VILLAGE BOARD MET ON MONDAY EVENING

Trustees Held Regular Monthly Session at the Village Hall on Last Monday Evening.

WILL ASK FOR EXTRA WATCHMEN

Board Members Decide That the Local Railroad Crossings Must Be Better Guarded.

The board of village trustees of the village of Barrington met at the village hall Monday evening in monthly session with all members present and President Lamey in the chair. Clerk Robertson read the minutes of the preceding meeting, which were approved, and Treasurer Waterman's monthly report was read and accepted and the following bills allowed: Barrington Fire Department, attendance at meetings for past three months $49.25; Fred Jahnholtz, salary 45.00; Edward Peters, salary 50.00; Wiseman & Brand, catch-basin 4.75; William Gleske, labor 9.75; A. Schaeble, brackets for town hall 3.75; John Jahnke, labor with team 39.50; Barrington Review, printing, 2.25; Lamey & Company, material 1.67; Public Service Company, pumping 75.00; Public Service Company, street lighting 139.99; Total $419.98.

Ewing & Stone presented a bill of $150.00 for engineers service in connection with the septic tank work, but the trustees voted to pay only $100.00 of the amount this month. This first gets a percentage of money expended for their work and will draw altogether between five and six hundred dollars when the work is completed. Up to this time they have received over half of this amount.

The sum of $10.00 was appropriated to assist the local fire department in sending a delegate to the state fireman's convention at Ottawa, which will be held January 14, 15 and 16. It has been the custom to allow something for this work for some years, but nothing had been given by the board for the last two years.

E. C. Thies of the Public Service Company asked the board to sign a contract authorizing the installation of a meter for measuring the current used by the moving picture machines. He said that the company had agreed to furnish the village with current for light only, and that other current must be paid for. The board gave the president authority to sign the contract providing Mr. Gray, who runs the picture shows, was willing to pay the additional rent which they would be obliged to charge. He has been paying three dollars a night but the rental will be raised to four dollars. Mr. Gray had some time previously asked the board for extra chairs for the hall, and this the trustees decided to do if he pays the new rate.

William Grunau presented a bill for digging up and replacing drainage tiles on his property which the gas company had disturbed. He stated that the company had laid its service pipe directly through the tiles, causing them to become clogged. The board recommended that the bill be presented to the gas company.

Trustee Lagroschille complained that the Main street and Walnut street railroad crossings were exceedingly dangerous at night after the fogmen were off duty, and the other members of the board were of the same opinion. It was finally decided to have the president and village attorney confer with the railroad officials in an attempt to secure extra fogmen so that one would be on duty at each crossing until 10 or 11 o'clock at night. The company has been guarding the crossings here at much less expense than the other towns along the line and little difficulty is anticipated in securing the extra fogmen.

NORGE CLUB PLANS BIG SKI MEET

January 26 Piled for Date of Ski Tourney at Cary. Course is Tried This Week.

The Norge Ski club of Chicago is making preparations to stage an international all-star ski tournament at Walleck's hill at Fox river grove on Sunday, January 26. This exciting winter sport has many enthusiasts and the annual meet of the Norge club at Walleck's hill is always looked forward to with interest by residents of this vicinity and yearly calls out thousands of people. It was feared for a time that there would not be a tournament this year here but the snows of this winter have encouraged the Chicago club to make arrangements for a meet the last Sunday in the month. It was expected that practice work would be started at the local slope today or tomorrow, after which the Chicago stars will embark for the northwest country to compete in all the scheduled contests.

A meeting held for January 25 at Walleck's hill, Wisconsin, has enlisted the services of several noted professionals and amateurs and practically all of those competing will come to Cary for the events of the following day. National Professional Champion Lars Hachek of Chapeau, Pa.; Wisconsin champion of Carl Solberg, national amateur champion of St. Paul; Barney Riley, Haggar (Imsvold) and Sven Welhaven of the Norge club, and Torje Jensen are a few of the best known performers who expect to participate at Cary.

A New Year's Sentiment

In a letter to school superintendents and teachers, F. G. Hartz, state superintendent of schools says: "Here is a little New Year's sentiment which will do us no harm and may do us some good. "Flu me for my work and for my play. Let me both alike rejoice and create me. Fill all my days with something to do and something to be. "Save me from greed. Let me feel the joy both of getting and giving, of having and of sharing. "Strip me of all cant and seeming. Give me courage to be simple and plain and honest. Let me succeed. But, win or lose, let not success exalt me nor failure cast me down. "Keep my temper sweet and my thoughts clean. Save me from the curse of bitterness and hate. Create within me a spirit of good will and good fellowship. "Give me faith. Let me see and know the truth without losing the dream or the vision. Let me enter into and share the immortality of thoughts and deeds and character."

Young People Wedded in June

C. E. Billings of the Waukegan farms and Miss Nettie Jahnholtz of this village have surprised their friends by the announcement that they were married on the ninth day of last June. Miss Jahnholtz is a daughter of Fred Jahnholtz and is a sweet and accomplished young lady. She has been an operator at the local telephone exchange for some time. Mr. Billings has been employed on the Hawthorne farms for four years and occupies the position of assistant manager. He has made a very favorable impression upon all those with whom he has become acquainted with his hard business dealings with since his stay here, and he and his bride are receiving sincere, although necessarily tardy congratulations. In their intention now to reside in this village for a while until Mr. Billings can make arrangements to secure a residence on the farms. The board adjourned until the next regular meeting without transacting any other business of importance.

DR. FRANK M. CELLEY IS DEAD

Cuba Township Resident Was Musician of Note—Practiced Dentistry at One Time.

Dr. Frank M. Celley, whose demise occurred at his home five miles north of the village of Barrington, December 31, 1912, was a native of Vermont. He was born in Bridgewater, that state, seventy-four years ago. Having decided on the practice of dentistry, he attended until his graduation, the dental department of Tufts' college in Boston. In 1878 he came to Chicago and established himself in the practice of his profession. This he continued until about two years ago, when failing health compelled him to discontinue and since that time he has lived on his farm. May 1, 1867, he was united in marriage to Miss Lois Hastings of Rochester, Vermont. Besides his wife he leaves two sons, Lewis S., living on the home place, and Benjamin F., of California, and a daughter, Mrs. Alice Elsie Clark of Wilmette. There are also several grandchildren.

Mr. Celley, in addition to his training as a dentist, had taken time to gratify his taste for music and became an accomplished performer on the violin. The funeral services were conducted at the house on Sunday, January 6, 1913, and were in charge of Rev. O. F. Mattison, pastor of the Methodist church in Barrington. Mrs. Charles Thies and Miss Myrtle Plagge sang several selections. The remains were carried for interment to Woodstock, where the Masonic brotherhood conducted the burial services.

SCHOOLS PLACED ON A CITY BASIS

Superintendent Tobin Standardizes Institutions in Cook County—New Methods Are Adopted.

The last of a series of four important steps for standardizing the rural schools of Cook county has been taken as announced by County Superintendent E. J. Tobin. As a result, he declares that the county schools under his superintendency hold the unique position of comprising the only rural system in the United States wherein certain standards are required after the manner of the schools of the larger cities.

This last step consists of a requirement that every new teacher applying for a position must have been a cadet for five months. Under this system a board of directors may or may not pay such cadets anything as they see fit. But the "new beginner" will not be permitted to have the management of a school or room without supervision. The three other steps taken by Mr. Tobin in the last year are: The adoption of the Illinois state course of study. The fixing of a minimum salary, $50 a month, for rural teachers. An application to the county board for the appointment of a group supervisor of the country schools.

