting to a few hundred dollars. Entrance to the post office building was obtained by prying the lock from the front door.

Calto.—The Memphis and New Orleans Illinois Central fast mail train No. 1, crashed at Mount City, three miles north of Makanda. The entire train of eight coaches with exception of a Pullman sleeper left the track, but none of the coaches were overturned. Both tracks were effectively blocked for many hours. No one was seriously injured. The train carried nearly 300 passengers, many of whom had been attending the Soldiers and Sailors' reunion at Duquoin. The wreck was caused by tender of locomotive jumping the track.

Ocoee.—The congregation of the Sacred Heart church is erecting a new building to cost $15,000.

Cornell.—John Hoenesbail is suffering from blood poisoning in his right hand as a result of a fly bite on a sore.

Waterloo.—Mrs. Catherine Doerr, 52, who until last week did her own housework, is dead.

Decatur.—The city council has passed an ordinance forbidding fireworks.

Orphanages in Turkey.

There are 25 orphanages in the Turkish empire. They are conducted by Americans, enrolling 3,000 inmates. In connection with these orphanages an industrial work has sprung up which gives employment to over 10,000 people in addition to the orphans. The work is largely done by the widows and orphans and includes rug and lace making, various forms of embroidery, and other domestic work. The product of these institutions finds a market abroad.

Everybody in Hard Luck.

Suddenly he stepped up to a gentleman, who was waiting for the tram, and, tapping his light upon the shoulder, said: "Excuse me, but did you drop a five-pound note?" at the same time holding out in his hand the article.

The gentleman questioned gazed a moment at the note, assumed an anxious look, made a hasty search of his pocket, and said: "Why, so I did, and I hadn't missed it," holding out his eager hand.

The elderly hunter took the name and address of the loser and, putting the note in his pocket, turned away.

"Well," said the other, "do you want it all as a reward?"

"Oh, I did not find one," remarked the benevolent one with another beam; "but it struck me that in a big place like London there must be a quantity of money lost, and upon inquiry I found that you are the one hundred and thirty-first man who lost a five-pound note this morning."—London Answers

THE WAY OUT

Change of Food Brought Success and Happiness.

An ambitious but delicate girl, after failing to go through school on account of nervousness and hysteria, found in Grape-Nuts the only thing that seemed to build her up and furnish her the peace of health.

"From infancy," she says, "I have not been strong. Being ambitious to learn at any cost I finally got to the High School, but soon had to abandon my studies on account of nervous prostration and hysteria."

"My food did not agree with me, I grew thin and dependent. I could not enjoy the simplest social affair for I suffered constantly from nervousness in spite of all sorts of medicines."

"This wretched condition continued until I was twenty-five, when I became interested in the letters of those who had cases like mine and who were getting well by eating Grape-Nuts."

"I had little faith but procured a box and after the first dish I experienced a peculiar satisfied feeling that I had never gained from any ordinary food. I slept and rested better that night and in a few days began to grow stronger."

"I had a new feeling and peace and restfulness. In a few weeks, to my great joy, the headaches and nervousness left me and life became bright and hopeful. I resumed my studies and later taught ten months with ease—of course using Grape-Nuts every day. It is now four years since I began to use Grape-Nuts. I am the mistress of a happy home, and the old weakness has never returned." Name given by the Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

NEAT LAWN HAVE VALUE.

Residents of this village have been heard to complain of the thoughtlessness of some of those driving vehicles and automobiles in leaving the beaten track and driving on the tree banks at the side of the road. It is very discouraging to those who water and trim their lawns regularly, extend their work to the tree banks in front of their residences, and try to keep neat, well-ordered, front yards, to have their labor put at naught by a careless driver; and it is in nearly every case mere carelessness, not necessity, that causes drivers to leave the highway in this manner.

Remember that neat, residential property not only is a source of satisfaction to the owner or tenant, reflecting upon him considerable credit, but it leads strangers to think well and speak well of the community. The individual makes the town.

If you cannot help beauty, don't destroy what others have done.

