WILSON INDUCTED INTO HIGH OFFICE

Inauguration of Twenty-Seventh President Is Witnessed by Great Crowds.

MARSHALL SWORN IN FIRST

Simple Ceremony in Senate Chamber Followed by More Impressive Affair on East Portico of the Capitol.

By GEORGE CLINTON.
Washington, March 4.—In the presence of a vast throng of his fellow citizens, Woodrow Wilson today stood in front of the east portico of the capitol and took the oath of president of the United States. Thomas R. Marshall already had been sworn in as vice-president, and with the completion of the ceremony the ship of state was manned by the Democratic party.

At the new chief executive of the nation stood with bare head, Edward Douglas White, chief justice of the Supreme court, held before him the Bible always used in the ceremony. Mr. Wilson placed his hands upon the book and in a voice strong, though somewhat affected by emotion, swore to support the Constitution and the laws of the country and to perform the duties of his high office to the best of his ability.

Thomas Riley Marshall swore fealty to the Constitution and to the people in the senate chamber, where for four years it will be his duty to preside over the deliberations of the members of the upper house of congress.

Severely Simple Ceremonies.
Both of the ceremonies proper were conducted in a severely simple but most impressive manner. The surroundings of the scene of the president's induction into office, however, were not so simple, for it was an outdoor event and the great gathering of military, naval and uniformed civil organizations gave much more than a touch of splendor to the scene.

In the senate chamber, where the oath was taken by the man now vice-president of the United States, there were gathered about 1,000 people, all that the upper house contains without the risk of danger from the rush and press of the multitude. It is probable that no where else in the United States at any time are there gathered an equal number of men and women whose names are so widely known. The gathering in the senate chamber and later on the east portico of the capitol was composed largely of those prominent for their services in America, and in part of foreigners who have secured places for their names in the current history of the world's doings.

The arrangements of the ceremonies for the inauguration of Woodrow Wilson and Thomas Riley Marshall were made by the joint committee on arrangements of congress. The senate section of this committee was ruled by a majority of Republicans, but there is Democratic testimony to the fact that the Republican senators were willing to outdo their Democratic brethren in the work of making order out of the confusion of the inauguration ceremonies in honor of two chieftains of the opposition.

Ride to the Capitol.
President-elect Woodrow Wilson rode together from the White House to the capitol, accompanied by two members of the congressional committee of arrangements. The vice-president-elect also rode from the White House to the capitol and in the carriage with him were the senate's president pro tempore, Senator Charles C. McNary of Oregon, and three members of the congressional committee of arrangements.

The vice-president-elect took the oath before noon in accordance with custom and prior to his taking by the president-elect. Every arrangement of the senate chamber for the ceremony had been made so that they would forward easily and with a certain pandemonium.

Marched Down to the Capitol.
The attention to the senate chamber to witness the taking of the oath by the vice-president was by then, and in fact, to call upon the vice-president to call upon the vice-president.

occupied. On the floor of the chamber were many members of the senate who, because of the fact that they once held membership in that body, were given the privilege of the floor. After the oath was taken and all the minor officials of government and those privileged to witness the ceremonies, were seated, William R. Taft and Woodrow Wilson, preceded by the sergeant-at-arms and the committee of arrangements, entered the senate chamber. They were followed immediately by Vice-President-elect Thomas R. Marshall, leaning upon the arm of the president pro tempore of the senate who, after the seating of the thronging vice-president, took his place as presiding officer of the senate and of the day's proceedings.

As president and the president-elect sat in the first row of seats directly in front and almost under the desk of the presiding officer. In the same row, but to their left, were the vice-president-elect and two former vice-presidents of the United States, Levi E. Morton of New York and Adlai E. Stevenson of Illinois.

When the distinguished company entered the chamber the senate was still under its old organization. The ceremony was immediately administered to Vice-President-elect Marshall, who thereupon became Vice-President Marshall. The prayer of the day was given by the chaplain of the senate, Rev. Ulysses G. Pierce, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of New York.

Procession to the Platform.
Immediately after the senate ceremony a procession was formed to march to the platform of the east portico of the capitol, where Woodrow Wilson was to take the oath. The procession included the president and the president-elect, members of the Supreme court, both houses of congress, all of the foreign ambassadors, all of the heads of the executive departments, many governors of states and territories, Admiral DeWitt of the navy and several high officers of the army.

The crowd was charged with color and with life.

On reaching the platform the president and president-elect took the seats reserved for them, seats which were flanked by many rows of benches rising tier on tier for the accommodation of the friends and families of the officers of the government and of the press.

Oath Administered to Wilson.
The instant that Mr. Taft and Mr. Wilson came within sight of the east portico there was a great outburst of applause, and the military bands struck quickly into "The Star Spangled Banner." Only a few bars of the music were played and then soldiers and civilians became silent to witness respectfully the oath taking and to listen to the address which followed.