Relative to these reforms, Mr. Tobin uttered a severe criticism of the antiquated system that has characterized country schools, he declared, from time immemorial. "It is hard enough to take young girls, graduates from our high schools, without any training in the art of teaching, and send them forth to teach in schools that have a competent superintendent to supervise and teach them the most improved methods of instruction and discipline," he said. "It is almost original to permit the children in our rural and small village schools to be put under youthful, inexperienced persons, with no one to guide, supervise or direct their efforts. In the rural schools there have been absolutely no requirements. New teachers, who have never been assigned a lesson or conducted a recitation, have been given certificates, assigned to schools and told to go to work and instruct the children without an hour of skilled preparation in the art of teaching."

REV. W. A. CROSS IS DEAD

Member of the Rock River Conference Drops Dead at His Home in Crystal Lake

Rev. William A. Cross, at various times during the past 10 years pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church at Wauconda, Cary, Crystal Lake and McHenry, dropped dead Friday at his home in Crystal Lake. The Rev. Mr. Cross had been a member of the Rock River Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church since 1876, and was put upon the retired list at his own request last fall. During the three years previous he had charge of the Methodist church at McHenry, although making his home at Crystal Lake. During his 35 years of active ministry, the entire time of which was spent in the district of the Rock River conference, he had charge of a great many parishes and enjoyed a wide acquaintance throughout the entire district. He was an earnest and energetic worker and his family and friends may find consolation in the assurance that he left this life with the knowledge of a duty well performed.

Mr. Cross was born February 22, 1838, and had lived in this part of Illinois most of his ministerial life. He was a widower when he went to Wauconda and during his stay there met Mrs. Fannie Bates who was at that time treasurer of the church and the attachment being mutual, they were united in marriage twenty years ago. Five grown up children, two sons and three daughters were present at the funeral Sunday. A short service was held at the home and later regular funeral services were conducted at the Richmond Methodist church of which he had been pastor twenty-five years ago, after which interment was made in the family burial lot beside the grave of his first wife who had preceded him in death about 15 years ago. Dr. Frank Shesst, district superintendent, the ladies district performed the ceremony.

WINS AGAIN AT POULTRY SHOWS

F. L. Waterman Takes More Prizes With His Buff Wyandotte at Elgin and Waukegan.

F. L. Waterman returned this afternoon from Elgin where he has been attending the fourteenth annual exhibition of the Elgin Poultry association. He entered 22 of his Buff Wyandottes at this exhibit and captured prizes for the third, second and third hens, second, fourth and sixth cockerels and first pen. He was also awarded the state silver cup for the best display and other lesser special prizes.

At the show given by the Illinois Poultry Fanciers' association at Waukegan this week he made six entries, with the following results: first and second cockerels, first and second hen and first and second pullets. Thus it is seen that each was a prize winner. He also received at this show a special ribbon for the best display.

Mr. Waterman entered two birds at a show at Louisville, Kentucky, which was held two weeks ago, but has as yet received no word of the results. He also has two entered at the show of the National Buff Wyandotte society which is being held at Toledo, Ohio, this week. This is the big show of the general Thomas W. Wadsworth raisers and if he succeeds in bringing away any prizes it will be proof conclusive that his fowls are indeed top-notchers. This has already been shown however by the great success he has had at these other shows. One of the birds which he has entered at the Toledo show was the first prize cockerel at the Great Mid-West poultry show recently held in Chicago. Mr. Waterman has sold this cockerel to Gerald Williams of Cleveland, Ohio, a well known poultry fancier, for $100.

HOLD JOINT INSTALLATION

Grand Army Post and Woman's Relief Corps Installed Their Officers Yesterday

Pretty and most impressive was the joint installation of the officers of the Grand Army Post and the Woman's Relief Corps which was held at the village hall yesterday afternoon. H. H. Hubbard, chaplain of General H. Thomas post, acted as installing officer for the G. A. R. and Past Commander W. H. Rose of the same post performed the duties of officer of the day. In the local post there are 114 members of a once large post, eight of whom were present. Six of the members reside out of town. State Department Junior Vice President Mrs. Alma Arps of Palmette acted as installing officer for the W. R. C. and Mrs. Ezra Cannon assisted as conductor for the day. At the close of the meeting tokens of esteem were presented to Mrs. Ida Bennett, past president, Mrs. Hannah Powers acting as donor for the corps, and to Mesdames Arps and Cannon. Mrs. Grunau acting as donor.

Topics For Commencement Addresses

Many districts adhere tenaciously to the view that high school graduates should speak on some subject either on class night or on commencement evening. Where such a custom prevails, it would not be well for the school authorities to encourage these young people to write and talk on subjects which deal with every-day life? The matter may be given in the form of an essay or oration, or it may be take the form of a debate. Here are just a few suggested topics: How to save our song birds. The birds and the farmer. The value of a tree. Good roads. Keeping the streets clean. My vegetable garden. My first efforts at dressmaking. Money earned in vacation.

Highest Paid County Teacher

So far as this office knows the highest paid one-room country school teacher is Mr. J. C. Knight, of Douglas lake. He receives a salary of $105.00 a month. When country districts thus show their desire for well-qualified, competent teachers by offering wages that will get and keep them, they will have no difficulty in getting and keeping such teachers.

Persons interested in the Men's club banquet will be glad to know that the plans are being made for a fine program of music and toasts in connection with the banquet. The program as now prepared will be sent to the club members. The date will be Lincoln's birthday, February 12.

Later when he came with the money to buy the coat, Mr. Peck had sold it to another party for $6.00. Mr. Kropp felt that the coat belonged to him and that he was entitled to the $2.00 which it brought above the price which Mr. Peck had agreed to sell it to him for. Justice Lines decided that Mr. Kropp, in accordance with the evidence, had not purchased the coat, and dismissed the case.

Sea Washes On Ashore White Life-Savers Take Three From Rigging Two Shattered Vessel—Property Loss $200,000.

Astoria, Ore., Jan. 9.—Death beneath the waves for thirty men while three others clung desperately for hours to the rigging of the one standing mast, as the huge seas were pounding the steamer to pieces beneath them, is the story of the worst maritime disaster that has occurred in the vicinity of the mouth of the Columbia river in many years.

It is the story of the wreck of the Associated Oil company's tank steamer Rosecrans, which went to destruction on the north projection of Peacock Spit, not far from McKenzie Head, the result of the terrific gale Tuesday.

The Rosecrans, carrying a cargo of 30,000 barrels of crude oil, and with a crew of 33 men, sailed from Gaviota, Cal. for the Columbia river on January 3. She arrived off the mouth of the river before daylight Tuesday, but was suspended, lost her bearings in the thick mist and went too far to the north, as she suddenly struck on the north projection of Peacock Spit, opposite the North Head in approximately the same position that the steam schooner Washington lay when her sensational rescue was made by the tug Talley and the crew of the tug Tatham.

The Cape Disappointment life-saving station reported that two of the men clinging to the rigging of the wrecked oil steamer Rosecrans had been rescued. The third man was picked up, but it is feared he will die. Shortly before dark one of the Rosecrans crew was washed ashore at Tlago, Wash., in exhausted condition, but apparently unharmed.

The Rosecrans has been an ill-fated vessel. She was wrecked at Gaviota on August 27, 1912, she caught fire and was burned to the water's edge. On March 12 of the same year she was wrecked at Gaviota, and two of her crew were lost. Built at Glasgow in 1883, the Rosecrans was 235 feet long and registered 2,500 tons. She formerly was an army transport.

The vessel was valued with her cargo at about $200,000.

LEGISLATOR A SUICIDE

CONGRESSMAN WEDEMEYER OF MICHIGAN LEAPS INTO SEA.

Became Ill, Then Violent, on Trip to Panama—Raved Over Failure to Be Re-Elected.

Washington, Jan. 6.—Representative William W. Wedemeyer of Ann Arbor, Mich., who supposedly became ill and was thought to be insane at Columbia, Panama, at the time of President Taft's recent visit to the isthmus, jumped overboard from a ship on which he had been taken to Colombia. His body has not been recovered.