MORE SKELETONS.

With a real three cornered political fight on, the people are evidently going to learn a lot of new things about how this country of ours has been run. Senator Penrose has started the ball to rolling with the statement that George W. Perkins guaranteed $3,000,000 to secure the nomination of Col. Roosevelt at the Republican convention in Chicago last June.

If this be true, it is apt to shake the faith of some of Teddy's supporters in the belief that he is the plain people's friend and not the tool of the big interests.

Senator Penrose has, himself, since been accused of accepting money from the Standard Oil company in return for political favors. Further revelations are promised on both sides.

Truly, the political skeletons are being brought to light.

ALL IN GOOD TIME.

The following item is from the last issue of the Graylake Times:

It gives us a pain in the heart to see in the various exchanges where towns are extending sewers and installing septic tanks, and to think that here in Graylake, where there is an abundance of wealth, we are still plodding alone in that backwoods manner so far as this particular modern convenience is concerned. We always console ourselves by saying that we will get it some day and keep on working to that end.

The editor of the REVIEW felt that way for a long, long time, but now that a septic tank and a partial system has been contracted for, we are encouraged to believe that before many years this most necessary adjunct to the health of a community will cover the entire village.

Take heart, Brother Newhouse, your time will come.

MORALITY AND FASHIONS.

It must be confessed that all this recent talk about the morality of fashions seems somewhat a straining of the point. Morality is very largely like beauty, in that it is as it does, or does not do. Fashion is nothing more or less than the mode. It is the woman in the dress, not the dress on the woman that counts.

To declare a particular fashion vulgar or indecent or immoral, is, therefore, somewhat equivalent to bringing a blanket indictment against all the women except those who are conspicuous by their avoidance of it.

The milk producers are again trying to secure a raise in the price they receive from the bottling companies. They'll need it this winter if ever they did, and our desire is that they may be successful.

Her First Case

By JEAN M. COLLIER

Elizabeth returned from her first ambulance class flustered, but elated.

For the first time in her not too eventful existence of twenty-one years, Elizabeth was roused. The call to arms was sounding; brave men flocked to join the reserve force; brave women felt the call also and did their utmost to nip their incompetency in the bud. Elizabeth, too, was carried away by the universal enthusiasm, and, with feelings of excitement not unmitigated with alarm, she attended classes of "first-aid," and rejoiced to feel herself at last a useful member of the community.

Elizabeth in her ardor became even more trying to the family circle than in her previous lethargic state. No room in the home and no member of the household could escape the merciless hand of Elizabeth in all the first fire of her patriotic enthusiasm. The elegant apartment which had been upholstered in the best of taste, became littered with improvised splints and rolls of coarse material. Known to Elizabeth as the "Emark" bandage.

Everybody down to the second footman had undergone his share of torture while Elizabeth, with untiring energy, did head or "cranial" bandages, and practiced also how to make a broken arm comfortable until the arrival of the doctor. Upon one memorable occasion she had improvised a splint from the board of a packing case, and quite over-looking the fact that there were four bent and rusty nails protruding from it, she proceeded with her usual vigor upon the butler's arm, and only found out the mistake when the unhappy man cried out with pain, displaying a hand mutilated and bleeding. This, however, furnished a new and most entertaining test for Elizabeth's skill, who did not rest until her victim retired, pale and trembling, with arm in sling and looks which expressed the most acute suffering.

On yet another occasion Elizabeth set upon her father, who was going off in state to a dinner at which royalty was expected. She insisted upon his waiting while she demonstrated to him the correct way of dealing with a broken collar-bone. A pad being necessary to place beneath the patient's arm, and her father being in a very great hurry, Elizabeth could think of nothing better suited to her needs than a sponge. She accordingly fetched one, and placed it beneath her parent's arm, and, unfortunately, she realized too late that a sponge should be carefully squeezed before being placed upon a court suit of velvet.

But even if Elizabeth's real did at times outrun her performance, her intentions were undeniably good, and her family, though not well versed themselves in the subject of "first-aid," was justly proud of their patriotic daughter.