The chief justice of the Supreme court delivered the oath to the president-elect, who, uttering the words, "I will," became president of the United States. ## WESTERN CANADA'S PHENOMENAL DEVELOPMENT

ITS PERMANENCY VERY LITTLE QUESTIONED.

There have been booms in almost every civilized country and they were looked upon as such, and in the course of time the bubble was pricked and they burst. But in no country has the development been as great, nor as rapid, whether in city or in country as in Western Canada. There may "Can't be found one who will say that the West is a bubble, today, stands where Chicago stands as far as being the base of the great commercial and agricultural country lying a thousand miles back of it. It has an advantage that Chicago did not have, for no country in the world's history has so added to its borders a larger number of settlers in so short a time or has attracted so much wealth in a period of equal length, as have the prairie provinces. Never before has pioneering been accompanied under conditions so favorable as those that exist in Western Canada today.

The provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, which are the largest area of desirable lands on the North American Continent, and their cultivation has just begun.

Even with a two hundred million bushel wheat crop less than eight per cent of the land is under the plow, four per cent, being in wheat. Less than five years ago the wheat crop was only seventy-one million bushels. It is a simple calculation to estimate that if four per cent of the available cultivated area produced something over two hundred million bushels what forty four per cent produce?

And then look at the immigration that is coming to the country. In 1901 it was 49,149; 17,000 being from the United States. In 1906 it was 119,064, of which 67,000 were Americans, and 1912 it was about 160,000, of which about 200,000 are Americans. In the three years prior to 1912, there were 358,859 persons who declared themselves as immigrants to Canada, who brought into Canada cash, bank drafts, stock, implements and effects over $250,000,000. Why have they gone to Canada? The American farmer is a man of shrewd business instinct, and when he finds that he can sell his own farm at from $100 to $200 per acre and move into Canada and homestead 160 acres of state land, and at the same time, his sons who are adult and of age, upon lands as rich and fertile as those he has left, and producing, indeed, several bushels of wheat in excess of anything he has ever known, it will take more than an ordinary effort to prevent him from making the change. He can purchase good lands at from $12 to $25 per acre.

And, then, too, there is the American capital following the capital of the world. The total area of land reported as available for cultivation is estimated at 218,000,000 acres, only fifteen per cent of this is under cultivation. Nothing is said of the great mineral and forest wealth, of which but little has yet been touched.—Advertisement.

Patience Ignored.
A Virginia farmer was driving a retractor cow down the road one morning. The cow and the driver came to a crossroad. The man wanted the cow to go straight ahead, but the cow picked out the crossroad. A negro was coming along the crossroad.

"Halt her off! Halt her off!" yelled the driver.

The negro jumped about the road and waved his arms. The cow proceeded calmly on her way.

"My wife and I drank our first cup of Postum a little over two years ago and we have used it ever since, to the entire exclusion of tea and coffee. It happened in this way.

"About three and a half years ago I had an attack of pneumonia, which left a memento in the shape of dyspepsia, of rather, to speak more correctly, neuralgia of the stomach. My 'cup of cheer' had always been coffee or tea, but I became convinced, after a time, that they aggravated my stomach trouble. I happened to mention the matter to my grocer one day and he suggested that I give Postum a trial.

"Next day it came, but the cook made the mistake of not boiling it sufficiently, and we did not like it much. This was, however, soon remedied and now we like it so much that we will never change back. Postum, being a food beverage instead of a drug, has been the means of banishing my stomach trouble. I verily believe, for I am a well man today and have used Postum ever since.

"My work as chief bookkeeper in our Co.'s branch house here is of a very exacting nature. During my sojourn in the hospital I was 'cured' of my stomach trouble, and I have been able to do my work ever since. I have left me since I began using Postum, and I can conscientiously recommend it to those who work under conditions like those of mine. I have been a sufferer from stomach trouble, and I have been a sufferer from stomach trouble, and I have been a sufferer from stomach trouble.

"I have been a sufferer from stomach trouble, and I have been a sufferer from stomach trouble, and I have been a sufferer from stomach trouble. I have been a sufferer from stomach trouble, and I have been a sufferer from stomach trouble, and I have been a sufferer from stomach trouble.

"I have been a sufferer from stomach trouble, and I have been a sufferer from stomach trouble, and I have been a sufferer from stomach trouble. I have been a sufferer from stomach trouble, and I have been a sufferer from stomach trouble, and I have been a sufferer from stomach trouble.

seems almost superfluous. Born in Rushville, Ill., in 1856, he was graduated with highest honors from Illinois college at Jacksonville in 1881 and received his master's degree in 1884.

tional convention of 1896 and made a successful appeal for the vote, he won the presidency, but was defeated by William McKinley.