Representative Wedemeyer went to the isthmus with a congressional party at the same time the president visited there. On the voyage from New York he collapsed and was taken first to a sanitarium in Panama and later was put in confinement in a hospital where he became violent and raved about his defeat at the last election. He developed a suicidal tendency and was closely watched. Mr. Wedemeyer's close friends say that a few days before leaving for the isthmus he fell and struck his head on an icy sidewalk. It was not regarded as serious and did not deter him from going with the congressional party.

It was reported that the mental condition of Congressman William W. Wedemeyer, who while insane leaped overboard from the steamer carrying him home from Columbia, Panama, was due largely to a fall he received recently in Washington, his local friends and associates attribute the congressman's breakdown to the strenuous campaign he went through last fall, which resulted in his defeat by S. W. Beaker, Democrat, and his enthusiastic congressional work in general.

Sea Washes On Ashore White Life-Savers Take Three From Rigging Two Shattered Vessel—Property Loss $200,000.

Astoria, Ore., Jan. 9.—Death beneath the waves for thirty men while three others clung desperately for hours to the rigging of the one standing mast, as the huge seas were pounding the steamer to pieces beneath them, is the story of the worst maritime disaster that has occurred in the vicinity of the mouth of the Columbia river in many years.

It is the story of the wreck of the Associated Oil company's tank steamer Rosecrans, which went to destruction on the north projection of Peacock Spit, not far from McKenzie Head, the result of the terrific gale Tuesday.

The Rosecrans, carrying a cargo of 30,000 barrels of crude oil, and with a crew of 33 men, sailed from Gaviota, Cal. for the Columbia river on January 3. She arrived off the mouth of the river before daylight Tuesday, but was suspended, lost her bearings in the thick mist and went too far to the north, as she suddenly struck on the north projection of Peacock Spit, opposite the North Head in approximately the same position that the steam schooner Washington lay when her sensational rescue was made by the tug Talley and the crew of the tug Tatham.

NEWS and GOSSIP OF WASHINGTON

Distinguished Children Play in Capital Parks

WASHINGTON—Washington is full of parks and the parks are full of a perfectly democratic bunch of youngsters, but nevertheless probably the most distinguished aggregation of little folks to be found in the world, certainly the most distinguished to be found in the parks of any American city.

Among the children in whom everybody is interested are the two little granddaughters of William Jennings Bryan. Young William Jennings, Junior, is in Washington attending the law course of Georgetown university and living with his young wife and his two baby girls, Mary S. and Helen V. Bryan, out on Biltmore street.

Another very very distinguished little lady is the daughter of an ancestor, past and present, is chubby little Edith Grant, child of Lieutenant and Mrs. U. S. Grant II. She is the great granddaughter of President Grant, the granddaughter of Gen. Fred Dent Grant and Senator Elihu Root, Mrs. Grant being the daughter of the New York senator.

No little girl in Washington attracts quite so much attention as does little Millicent Chang, granddaughter of the Chinese minister and the only female member of the minister's family who wears American dress. But when little Miss Millicent goes for her daily walk in the park there is no smarter looking little lady, and with her round, rosy face and her intensely dark eyes she is a mighty attractive youngster.

Washington doesn't see much of the McLean baby for its parents are its deathly fear of this being kidnaped, letters threatening such a thing having been received by them two years ago in Newport. For some time thereafter the little heir to all John Walsh's millions went out with a nursemaid and a guard, his baby carriage being stowed in the rear of the fellow locked inside of what literally was a cage. He is not among the children who run unhampered and free through the parks, but the gossiping nursemaids who speak every known language under the sun.

Cupid Goes Out Window at Sight of Policeman

AS REV. W. J. Howard was about to say "I pronounce you man and wife" fifteen-year-old Elizabeth Walker and Frank Tolson, nineteen years old, the other evening at the clergyman's home, a policeman entered the room and arrested them.

The bridegroom and Elizabeth, with tears in their eyes, begged the policeman to wait a few minutes before arresting the bride. They showed him the license and the ring, but he remained obdurate.

The next day the principals in the near-wedding scene appeared before Judge De Lacy in the juvenile court, and they stoutly maintained that they intended to be married anyhow.

It developed in the hearing in court that a previous attempt to marry Tolson had resulted in Elizabeth being arrested on a charge of incriminating for which she was placed on probation for three months.

The judge tried to show her that her life, married to young Tolson, would not be all roses.

"Can you make bread, Elizabeth?" the court inquired.

"Yes, sir," she replied, hopefully "discuta, too."

"Yes, sir."

Surprise in Laws

MAGEL DISCOVERS A TARIFF BOARD HAS EXISTED SINCE THE YEAR 1888.

WAS FIRST BUREAU OF LABOR

Its Duties and Powers of Investigating Production and Prices Here and Abroad Now Belong to Bureau of Commerce.

By GEORGE CLINTON.

Washington—An extraordinary disclosure has come through a careful reading of the laws of the land by Charles Nagel, secretary of commerce and labor. It has just been brought publicly to notice that since the year 1888 the government has had the power through one of its departments to investigate the production and prices here and abroad. It is a fact that the administration had to get a tariff board and with all the excitement of debate attending the attempt, and with the final killing of the tariff board by congress, there has been actually in existence a tariff board with full powers which never existed previously was unknown to the law makers.

Washington is inclined to laugh over the situation, but it hardly is a laughing matter. For 25 years the executive has had at its command what amounts to a tariff commission. It has it yet and the fact is now recognized whether or not congress will take advantage of the newly discovered power of government is a question of doubt, for it is believed that it is the intention of the law makers when they passed the act to go ahead after their own manner to make up a new tariff bill.

Bureau of Labor's Duty.

In the spring of 1888 Grover Cleveland, when he was president of the United States, gave his approval to a law establishing what was known as the bureau of labor. In the act establishing this bureau was a provision which read like this:

"To ascertain at as early a date as possible, and whenever industrial changes shall make it essential, the effect of producing articles of the dutiable in the United States, in leading countries where such articles are produced, by fully specified units of production, under a classification showing the different elements of cost, or approximate cost of such articles of production, including the wages paid in such industries a day, week, month or year, or the piece and hours employed a day, and the profits of manufacturers and producers of such articles; and the comparative effect of such tariffs, and other combinations of capital, business operations or labor have on production and prices."

When the department of commerce and labor was established the bureau of labor was merged into it, but the provision giving the tariff investigating power, for that was what it amounted to, remained as a part of the organic law of the land its enforcement, or rather its operation, became a part of the duty of the department of commerce and labor.

At the session of congress last summer the bureau of manufactures and the bureau of statistics of the department of commerce and labor were consolidated into a bureau to be known as the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce. The section of the bill following the provision for the consolidation of the two bureaus, "the duties of the department of commerce and labor or bureau of labor continued in section 7 of the act approved June 15, 1888, that established the same are hereby transferred and shall hereafter be discharged by the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce."

Congress last summer did away with the tariff board. When it consolidated the two bureaus named above an intimation was made that the resulting bureau would be of service in collecting tariff data, but there was no intimation at all that the power to collect it had been in the department of commerce and labor all along.

An appropriation will be necessary to give the department of commerce and labor, through its proper bureau, the means to do the work of tariff material collecting, which it has the authority of law to do. The question is now whether the appropriation will be forthcoming.

Mere Discard in Sight.

Before this time it has been told how the Democratic majority does not intend to recognize any third party as such in the coming election. Now it seems that another element of possible discord and resentment is to be added to the list of things to be avoided with this party division matter when the extra session meets. It is said that a number of Progressive-Republicans who must not be confused with Progressives elected as such, and who represent a new party, are soon to confer with a view to decide as to how they will vote in the coming election called by the Republican leaders. These Progressive-Republicans are all were elected as Republicans, but for five or six years those of them who have been in the house that long have been strictly Democrats as are the followers of Theodore Roosevelt in the last campaign, and who have up all further thought of calling themselves Republicans.