The first course of lectures was drawing to a close, the examination was at hand, and what Elizabeth felt the most needed was practical experience.

She roamed the park daily in search of accidents. She frequently visited the Rotten Row, and found herself ferreting long that some unfortunate individual might see fit to break a limb. Elizabeth's search, however, remained for many weeks unrewarded. She became quite despondent, and indeed almost lost her faith in the desirability of motor busses. Had she been able to drive her own car, doubtless her efforts would have frequently met with success; but Richards, the chauffeur, who had suffered acutely in Elizabeth's hands more than once, was wise enough to drive even more prudently than ever.

Elizabeth now never left the house without a pair of scissors and a box of safety pins in her pocket. She relied upon her petticoat, or even her skirt, for bandage, and carried an umbrella in all weathers, which in an emergency could quickly be converted into a splint.

At last the great day came; but unfortunately it did not come at a time when Elizabeth was fully prepared. She was going out to lunch, and consequently was magnificently clothed in a Directors costume, and as an umbrella would be decidedly in the way, Elizabeth was not so fully equipped for emergency as was her custom.

As Elizabeth passed the park gates in her motor, a young man rode out to the road. His horse was nervous, and chose to take flight at the big car. Elizabeth did not see clearly just what happened, which was not surprising, as she shut her eyes and placed her fingers firmly in her ears as the horse began to plunge.

To be quite fair, however, Elizabeth recovered quickly, and flinging open the window, ordered Richards to pull up instantly. She then dismounted, splendidly Director as she was, and ran quickly through the mud to where the young man lay in the midst of a swiftly gathering crowd.

Forcing her way to his side, she took in the situation at a glance. Pushing away the policeman who was supporting the boy's head, she pulled off her Director's jacket, and rolling it into a ball with fine carelessness, she placed it in the mud as a support to the young man's shoulders.

Imagine her surprise when, as she was about to make an elaborate "cranial bandage" upon the Emark basis, a stalwart young woman forced her way through the crowd and knelt down at his other side with a look of great determination upon her stern features. Elizabeth was nonplussed, and regarded her rival with annoyance, which became more acute as she watched the young woman produce scissors and pins from her pocket and an immense handkerchief from her sleeve.

Elizabeth got up from her knees and looked round her in dismay to have her lawful prey snatched from her thus was too much. As she stood there in great indecision, her eye fell upon another female form forcing its way to the center of the crowd. The newcomer, a fair girl of seventeen or so, advanced rapidly and with a businesslike air, rolling up her sleeves as she came. The sight of another in possession did not seem to disturb her in the least; she knelt also in the mud, and for lack of something better to do, fell to mopping the brow of the prostrate young man with a two-inch handkerchief. Elizabeth's gaze grew wilder, she took a step backwards and turned to flee. As she did so, she collided violently with a girl who, armed with rolls of "Emark," was flying towards the scene of action. Elizabeth pressed her brow in anguish. She caught the policeman's eye—even he was smiling, and a subdued titter went round the crowd.

With a shudder Elizabeth gathered up her clinging skirts, now decorated with huge patches of mud, and fled away through the press. With a cry of joy she saw the motor drawn up beside the curb, and with a sob she flung herself inside and slammed the door.

It was only when she had left the scene of action far behind that Elizabeth thought of her Director's jacket lying in a puddle beneath the young man's shoulders. The thought was too much for her and she dissolved into tears.

Reduction in Cost of Residence Lighting

Beginning September 1, 1912, this company will offer to its customers the privilege of using its service for lighting at the maximum demand rate.

Under this system electricity used for residence lighting will be fourteen and one-half cents (14 1/2c) per kilowatt hour for the first thirty hours use of the maximum number of kilowatt hours taken at any one time during the month. The rate charged for all remaining kilowatt hours will be eight cents (8c.)

A discount for prompt payment of one cent per kilowatt hour on the customer's total consumption of electricity will be allowed by the company on all bills paid at the proper office or agency, within ten (10) days after their dates by him.