If the Progressive-Republicans shall refuse to caucus with the Republicans, and shall caucus by themselves, there will be three parties in the next house of Representatives, in addition to the fourth party party, the Democracy.

Four Party Groups.

It is recognized here as probable that an attempt may be made in the Progressive-Republican caucus to get the members to agree to act with the Progressives in most matters as against the Republicans. An attempt to secure such action it is believed by many members of congress will be resented and repudiated by some of the Progressive-Republicans, and the caucus will be broken up. In the case of certain happenings in the last six or eight months, dislike the Progressives more than they do the Republicans, and they are not to be believed by non-partisan observers here that the Wisconsin Progressive-Republicans, for instance, will continue to caucus with an intimation with the Progressives. The reason for this is at once apparent to anyone who has followed the development of the campaign and of the events which led up to the virtual elimination of Mr. La Follette as a factor in the campaign for the presidential nomination.

The one surviving Progressive-Republican in the Kansas delegation in congress, Victor Murdock, it is said, is likely to hold aloof from the Republican caucus, and will probably be a member of the coming situation, there will be four party groups in the next house of representatives, Democrats, Republicans, Progressives, each group consisting by itself, and each outlying its own government policies. There has been some discussion within the memory of present members of congress.

Capital Society Anxious.

In this holiday season with congress adjourned, Washington people, and particularly those who are known as society folk, are discussing a good deal, and some of them are rather excited, over the fact that Wilson's intimation that he is likely to do away with a good many of the at present recognized White House receptions, and that the winter in the capital whether Mr. Wilson has been hinted, intends to drop from the entertainment calendar the four great semi-public receptions which have been given by every winter in Washington for years.

In what he is reported to have said Mr. Wilson set it forth that he thought the handshaking receptions which were in the nature of a social affair were well might be dispensed with, Washington says that the four semi-public receptions are in a great measure the heart of the winter. If anyway society here would miss these functions sorely.

No one in the capital believes that the president-elect will care, or perhaps be bored, by the reception of old in this case, to cut from the list of White House receptions the one which is held every New Year's day and to which the public with its interest in race, color, creed or politics is invited.

One Really Democratic Affair.

It has been said by foreign visitors to America that the New Year's reception at the White House is the only really democratic affair known to the White House series of entertainments, receptions and dinners. It is true that anybody who will can attend in the reception of a certain mansion on New Year's day, and so, therefore, in a broad sense this is the most democratic reception which the president gives. Washington society, however, is not so sure of the continuance of the other four receptions, declares that while they are not "free for all," they are about as democratic as they can be made without so overcrowding the White House that the holding of the receptions would be virtually impossible.

The diplomatic reception, which is the first of the series of four receptions of the winter, is a recognized institution and the foreigners hold it as a fitting recognition of their presence in the capital and of the hospitality which it is necessary in a diplomatic way to show to all those from other governments who hold "letters of credit."

The three receptions which follow the diplomatic affair and which it makes up the quartette of the winter, are the receptions of the congressional and the army and navy receptions. Washington seems to agree with Mr. Wilson that the president of the United States rightly might decline to receive the members of the diplomatic corps which come to Washington to see the sights and which go to the White House solely for the purpose of taking a look at the president and of shaking hands with him.

So far as the White House receptions are concerned, however, Washington seems to believe that the actual holding of the diplomatic, congressional, and the army and navy will be continued and that with them will stay the New Year's day reception which every winter will still enter the White House portals to greet the president, his wife and the cabinet officers and their wives.

Wanted Only $20,000,000 of Uncle Sam's Money

WHEN a Chicago attorney walked into the office of the secretary of the treasury the other day Francis W. Taylor, Secretary of the private secretary, was prepared to do anything in his power for him. Chicago is Mr. MacVeagh's home town, and besides, Mr. Taylor had been called by the caller as a prominent attorney.

The private secretary managed to keep from showing his alarm, however, when the visitor said in a matter of fact way that he wanted a check for $20,000,000, which he declared the government owed him.

"The secretary is very busy and I would not dare ask a big affair like this," Mr. Taylor said. "If you will call later in the day I will be the check ready for you."

The man promised to do so and departed. He did not return. Mr.

Taylor telegraphed friends in Chicago and was informed that his visitor was not a client.

"That is only one of many queer experiences I have had since I have been with Mr. MacVeagh," Mr. Taylor said. "My connections fund furnishes some odd episodes. One day a Catholic priest came in and handed me $1,500 in bills. This is for the confessional fund, he said 'I can give you other details.'"

"On another occasion we received a money order for $22,000. No word of explanation accompanied this contribution. Only the other morning I received a letter with ten cents in stamps. The writer, a woman, said she had used five two-cent stamps which had not been cancelled and wished to make restitution. We often get letters including a penny. Most of these, I believe, are from jokers."

"There is one man who faithfully sends $10 on the first of every month. He is evidently employed in the Portsmouth (N. H.) navy yard. He wrote saying he had mislaid several hundred dollars of the government's money and would send $10 monthly until it was squared and his conscience cleared."

Society Women Roll and Crawl for Good Figures

PROMINENT women rolling on the floor to aid the suppleness and beauty of their figure; prominent government officials seeking to reduce their weight by the same means; can be seen daily in many of the best homes of the national capital, if one could only see some of the prominent society folk within the sanctity of their private lives, according to Dr. William C. Woodward, health officer of the district.

Not only do many of the people do this, Doctor Woodward says, but they likewise derive much of the benefit which they seek by this strange method, and it is this habit which does much to give Washington women the same heavy, well-formed figures.

Another prominent physician of Washington, whose large practice among society folk gives him a great insight into their private lives, differs with Doctor Woodward. Dr. Harry

"This is awful hard work."

"What is your name?"

A. Seltwasser, attending physician at many of the embassies and legations, who was recently decorated by Francis Joseph, emperor of Austria, for his services to Baron Hengstler, the retiring dean of the diplomatic corps, is opposed to the rolling method of developing the grace of the figure. He favors crawling on hands and knees. This method may not reduce the weight of the body, but it rolls the muscles on the floor, but it tends to strengthen the muscles of the back and to add grace to the lines of the waist.

THE PARCELS POST.

Although it has been but a week since the parcels post has become a reality and it will be some time before the department can determine positively how successful the project will be, its popularity with the people is quite evident. That it not only furnishes an economical means of transportation for a great number of people, but that it is a quick and safe distributor is already apparent.

The REVIEW has been a supporter of the parcels post since the project was first broached and has presented arguments in its favor upon numerous occasions. We are not entirely satisfied with the present system but recognize the fact that it is now in its embryo stages, and predict for it ultimate success. The people are not yet familiar with its rules and regulations, hence cannot use it to the utmost advantage, but soon will become versed in the workings of the system and its economy and convenience will result in great good to a great many. Two things, the abolition of the zone system and of the special stamps, must come, we believe, before the parcels post can be said to have been perfected.

There have been many who have feared that its establishment would revolutionize business and drive the small merchant to the wall. The same hue and cry was raised when the postal savings banks were first discussed. But in due course of time we will find that business will proceed along the same old lines with which everyone is familiar. In fact, the small merchants in the country towns should be among those to derive the greatest benefit from the parcels post since nearly every rural home has close connection with the country store by the use of the telephone. The farmer or his wife can call on the merchant, have him put goods in the postoffice, and they will be delivered by the rural carrier the next morning. The price of transportation will be less than it would have cost the farmer to come to town after the goods, as well as resulting in a great saving of time for him during the busy seasons.

One of the most successful methods by which the merchant can gain through use of the parcels post is by advertising. By displaying his wares attractively in the home paper, the local merchant can virtually place his store directly before the purchaser. Every day can be made bargain day through the parcels post.

It also places the merchant on an equal plane with the large mail order house as it enables him to order single items, which his customer may want and he may not have in stock, and have them delivered as quickly and cheaply as could the mail order house.

Farmers can use the post to advantage in disposing of their products direct to the consumers. In England, where the parcels post has been in operation for some time, its business possibilities are so well understood that the newspapers run departments with headings that read "Bargains by Post."

The farm produces eggs, butter, fruit, etc., and the advertisements which all the English newspapers tell her the city consumer can get such goods direct from their sources. The same newspaper columns tell the farmer how he can get his sugar and coffee and tea, and such other staples as he needs, from the tradesmen in his nearest city.

It is not assuming too much to predict that it will not be long before Americans will be making the parcels post a market place, as have their English cousins, to the mutual advantage of producer and consumer, buyer and seller.

SHORT MOTOR TOUR

Ennui Burdened Man of Society Takes Up Human Interest Matters.

By ALVAN JORDAN GARTH.

"Disappointed, Gordon?"

"With everything in life generally, was thoroughly in a tone of snail."

"Not including Miss Marcia Vansant, of course?" Insulted Ned Darrow, a trace of mockery in his voice.

Dale Gordon did not reply. He winced slightly. Miss Marcia Vansant was a sensitive topic with the young man just at present. He had danced attendance on the queenly beauty half the season. She had come down to Seagrave at her royal request, and this was the second day he had motored to the train to find no eager, delighted lady love, as at times he pictured her.

They were not as yet engaged, but as Ned Darrow and all the social world of Seagrave knew, the proud equine had set the net for the wealthy young city broker. A week at Seagrave would settle the affair. Ned had told mutual friends, and confidentially he stated he was sorry for it.

"What you want, Gordon, is something in life to interest you," he now said. "Dwelling the time away at clubs, saloons, and summer resorts kills a fellow's vitality. Try something for a change."

"An what, for instance?" challenged Gordon.

"Human interest, philanthropy—why, say, the very thing! See here—look yonder."

Ned pointed to a young girl who sat on one of the station benches. Her eyes were fixed sadly down the rails. There were tear stains on her pretty cheeks, and something so unexpressed.

He's Game.

I like the man who takes his medicine and grins, the man who holds not his ancestors for his sins, the man who stands and squares his shoulders to the blame—he may be wrong, he may be guilty, but he's game. I like the man who, when he's had his bellward dance, is strong enough to match with Fate for one more chance; the man who can come back, though bruken, scorched and lame—he may be wrong, he may be guilty, but he's game.

AMBITION TALKS

BY HARLAN READ
NO MAN IS USELESS WHILE HE CAN RENDER SERVICE TO ANOTHER.

In the state of pure savagery no man depended upon others. Today there is scarcely one man in ten millions who does not depend definitely upon the services of others for part of his subsistence. In return it is necessary for him to repay in kind.

The art of serving others has become the science of existence. Sometimes this service is direct and personal. In other cases a man renders it by becoming part of a vast industrial machine. But always it is enabling.

It is only when a man attempts to reap where he has not sown that he becomes a parasite—and to be a parasite is to be a criminal, whether the unearned has come through inheritance or burglary.

To have the rights to eat you must earn your food, and this means service. Even in exchange to those who serve you.

To earn bread by the sweat of your brow is not only necessary; it is magnificent. It is the badge of civilization for men and nations are progressive only in proportion as they labor.

There is no surer death-sentence to civilization and commercial enterprise than a warm climate where men may live without effort; and to revert quickly to the baboon and the ring-tail it is necessary only to remain idle.

The Robin Hood and Jesse James of history were different from the idle rich of today only in the fact that their methods were more romantic. The idea is the same. It is to get something without giving anything in return.

Service means progress, and the man who grows are the ones who make themselves useful. Judged from the cashier's standpoint, some of these are overvalued and some are ill-valued; but, measured by a standard that is more important, their reward is automatically complete.

The man who wants more than he earns is a hog. The one who wants something without earning anything is at least a thief—and both are fundamentally heathen and contemptible.

The only noble ideal of life is the ideal of service.

bly mournful in her pose that even Gordon, chivalrous and gentle always with the opposite sex, was at once interested.

"Looks to be in trouble," he remarked.

"She is. Poor little thing!" said Ned. "She has been trying to support a widowed mother by taking an art class at the seminary here. It seems she received a rush telegram an hour ago telling her that her mother was seriously sick, and that if she hoped to see her again in life she must take the first train for Brookville. She missed it by four minutes, no other train until eight o'clock this evening, and there she sits, eating her heart out. There's my trial. Good-by."

Ned flashed out of view. Gordon stood studying the forlorn girl for a few moments. Then he went straight up to the bench.

"Excuse me, miss," he said, lifting his hat, "my friend just told me of your misfortune in missing your train."

The girl started, looked up, and then drew back a little shyly. The open, sympathetic eyes meeting her own seemed to inspire her with the belief that the interest of her owner was genuine.

"It is so heart-breaking!" she sobbed. "My mother is dying, and there is no way of reaching her before midnight."

"Brookville cannot be over seventy-five miles by a cross-country route," said Gordon. "That is no task for my machine. Come, miss, cheer up. We'll try to remedy your trouble."

As he pointed to his touring car the young girl at once understood him.

"My mother is so kind," she murmured, as Gordon helped her to a seat in the machine.

Good roads and fair weather made the first stage of the trip pleasant and comfortable. A farmer yelled after them as they whirled down a country road as hour later, but Gordon had not caught the import of his call. A minute afterwards, at a sharp curve, he straightened up with a thrill. Recent rains had eaten into a narrow stretch of turnpike with deep ditches on either side. As they fairly flew along great masses of earth were disturbed and rolled down. At one spot a wheel went over the edge. To attempt to stop was to invite disaster. With the power applied to the last notch, the machine fairly skimmed the roadway.

A great exhalation of relief left Gordon's lips as the machine struck a safer thoroughfare. He turned now to glance at his passenger. She was pale as death, but she smiled mutely up at him.

"That was a narrow grass," he said. "Were you frightened?"

"How could I be," she replied, "with you, who have so bravely tried to help a poor, friendless girl?"

"Do not delay to thank me," said Gordon, as two hours later their auto stopped in front of the widow's home at Brookville. "Get to your mother at once, Miss Barton."

She had told him something of her life history during the trip. Her name was Eunice Barton. An earnest, good young man came out of the house while Gordon was getting his machine ready for the return trip. He seized both hands of his sister's timely friend.

"I cannot find words to thank you," he said fervently. "You have saved my dear mother's life. She was sinking fast, and the delusion that some one had stolen Eunice away from her, the doctor said, was distracting her dangerously. She just smiled and sank into sister's arms like a happy child. The doctor says the crisis is past, and thank you and—bless you!"

At eight o'clock that evening fate smiled that Gordon, passing an open window at the Vansant home, overheard these words:

"It's time you ceased trifling with your chances, Marcia. Mr. Gordon will not stand your coquetry much longer."

"Oh, I can bring him to my feet when I choose," was the confident reply of the impetuous beauty to her messenger.

Gordon turned on his heel, and Marcia waited in vain for her expected caller that evening. If there was any consolation for Gordon, as he thought over affairs in general that night it was memory of the glad little face that had looked up so gratefully at him when she stepped into the automobile stopped at Brookville.

Gordon wrote a brief note to Marcia the next morning. In a very formal manner he announced a prospective motor tour, and indicated that it would end with a resumption of business duties in the city.

That motor tour was not very extended. Gordon felt it his duty to learn how Eunice's mother was getting along. He was actually glad when the auto broke down near Brookville. He got up at the town hotel that night, and called at the Barton home the next day.

That was only the first of many pleasant hours spent with Eunice. Her mother was convalescing rapidly, and Gordon convinced her that auto rides would hasten her recovery. When the mother could not go the daughter did.