Customers having installations of less than five kilowatts (that is less than ten lamps of fifty watts each) will have their maximum demand determined by fixed per centage of their installation.

This rate will effect an average reduction in residential lighting bills of 15 per cent.

CHURCH NOTES

English at 7:30 p. m.
The second quarterly meeting will begin at 2 p. m. Saturday, September 7 in Miller's Grove church. Quarterly conference will immediately follow the preaching service. On said Sunday the regular service time will be observed, both in Barrington and Miller's Grove.

Dr. S. L. Umbach of Naperville will conduct these meetings.

Campmeeting Closed.

Sunday afternoon, communion with his brethren at the Lord's supper, was called out one afternoon to join two young hearts in matrimony, took four members into church fellowship last Sunday and at the close of the camp meeting served to comfort bereaved and sorrowing friends in the homes of mourning. Such is the experience in this life. Sorrow and gladness exchange places within a few hours. Blessed is he whose trust is in the Lord, and whose life is fixed by noble purpose for the making of better manhood and womanhood. Barrington Park camp meetings have become annual feasts and recruiting seasons. They are some of the most potent factors for the upbuilding of this community in the best sense, and as a factor for righteousness they take first rank. Long may they continue.

victims to stomach, liver and kidney troubles just like other people, with like results in loss of appetite, backache, nervousness, headache, and tired, listless, run-down feeling. But there's no need to feel like that as T. D. Peebles, Henry, Tenn., proved. "Six bottles of Electric Bitters," he writes, "did more to give me new strength and good appetite than all other stomach remedies I used." So they help every body. Its folly to suffer when this great remedy will help you from the first dose. Try it. Only 50c at Barrington Pharmacy.

OLDEST TREE IS ON CO$

It Measures 30 Feet in Circumference and is More Than 2,000 Years Old.

The tallest trees in the world are the Australian eucalypti, which attain an altitude of 480 feet. The biggest are the mammoth trees of California, some of which are 275 to 375 feet in height, and 108 feet in circumference at the base. From measurements of the rings it is believed that certain of these trees are from 2,000 to 3,500 years old. The oldest tree in the world is said to exist on the island of Cos off the coast of Asia Minor. It is several thousand years old, but just how many no one has dared to say. The tree is carefully preserved by a wall of masonry around it, and the trunk is thirty feet in circumference. But there are parts of trees in the form of useful timber which are even older, probably, than any on the stump. Beams in old buildings are preserved today, which are known to be over a thousand years old. Piles driven by the Romans prior to the Christian era are perfectly sound today, and it is known that they have been immersed in water for upward of two thousand years.

Some woods have remarkably durable properties when immersed in water. They decay rapidly on the stump, many rotting in from five to ten years, but when immersed in water they last longer than iron or steel. An effort has been made by our government to preserve woods indefinitely by treating them with oils and tar products. Already telegraph poles and railway ties have had their average life extended from five to ten years by this process.—Hawara.

Indian Killed on Track.
Near Rochelle, Ill., an Indian went to sleep on a railroad track and was killed by the fast express. He paid for his carelessness with his life. Often in that way when people neglect to take proper care of themselves they are killed. Don't risk your life. Discover a dangerous throat or lung trouble. "It completely cured me in a short time of a terrible cough that followed a severe attack of grip," writes J. R. Watts, Floydada, Texas, "and I gained 15 pounds in weight that I had lost." Quick, safe, reliable and guaranteed. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free at the Barrington Pharmacy.

Rather Nest Rejoinder.
A Frenchman, dining at the duke of Richmond's, bored the company by boasting that his country was first in everything, and supreme in fashions. Ruffles were then in vogue, and monsieur claimed that France deserved the credit for introducing them. "That is true," said George Selwyn, "but England improved them greatly by adding a shirt to them."

SYNOPSIS.

Lieut. Harry Mallory is ordered to the Philippines. He and Major Norton decide to elope, but wreck of taxicab prevents their getting away on the way to the train. Transcontinental train is taken on passengers or they are left to wait with an Englishman and Mrs. Lathrop. The train is delayed, and they have an exciting time getting to the train.

Her neither ill-treated and her eyes were filled, but they were brave, and her voice was so tender that it wooed his mind from his watch? He gazed at her, and found her so dear, so devoted and so pitifully exquisite, that he was almost overcome by an impulse to gather her into his arms there and then, different to the immediate passengers or to his fellow military superiors. An hour ago they were young lovers in all the ill and thrill of elopement. She had clung to him in the gloaming of their taxi, as it sped like a genie at their whim to the place where the minister would unite their hands and raise his own in blessing. Then the taxi driver, who had carried the new wife away, his very own, soul and body, duty and beauty. Then, ah, then in their minds the future was an unwelcome honeymoon, the journey across the continent, a stroll along a lover's lake, the Pacific ocean a garden lake, and the Philippines a chain of Fortunate Isles decreed especially for their Eden. And then the taxi encountered a lamp-post. They thought they had merely wrecked a motor car—and in, they had wrecked a Paradise.

The railroad ceased to be a lover's lane and became a lingering torment; the ocean was a wailing Sahara; and the Philippines a Dry Tortugas of exile.

Mallory realized for the first time what heavy burdens he had taken on with his shoulder straps; what a dismal life of restrictions and hardships an officer's life is bound to be.

Perhaps young Mr. Montague and young Miss Capulet, instead of waiting, "No, that is not the lady whose notes do beat the vanity heaven so high above our heads," would have done no better than Mr. Mallory and Miss Newton. In any case, the best three two could squeeze out was:

"It's just too bad, honey."

"But I guess it can't be helped, dear."

"It's a mean old world, isn't it?"

"Awww!"

And then they must pile out into the street again so lost in woe that they did not know how they were trampled or shivered. Major Norton despair was so complete that it paralyzed instinct. She forgot Snocuous! A thoughtful passenger ran out and tossed the basket into Mallory's arms even as the car moved off.

Fortune relented a moment and they found a taxicab waiting where they had expected to find it. Once more they were away in the flying twilight, but their grief was their only baggage, and the clasp of their hands talked all the talk there was.

Anxiety within anxiety tormented them and they feared another wreck. But as they swooped down upon the station, a kind-faced, round-faced beamed the reassurance that they had three minutes to spare.

The taxicab drew up and halted, but they did not get out. They were kissing good-bye, fervently and numerously, while a grinning station-porter winked at the winking chauffeur.

Majorie simply could not have done with farewells.

"I'll go to the gate with you," she said.

He told the chauffeur to wait and take the young lady home. The lieutenant looked so honest and the girl so sad that the chauffeur simply touched his cap, though it was not his custom to allow strange fares to vanish into crowded stations, leaving behind nothing more negotiable than instructions to wait.

CHAPTER IV.

A Mouse and a Mountain.
All the while the foiled sleepers were sleeping, Mrs. Francisco de la Cruz was filling up her basket with the requisite of assorted lots of humanity tumbling into it from all directions, with all sorts of souls, bodies and destinies.

The porter received each with that expert eye of his. His car was his laboratory. A railroad journey is a sort of laboratory of life. It had been the most uneventful of journeys, the elements most under strange conditions and make strange combinations. The porter could never foresee the nature of the trip, nor their actions and reactions.

He had no sooner established Mr.

Wedgehead of London and Mr. Ira Lathrop of Chicago, in comparative repose, than his car was invaded by a woman who lunged herself into the first seat. She was flushed with running, and breathing hard, but she managed a gasp of relief:

"Thank goodness, I made it in time."

The mere sound of a woman's voice in the next back of him was enough to disperse Ira Lathrop. With not so much as a glance backward to see what manner of woman it might be, he jammed his newspaper and retreated to the farthest end of the car, bounding down into berth number one, like a wren snapping turtle.