There came the crowning moment in those two lives when wifely eyes met the challenge of honest, earnest ones. It was at the gate of the little cottage, and Gordon said:

"Does your mother still worry over her old fear of your being stolen away?"

"Oh, no," replied Eunice innocently. "That was only a passing delusion."

"Suppose that some one should really steal you away?" suggested Gordon.

"Who would do that with poor little me?" laughed Eunice.

Dale Gordon told the fluttering, blushing girl who would, the chance given. With her head nestling on his breast, protecting her forehead, she whispered back lovingly:

"You do not need to steal me away, Dale. I would go anywhere in the world with you."

Busy Night After the Election.

"We'll do it," said the landlord of the Skoedee Tavern, addressing the encyclopedia agent. "I am afraid you can't do much business here, but at this election the people who might be expected to appreciate your books are all otherwise engaged. Pip Maullin has set out to roll a peasant eight miles with a toothpick and won't be back for some time. Claud Fidd will commence in a few minutes to parade solemnly up and down all day with a portrait of Taft displayed wrong side up on his back. Judge Rambsbottom is heading a procession of twenty-eight consecutive wheelbarrows, each with a successful politician and an unsuccessful one pushing it, or vice versa—for nobody really knows who gets the worst of it in a wheelbarrow race—twenty-five or thirty voters are now busy with the same quantity of hats for an equal number of other gentlemen, and practically all the rest of the voters are either engaged in the usual after-election pursuits, I don't suppose you can get their undivided attention."

Started Important Industry.

Living on a pension in London is W. H. Wickham, the man responsible for the introduction of rubber trees in India and the rubber plantations in the agricultural department of East India sent Wickham to gather the seed of the Para rubber tree in Brazil. Wickham lived in the jungle with the natives and won their confidence. Slowly he collected seeds until he had 75,000 of them. He put them in bags and smuggled them aboard a ship, which was short of cargo and funds. That was the beginning of the rubber growing industry in India, and now millions of dollars are made annually from the rubber plantations in Ceylon, Malaya and other East Indian provinces. Wickham ran the risk of a long term in prison for a Brazilian law prohibited the removal of seeds from the country.

Statue That Sprang Up in Night.

In London, where one of the most luxuriant and beautiful parks in the world, the Kensington Gardens, is a vast playground for children, the fairies' own month of May was celebrated this year by a very odd statue of Peter Pan, the boy who would not grow up, prettily sitting on an ancient tree-trunk and blowing his pipe, which whirled the birds and squirrels and held mice out to listen, was set up in a single night and when the little children came next day to play they believed that the beautiful image of the little boy who would not grow up at male-believe was left by the fairy folk themselves. And who would be so giddy grown up as to tell them any different?

The statue, presented by Mr. J. M. Harris, author of the story, "Peter Pan," is of exquisite beauty. The inscription is: "Peter Pan, Friend of the Fairies and Little Children."—The Christian Herald.

Wise Man.

Once upon a time a wise man passed a letter full of beautiful sentences, and at the end he wrote a line, heavily underlined: "Burn this letter." Then, being a wise man, he took his own advice and burned the letter himself.

Improved Roads

Legislature to consider new law for building and maintaining highways

With the assembling of the Illinois legislature the good roads question comes to the forefront as one of the important topics which will be up for discussion during the session. It is doubtful if there is a member of either house who is not in favor of legislation similar to that in other states which have forged ahead in the matter of building public highways while Illinois has stood still.

Governor Duane and the Democratic members of the legislature stand pledged to improvement of highways by a plank in the Democratic state platform. The Progressive members also stand pledged to good roads legislation by their platform. Republican members of both houses almost without exception pledged themselves to good roads during the recent campaign, as did the Socialist members.

With this general sentiment for good roads it is but on all sides that the question will be considered on a non-partisan basis by the legislature and that members of all parties will not hold a measure which will raise Illinois from her position as twenty-fourth state in the Union, considered from the standpoint of road improvement, to the station which her natural resources and her progressive population demand.

A voluminous report on the road situation in the state will be made to the legislature by a committee which has been at work on the subject for two years. Homer J. Tice of Greenview is chairman of this committee and the other members are Logan Hay, John M. Chamberlain, William H. MacLean, Albert E. Laley, C. S. Hearn, H. T. Ireland, R. S. Jones, H. C. Smith and B. M. Mitchell. The committee was appointed by the Forty-seventh general assembly and has made an exhaustive study of the subject.

Some startling facts showing the effects of bad roads were reported to the committee by the rural mail carriers of Illinois. There are 2,264 rural mail carriers in the state. The United States mail authorities co-operated with the legislative committee in urging the mail carriers to answer a list of several questions which were sent out by the committee. Altogether 2,734 rural mail carriers answered the questions. Their routes cover 45,235 of the 94,000 miles of public highway in the state.

Perhaps the most amazing fact reported by the mail carriers is that in some counties of the state the roads are impassable to vehicles carrying a load of one and one-half tons more than one-third of the year. A summary of the whole state shows that on an average of 69.3 days of the year it is a hardship for the rural carriers and their horses to travel over the roads and that on an average 16.4 days of the year the roads are practically unusable for vehicles loaded with one and a half ton load of corn or other farm product.

Analyzing by counties, the reports as to the number of days on which travel is seriously handicapped show a wide range of variation. The following lists show the counties from which the greatest and least interruption to travel is reported.

Greatest Amount of Interruption.

County	Average number of days reported	Maximum number of days reported
Adams	81.1	96.6
Alexander	100.0	120.0
Franklin	81.1	96.6
Hardin	80.9	97.7
Jackson	86.4	101.1
Jersey	10.0	10.0
Madison	15.0	20.0
Marion	27.1	32.1
Monroe	15.0	20.0
Perry	27.1	32.1
Pulaski	15.0	20.0
Scott	15.0	20.0
White	15.0	20.0
Williamson	15.0	20.0

Least Amount of Interruption.

County	Average number of days reported	Maximum number of days reported
DePage	15.0	20.0
Hamilton	15.0	20.0
Henderson	15.0	20.0
Kane	15.0	20.0
Lawrence	15.0	20.0
Lee	15.0	20.0
Marshall	15.0	20.0
McHenry	15.0	20.0
Union	15.0	20.0
Winnebago	15.0	20.0

A reading of these figures is argued enough that something should be done at once to pull Illinois out of the mud.

GOOD ROADS HELP MILLS.

Rural letter carriers in Illinois reported to the legislative committee which investigated the road subject that the mail service would be improved on an average of 33.1 per cent. if the roads were improved. In Wehach county the carriers said they could improve the service 55 per cent. if they had better roads, in Calhoun 54 per cent., and in Clinton 53 per cent. The lowest estimate came from Kendall county, with 23 per cent. In the northern half of the state the spring is the worst season for the rural carriers, while in the southern portion the winter is the worst period.

Farm Interests

Edited by HENRY C. BELL, Agricultural Editor, West End, Chicago

Members of the Illinois Farm Bureau and the Illinois State Farm Bureau, and the Illinois State Agricultural Experiment Station, are invited to contribute to the Farm Interests column.

FARMERS' FRIENDS.

What They Say About Feeding the Soil.

'Who are the farmer's friends? His neighbors and his should be and usually are ready to stand by him. His country is continually giving evidence of its parental interest in him. By its laws, his property and life are insured. Opportunity for his education is given by his friend, the state, in an elaborate system of public schools and colleges.

Uncle Sam Helps Farmer. In 1883 Uncle Sam decided that his farmers needed help, for, therefore, voted land to each state to the value of $250,000 to provide maintenance for a college in each state, which should devote its time chief to teaching young farmers the sciences underlying their great calling. To this in 1885 he added maintenance for an agriculture experiment station in each state whose whole work should be to investigate problems of soil, crops, stock, etc.

After careful investigation of soil problems, the directors of these state institutions have published their opinions in bulletins and pamphlets. On one of the 16 Middle West Soil Improvement Committees desired a definite statement on this very important subject.