Miss Anne Estelle, modest and homely value had been brought aboard by a leisurely station usher, who let it down and waited with a sparkling smile outstretched. She had her tickets in her hand, but transferred them to her teeth while she searched for money in a handbag old-fashioned enough to be called a reticule.

The usher closed his fist on the pit-lake she dropped into it and departed without comment. The porter advanced on her with a demand for "Tickets, please."

She began to rummage her reticule with furious haste, taking out of it a small purse, opening that, closing it, putting it back, taking it out, searching the reticule through, turning out a handkerchief, a few hairpins, a few trunk keys, a baggage check, a bottle of salts, a card or two and numerous other maddening articles, restoring them to place, looking in the purse again, restoring that, closing the reticule, setting it down, shaking out a book she carried, opening her old value, going through certain white things blue-stained, closing it again, shaking her skirts, and shaking her head in bewilderment.

She was about to open the reticule again, when the porter exclaimed:

"I see it! Don't look no mo'. I see it!"

She cast up her eyes in deep despair, her hatrim had been elevated enough to disclose the whereabouts of the tickets. With a murmured "Where are they?" she turned from her teeth and held them under the light. After a time he said:

"As near as I can make out from the ticket, you 'namba is six."

"That's it—six!"

"That's right up this way."

"Let me sit here, I'll get my breath," she pleaded. "I ran so hard to catch the train."

"Well, you caught it good and strong."

"I'm so glad. How soon do we start?"

"In about half a hour."

"Really? Well, better half an hour!"

"That's all right."

"That's all right."

"Chauffeur! chauffeur! don't go so fast! Round these corners."

He collided with a small train-boy regarding his duty, but it was a mere bump and not the train-boy that collapsed into a seat, sprawling as helplessly as a mammoth oyster on a table-cloth.

The porter rushed to his aid and bolted him to his feet with an uneasy sense of impending trouble. He felt as if someone had left a monstrous baby on his doorstep, but all he said was:

"Tickets, please."

There ensued a long search, fat, shabby hands fopping and fumbling from pocket to pocket. Once more the porter was the discoverer.

"Don't look no mo'. Here it is—in yo' hand!" He lifted it out and chuckled. "Had it right next his brains and couldn't remember!" He took up the appropriately huge luggage. The blubbery wanderer and led him to the other end of the aisle.

"Numba two is yours, sah. Right head—all nice and cozy, and already made up."

The big man looked through the curtains into the cabined confinement, and groaned.

"That! Haven't you got a man's size berth?"

"Sorry, sah. That's as big a bunk as they is on the train."

"Have I got to be locked up in that pigeon-hole for—how many days is it to Reot?"

"Reot! The porter greeted that meaningful name with a smile. "We do in Reot the 'mavin'—the mavin' of the foth day, sah. Yassah." He put the baggage down and started away, but the fat man seized his hand, with great emotion:

"Don't leave me all alone in there, porter, for I'm a broken-hearted man."

"Too bad, sah."

"Were you ever a broken-hearted man, porter?"

"Always, sah."

"Did you ever put your trust in a false-hearted woman?"

"Often, sah."

"Was she ever true to you, porter?"

"Never, sah."

"Porter, we are partners in misery."

And he wrung the rough, black hand of the porter, who, unembarrassed, the porter almost as much as it would have embarrassed the passenger himself if he could have understood what he was doing. The porter dismissed himself with a patient but hasty:

"I'm afraid you'll have to excuse me. I got to help the other passengers on board."

"Don't let me keep you from your duty. Duty is the—the—" But he could not remember what duty was, and he dropped his head and went to sleep, if he had not been started by a familiar voice which the porter had luckily escaped.

"Pawah! Pawah! Can't you raise this light—or rather can't you lower it? Pawah! This light is so infernally dim I can't read."

To the Englishman's intense amazement his call brought to him not the porter, but a rising moon with the profound query:

"Whass a HT thing like dim light, when the light of your life has gone out?"

"I beg your pardon?"

Without further invitation, the mammoth descended on the Englishman's territory.

"I'm a broken-hearted man, Mr. Mr.—I didn't get your name."

"Mr.—ah—dare say."

"Thank you, I will do. He lifted a great carry-all and strolled into it into the aisle, set the Gladstone on the lap of the infuriated Englishman, and scoured into the seat opposite, making a bad mix-up of knees.

"My name's Wellington. Ever hear of it? Jimmie Wellington? That's me."

"Any relation to the Duke?"

"Nagh!"

He no longer interested Mr. Wedgehead, but Mr. Wellington was not aware that he was being snubbed. He went right on getting acquainted:

"Are you married, Mr.—Mr.—?"

"No!"

"My heartfelt congratulations. Hang on to your luck, my boy. Don't let any female take it away from you. He slapped the Englishman on the elbow amiably, and his prisoner was too stiffed with wrath to emit more than one feeble "Pawah!"

Mr. Wellington mused on aloud:

"Oh, if I had only remained single. But she was so beautiful and she swore to love, honor and obey. Mrs. Wellington is a queen among women, mind you, and I have nothing to say against her except that she has the temper of a tarantula. He italicized the word with a light flip of his left hand along the back of the seat opposite, making a bad mix-up of knees.

HINTS ON THE FORMATION OF FARMER'S LIBRARY AND BOOKS IT SHOULD CONTAIN

In the Library of Frank I. Mann.

By E. P. HERMANN.

Student at University of Illinois.

The modern minister, doctor or lawyer would not think of trying to practice his profession without the text books and professional periodicals in his library. The farmer, however, could not be the engineer, the manufacturer or the merchant do as good work without the help of the previous experience of others, largely found in books. But just as valuable as law books to the lawyer are the works on agriculture to the modern farmer.

It is easy with a little work and a very little expense to start a library, especially on the professional side. The federal government, the state, numerous educational and other societies, and private corporations, issue publications of great value to those who will gather and use them. These are the great agricultural press, whose publications are very moderate in price. Good books can be purchased in plain but substantial bindings at a fractional part of their cost some years ago, and a few more expensive volumes, purchased from time to time and added to the collection, soon surprise one with the extent and value of his library.

A few practical suggestions as to the start may be in order. Write to your congressman asking for the agricultural year book, with last numbers if he can supply them, and for a list of the bulletins and circulars of the department of agriculture. When you receive this list check off those which you wish and send him the list. Also ask for such reports of the department as would be of advantage to a farmer's library. Ask to be put on the permanent mailing list for announcements of new publications.

Write to your state experiment station for reports and for a list of circulars and reports in the same way. Write to the secretary of your farmers' institute for its report and other publications. Ask your state superintendent of public instruction for such documents as would be of value to you. Write to the extension department of your state university for information as to the extension work that they are carrying on. The similar departments of other states publish other material and will usually send it on application.

Subscribe for a few of the best farm papers and magazine. It will sometimes be well to have these bound in a simple inexpensive manner. Join your county horticultural society, your local grange, the stock breeders' association and similar organizations which exist in your locality and receive their publications, as well as the other benefits which they offer.

These four sets of suggestions will enable you to get your library started on the professional side. The matter should not be allowed to rest here, however, but some of the more thorough and connected discussions on the various phases of agriculture should be purchased to help out. Neither is the farmer's library complete if it contains nothing but professional material. There should be some good general, children's and household magazines; there should be story books and cultural books; there should be a "well-rounded" collection of books that will grow more valuable every day.

PRINCIPLES OF DIET AND VARIETY OF FOOD

At Work in Household Science Department Kitchen, University of Illinois.

By SUSANNAH USHER.

Assistant Professor of Household Science, University of Illinois.

The rise in the cost of living has made the cost of food of vital concern to most of us, and the numerous dietetic cults have set us to thinking along the line of diet in relation to health. Horace Fletcher tells us that our problem will be solved if we chew our food thoroughly. Professor Chittenden of Yale believes that we overload the system with protein, and Professor Atwater of the United States department of agriculture thinks the efficiency of the American people is due to its present diet. These three authorities agree in not eliminating meat entirely from the diet, but they disagree in the amount of meat that is healthful.