It addressed a letter to each of the state experiment directors and commissioners of agriculture in the New England and other eastern states, enquiring as to their attitude toward supplying the needs of our soils in the form of fertilizers.

The judicious use of fertilizers has the endorsement of the foremost investigators of soil fertility. Ohio Experiment Station Facts. The practical work of such eminent authority as Dr. Chas. E. Thorne, director of the Ohio experiment station, is of too great importance and value to be omitted. Dr. Thorne for 16 years has made actual farm tests on a rotation of corn, oats, wheat and hay. He has found that the liberal application of suitable complete fertilizers, at an average cost for fertilizer of $19.78 per acre per rotation, gave an average gross return of $124.64 per acre per rotation, or an average net profit of $10.06 per acre per rotation. This is an average profit of over 56 per cent on the money spent for fertilizers.

The judicious use of fertilizers has the endorsement of the foremost investigators of soil fertility. The following statements are from a few of those recorded by the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee in answer to inquiries on this subject. More of these quotations will be given in later issues of this column.

Director Wm. P. Brooks of Massachusetts Agricultural Experiment station says: "It is easy to make almost any of our land slightly productive at once by suitable handling and application of fertilizers. The productivity of the land, and its present fertility can undoubtedly be maintained and increased by judicious use of chemical fertilizers."

Director Jacob F. Lipman of New Jersey Agricultural Experiment station says: "The judicious use of fertilizers benefits the land."

Professor L. A. Clinton of Iowa, Connecticut, says: "The productiveness of this state has increased 20 per cent during the last ten years as a result of the better methods of farming management, the use of selected seed and the judicious use of fertilizers."

Director H. J. Patterson of Maryland Agricultural Experiment station says: "The land in this state has increased in value, approximately $10.00 per acre during the last ten years. Its increased productiveness has been due to better methods of farm management which includes the judicious use of fertilizers and the use of selected seed."

Increased Values of Land. Dr. Wm. N. Harper of Agricultural Experiment Station, Clemson College, South Carolina, says: "A great deal of land has gone up from $30 to $100 to $150 per acre. Reference to the United States year book of agriculture, shows that the agricultural production of this state has more than doubled during the last ten years. This has been due to the fact that the farmers are learning how to farm more intelligently and how to use fertilizers more intelligently—this in spite of the fact that they do not rotate to any great extent. Of course, it would be much better for them to rotate their crops. In 1906, farmers of the state spent $4,000,000 for commercial fertilizers; in 1910, $12,150,000 and it paid the farmers to use this great amount of fertilizer."

The superfluities of these, the farmer's friends, consider the value of modern methods of agriculture. They are dollars and cents to the American farmer.

"We dined out last evening. Pa disgraced us, as usual."
 "How so?"
 "Got to the end of the dinner with three forks and two spoons still unused."

SKIN ERUPTION ON CHEEK

Kingsley, Mich.—"Last May my thirteen-month-old baby had a sore come on her cheek. It started in four or five small pimples and in two or three hours' time spread to the size of a silver dollar. It spread to her eye. The water would run from the pimple and wherever that touched it caused more sores until nearly all one cheek and up her nostrils were one solid sore. She was very fretful. She certainly was a terrible-looking child, and nothing seemed to be of any use."
 "Then I got some Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. She tried to rub off everything we put on so that we would sit and hold her hands for two hours at a time, trying to give the medicine a chance to help her, but after I washed it with Cuticura Soap and then put on the Cuticura Ointment they seemed to soothe her and she did not try to rub them off. It was only a few days before her face was all healed up, and there has been no return of the trouble since. We thought that baby's face would surely be scarred, but it is not." (Signed) Mrs. W. J. Cleland, Jan. 5, 1912.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 23-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston." Adr.

Problem in Physics.

A native of T., on the coast of Scotland, when the contract for the building of the first three steamers fitted with electric lights at the local shipyard was completed, formed one of the social party gathered to entertain the electrician's idea. In a burst of candor and comradery, he was heard to say to one of the workmen:

"Mon, Peter, after workin' w/ you on yer boats, I believe I could put in the electric light massel, but there's only one thing that bates me."
 "Aye, ay, Sandy, what is that?" inquired his interested friend, willing to help him if it lay in his power.
 "Weel, mon," replied Sandy, "it's just this: I dinna ken how ye get the lie to hang the wires."

Balanced.

Representative Pugh was talking in Washington about the currency.

"It must balance," he said. "It must balance automatically and delicately. It must resemble the Christmas husband."

"Oh, John, dear," said this chap's wife, "I'm so sorry you've got all those heavy parcels to carry!"
 "Well, you see, John panted, reassuredly, "my pocket is very much lighter now!"

WHY INFORMATION ABOUT MEAT IS ESSENTIAL

By L. D. HALL AND A. D. EMMETT, University of Illinois.

Precise knowledge of the final market products into which beef cattle are converted is essential both to the producer and to the consumer of beef. In order to place beef production upon the most exact and profitable basis, account must be taken not only of economical methods of breeding and feeding, but also of the quality of the finished beef product as delivered to the ultimate consumer. The relative efficiency of the different types of beef cattle or of systems of production cannot be accurately compared without considering the adaptability of the beef to the purpose for which it is used. The same considerations that prompt manufacturers of other food articles to study closely the commodities they place on the market should prompt the most producer to inform himself as thoroughly as possible regarding his finished product. Notwithstanding the evident truth of these propositions, no comprehensive studies have yet been conducted and published which furnish a basis on which to compare live cattle with the various cuts of beef derived from their carcasses. Consequently, beef producers have continued to conduct their operations almost wholly without regard to this important phase of the industry.

Meatmarket patrons are more directly, although no more intelligently, concerned with this subject than beef producers since they purchase directly with the market and have occasion almost daily to make use of information concerning the relative values of the different retail cuts of beef. Those who buy meat most intelligently must know the nature of these cuts, especially with reference to the proportions of lean meat, fat and bone which they contain and the food value of meat from different parts of the carcass.

A large majority of meat consumers have no knowledge whatever of these matters, but make their selections of meat solely according to habits or fancy. In fact, but little scientific attention has been hitherto available to those who wished to buy meats on a rational basis. As a result, a few well-known competitors in the market, and the remainder of the carcass is a "drug

Notes on Tuberculosis.

There are about 500,000 deaths annually in the United States from tuberculosis, of which it is estimated that 25 per cent are caused by the human type of tubercle bacilli; and 9 per cent, of 10,000 cases, are caused by the bovine type.

In the cases caused by the bovine type of tubercle bacilli the disease is probably contracted very largely through the food and is found almost exclusively among children.

Though our knowledge concerning distribution of cattle tuberculosis is yet incomplete, it is known to be extensive throughout the world, ranging from 10 to 45 per cent where most testing has been done.

The two things most favoring the distribution of this disease are the extensive trade in tuberculous cattle, and the difficulty of recognizing the disease by physical signs until it is far advanced.

The recognition of tuberculosis in cattle depends almost entirely upon the tuberculin test. The positive test is accurate in about 75 per cent of the cases as shown by autopsy. The negative test is not so reliable.

The responsibility of riding farm animals of tuberculosis must finally be placed upon the owner. The state may well formulate rules and regulations, provide for free tuberculin testing, and the popular and special advertising upon the subject of annual tuberculin tests.

Charcoal for Pigs.

Charcoal is one of the best tonics for growing pigs.

Breaking the Colt.

The earlier the colt is made used to the harness the better broken the animal will be when it comes time for him to do some light work. It is easier to keep colts from learning bad tricks than to break them of such habits. For this reason have every strap and rope used on colts as strong as there is no danger of a break. Once a colt finds out that he can get away from a halter or other part of his harness, the trouble will be trouble, perhaps for all time.

Mulching Materials.