We may be somewhat bewildered by the contentions of the meat eaters, the non-meat eaters, the chewers and the raw food advocates, but fortunately we have some landmarks in the rigid dieting of the past. We know that it may be wise to take a middle course. By careful observation, each one can decide to some extent how much and what kind of food keeps him in good condition for his particular work. We know that we need for energy in proportion to the amount of muscular work of the body, internal, such as digestion, assimilation, circulation of the blood and respiration, and external.

This has been worked out by scientific experiment.

The question of variety is often a puzzling one to the housekeeper, especially if the market is poor; in this case she is thrown back on variety in the preparation of a few food materials rather than variety in the materials themselves. Different methods of preparing a few simple foods are well illustrated by some work done at the University of Illinois. These students were given four simple foods, beef, potatoes, cabbage and apples, from which to serve 12 meals to most of us, and the numerous dietetic cults have set us to thinking along the line of diet in relation to health. Horace Fletcher tells us that our problem will be solved if we chew our food thoroughly. Professor Chittenden of Yale believes that we overload the system with protein, and Professor Atwater of the United States department of agriculture thinks the efficiency of the American people is due to its present diet. These three authorities agree in not eliminating meat entirely from the diet, but they disagree in the amount of meat that is healthful.

Cut Shows Barrington Portable Gasoline Engine with Screen Water Cooling Tank

The Barrington Portable Gasoline Engine is mounted on heavy, substantial steel trucks. They are especially built and balanced for portable engine work and will stand perfectly stationary on a level floor without blocking, when running at full speed and under load. The materials used in their manufacture are the best that money will buy. Equipped with friction clutch pulley, screen-cooling water tank with circulating pump, gasoline tank, speed lever, battery complete, magneto and all necessary accessories. The engine is fitted with a volume or throttling governor; this governor is a centrifugal high speed governor, being run two revolutions to one revolution of the engine, thereby maintaining a regulation that will govern on less than one hundredth part of an inch; and we guarantee the speed of this engine to be as regular as any steam engine ever built. Can be changed from 125 revolutions to 400 revolutions while running. Ask your neighbors about them.

This Engine has Been On the Market for Nearly Ten Years and Over 200 Are In Use

The New Holland Grinder

The New Holland mill will do the work quickly and with less power than other grinders, preparing the grain so that the stock will get the most from the ration and you will get all the profit there is to be had from the grain you feed.

CORT THEATRE

During the hot weather in Chicago, while all the playhouses are suffering, and all the people are rushing to the parks and lake resorts, the Cort theatre finds its capacity entirely too small to accommodate the thousands of playgoers who are eager to see and enjoy "Fine Feathers," the tremendous drama by Eugene Walter, which H. H. Frazer is presenting at that playhouse with an all-star cast. It is a page taken from real life, with characters with whom you and I are familiar, and served in a manner that brings forth wonder, applause and suspense from the audiences. Chicago critics who are usually conservative in their reviews of a play, in this case threw caution to the winds and unloaded a flood of superlatives and adjectives which showed that the play impressed them as no other had done for years. Aside from its dramatic skill, its brilliant dialogue and its gripping situations, "Fine Feathers" appeals to the public because the theme with which it deals is familiar to everyone.

There is no home in America that has not at one time or another been confronted by the same problem which Bob Reynolds and his wife—in the play—have to face. The increased cost and standard of living—the feminine desire for pretty clothes—the double standard of morals which applies to modern business—all these are part of "Fine Feathers" and they make it beyond a doubt the biggest drama of the century.

Matinees are given Wednesday and Saturday, and a special one on labor day.

The Trials of a Traveler. "I am a traveling salesman," writes E. E. Young, of Berkshire, Vt., "and when I was troubled with constipation and indigestion I began to use Dr. King's New Life Pills, which I have found an excellent remedy." For all stomach, liver or kidney troubles they are unequalled. Only 25c at Barrington Pharmacy.