Care must be exercised in the selection of materials to be used for mulching strawberries so as not to use materials which are too coarse, or which are so fine as to attract field mice, or which mats down so that it smother the plants. Corn stalks are too coarse unless they are chopped up, which procedure makes them too expensive. Leaves, sawdust and shavings are too fine for use.

Examine the Ram.

When you are picking out a ram to buy part the wool and examine the skin on various parts of his body. If it is a cherry or pinkish color he is in good condition, but if it is blue or muddy in appearance do not buy him.

Fall-Born Calf.

The calf born in fall does not have to wage the constant war against flies that the spring calf does, while the cooler temperatures prevailing cause the milk to be in better condition. There is a variety in fall or winter

Then put it into six quarts of warm water with the following: one pound of salt, one pound of onion stuck with cloves, rind of lemon, two sliced carrots, bunch of herbs and a head of celery. Let it boil two hours; then take out the head and pork. Make forcemeat balls of the brains and tongue, break the bones of the head, and fill with the soup. Boil for two hours more. Boil gently one hour more, pass through a sieve, season with salt, cayenne, lemon juice and a pint of Madeira wine and mash rooms if desired and serve with lemon oil in quarters.

Slow Cooking Best.

Beef will cook best by leaving it in well to remember that, in cooking only a slow and even tedious process can bring about the best results, for gradual cooking food of one more palatable and digestible than the rapidly cooked kind.

It cannot be too often impressed upon the cook that slow methods soften the connective tissue of meats, develop their flavors, and render their consistency more agreeable.

Meats that are cooked for long hours in a slow oven is of a high nutritive value, and all milk puddings, more especially barley pudding, that are prepared at this slow rate, are well prepared for cooking directly after the breakfast cookery pans have been cleared away.

Smith College Caramel.

Melt three tablespoonsful of butter and add three-fourths cupful of this cream, one cupful of sugar, and one cupful of milk, stir till thick and prepared for cooking directly after the breakfast cookery pans have been cleared away.

Smoking of chickens a funny man writing in Puck says:

"They are the most dastardly, unpertinent creatures that walk the family acre. Almost everybody tries to raise chickens at one time or another. Looks easy—that's the deceiving part of it."

"And it is easy after you learn one thing. Little chickens don't know anything, medium sized chickens don't know anything, large sized chickens don't know anything. If there is any change of an intellectual nature as the size increases the big ones know less if possible than the little ones."

"If there is a wire partition in your pen with an open door at one end the chickens will try to plunge through the wire instead of going around and walking through the door."

IN MEMORY OF A BABY.

By CARL MAYER.

It was in the late autumn, yet a summer day, when all the air was soft with a scarcely perceptible haze which gives October that pensive mood which is not sadness, and yet which tempts to joy.

Miriam sat on the porch crooning a lullaby to her baby as she gently rocked back and forth and contemplated the quietude of the country as it lay before her in a glory of crimson and gold.

A woman came slowly up the street and she caught sight of mother and babe. A woman, haggard, faded, dust-stained, young in years, but with youth's bloom gone from the pale cheeks and wretched eyes, flashing suddenly with a wild light as she held out her arms in supplication.

Miriam shrank back in her chair and held her baby closer, thinking the woman mad, but seeing her mistake, hesitated for a bit, inquiring if the woman was ill or needed help.

"No, madam, not ill, but it has been so long since I've seen a baby! You are good, you are so happy, you have not seen sin; you don't know what it is to have lost your baby and go about the world with empty arms and despairing heart. My baby is gone! If you will only let me kiss your baby, let me hold it just once—I would be more fit to die."

Intuitively, Miriam saw that this woman had suffered much; wronged her womanhood, perhaps; but suffered. Pity flashed into her eyes, and she shrank back—but she could not see a fellow-creature away perhaps to death, without giving what help she could.

Hesitating but a moment, she said: "Come, sit here beside me; baby is almost asleep," and rising, she laid the little babe on her breast and fragrances in the stranger's arms.

With a stifled cry the woman sank into a chair, while tears coursed down her cheeks. She wept with her grief unexpressed—with that agony of an overcharged spirit, until in the fullness of compassion Miriam put her arm around the shaking shoulders and tried to her gentle way to sympathize.

The baby slept. Miriam brought light refreshment, dairy sandwiches and cool, rich milk. Refreshed, the woman, now calm, softly whispered: "If you knew what I have been you would despise me. You would not let me touch your precious baby. You have been so good, now let me go."

But Miriam gently detained her. "If it will help you to tell me your trouble, I may be able to aid you," she said.

Then the woman wept again, but tenderly prevailed, and bit by bit the story of a young girl, born and brought up on a farm far from the city's whirl, lured away from home on promise of marriage, then deserted, came. How her baby had been born in a charity hospital; how she had searched and searched for her faithless lover, only to find him emerging from great riches with a radiant bride on his arm; how she had walked the streets night and day searching for work no one would give; how reason had left her when her baby died in her arms; how she was nursed back to puny health by others who had suffered, who gave her a home and certain rough but tender care; how she was led on to a life of shame because she could find no other means to earn bread, and how, sickened by their lives, she had cast aside her girl's gaudy raiment and was on her way to join her dead baby.

Miriam felt the truth of her story; felt that she could not turn away a soul so sorely distressed. "I think you were more sinned against than sinning, and God has brought you to me. Will you stay with me and help me care for my baby? I have great need of some one who will put love into this work, and perhaps, after a while, my baby will comfort you as you care."

"You will take me; you will keep me; you will let me tend your baby? Oh, it is too much, too much!" "It will do more, by giving you love and a great trust. You can help or harm me much; if you are loyal and faithful to baby and me you will give me a surer confidence in all humanity, but if you fail me, I shall never dare to listen to the voice of my own soul again. It is a trial for us both!"

"When the woman lifted her bowed head there was a new light in her eyes; a reawakened look.

"I thought there was nothing for me to live for, so work for me to do, but I will live since you think me worthy of such a trust. I will prove to you that there is something true in me still. I will be faithful."

The next spring in a far away city over a little mound in the churchyard a white stone was placed which bore the inscription: In Memory of a Baby named the they grave was blue with myrtle and violets.

The woman lived all her long years with Miriam and the baby, she came to be known to the family, respected, trusted, loved, looked up to. She tended them in sickness and in health; rejoiced in their joys, sorrowed with their sorrows, and the next generation never knew but what she had always been one of them.

But given in all the days of her life old Miriam bled to see the stone, woman's secret of her baby's grave.

That is the end of it.

WHERE LIFE IS VERY CHEAP

Forty-two soldiers were shot during the recent maneuvers of the Russian army. The announcement is stolidly made by the minister of war. He adds, "These men were in advance of the guns."

As guns do not ordinarily shoot backward, the minister's cryptic explanation may be considered superficial. The incident is, perhaps, interesting chiefly because of the light it throws on Russia's official attitude toward the value of human life. It still in aptly with the reports of executions, imprisonments and exiles which, coming from all parts of the czar's domains, keep the world informed of the progress of heartless oppression.

It is not surprising that the empire is rocked with discontent, that observers believe the government faces another costly revolution. A nation cannot place so low a value on the lives of its subjects without ultimately reaping its reward in blood and terror.

Accidents in military maneuvers are not uncommon. They have occurred in the United States, and, doubtless, will continue to occur from time to time as long as military training is held a necessary part of every nation's list of obligations. It has rarely happened in Russia, however, to send soldiers "in advance of the guns" to be shot, and for a minister of the czar's government to announce the blunder to the world with so much unconcern, apparently, as he might announce the departure of a detachment for patrol duty on the Persian frontier.

Fame of the Ozarks.

Since the advent of the "bound dave" song everybody has heard of the Ozarks. But the Ozarks have long been contributing to letters. The greater part of the lead pencils of the world are made from the red cedar of the Ozarks.—Boston Transcript.