From 1896 to 1897 he was attorney general of the United States.
He then returned to private practice, but has been retained by several of the states in the administration of the railroads. Mr. Mc-

State Chronicle, which nine years later he consolidated with the North Carolinian and the News and Observer.

Franklin K. Lane
Franklin Knight Lane has been a member of the interstate commerce commission since 1906, and this experience is believed to have fitted him for the executive and judicial tasks in administering the public land laws of the country. Born in Prince Edward island in 1864, he received his education in the University of California and became a lawyer in San Francisco. Prior to his designation to the commission he was a Democratic political leader in California. He was Democratic candidate for governor, being defeated by a narrow margin.

David A. Houston
In David Franklin Houston, chancellor of Washington university, St.
Louis, Wilson has a secretary of agriculture who is familiar with the processes of advancing scientific farming and allied questions in this country. Mr.

for a number of years, and had taught in several other educational institutions. He was born in Houston, N. C., in 1864, was educated at South Caro-ceived the degree of LL. D. from the University of Wisconsin.

William C. Redfield
William C. Redfield has just completed his first term as a congressman, but he has been prominent in the politics of New York for a good many years. In 1902 and 1903 he was com-

Hudson & Manhattan Railroad company.

Lindley M. Garrison.

The selection of Lindley M. Garrison, vice-chancellor of New Jersey, to be secretary of war is in line with President Wilson's idea that the holder of that position should be a man of unusual executive ability. He is a close friend of Mr. Wilson. Mr. Garrison was born in Camden, N. J., No-

CONSORT PICKED BY ROYALTY

Somewhat Summary Method of Mating as it is Done in the Kingdom of Siam.

Kings of Siam apparently do not believe in the wisdom of allowing single women to drift unattached about the country. In certain districts after a girl has reached an age where her selecting for herself a husband is considered doubtful, she becomes a "daughter of the king." That is, the king takes upon himself the task of settling her suitably in life.

His process is quite simple, and to the point. He proceeds to the Siamese penitentiary and looks over the various prisoners. There is a law in Siam that any prisoner can obtain his release by marrying one of the class of girls and, "naturally enough, any prisoner whom the king picks out is not likely to be backward about committing to the ceremony. Nor does it make any difference if he is married, for the men of that country are not restricted to one wife.

As far as can be learned, there is no allowance made for the inclination of the girl in question. She has failed in her mission in life as far as she herself is concerned, and she must obey the decision of the king.

Green Corn Soup.

Heat a quart of oil in a wash bottle, or milk, scorching evenly; press a small cup of corn through a strainer to remove hulls. If the corn does not go through the strainer, pour the milk into it; this will help to secure the pulp of the corn. Add a lump of butter the size of a walnut and pour over the corn to melt the butter. Heat the mixture of corn and oil in a milk pan and add the soup lightly a few minutes before serving.

THE PROFESSOR FROM PRINCETON.

As Mr. Taft steps out of office with the good wishes of many, Mr. Wilson steps into the vacant place under the same circumstances. Everyone hopes and expects that he will make a good president. He leaves behind him a splendid record as governor of New Jersey and closes his term of office thereby administering an awful blow at the many trusts which boast the little state as their home.

As the new president, he has found things arranged for him just so far as possible to the outgoing administration to do. No stumbling blocks have been put in his way and he will take up the great task under conditions that show cordiality on the part of his predecessor in spite of party differences. In fact, one and all hope and expect that the "Professor" from Princeton will make a first class president.

Bids Wanted.

Contractors are requested to submit bids for the construction of all or any part of a 40 by 50 foot hall, with eight foot basement. For plans and specifications, address R. W. GRACY, North Crystal Lake, Illinois.

Card of Thanks.

I desire to express my sincere thanks to friends for their kindly assistance and expressions of sympathy on the occasion of my recent bereavement.

HENRY FINGLE.

Card of Thanks.

We wish to thank the many friends and neighbors for their expression of sympathy and kindness shown in our late bereavement.

MRS. CHARLES WESTBALK AND FAMILY, BROOKLYN AND NEW YORK.

Caught a Real Goldfish.

Fish stories are rife now, and under the seductive influence of this balmy time new versions come to light of the same old stories. We have heard since boyhood days of a representative Plimley of Vermont, of portentously serious mien, asserted to a smiling group of colleagues that a couple of seasons ago he lost his watch and a $20 gold piece overboard while waiting for a pack pool for a bite. The next day, he declared under oath, he caught a fish in that self same pool—a "gold watch," of course—and he found within the silvery armor of that Vermont bass his watch, the $20 gold piece, and 30 cents accrued interest.—Joe Mitchell Chapelle in Joe Chapelle's News Letter.

Could Not Appreciate Joke.

Typographical errors are often so beautifully and wonderfully made as to amuse suspicion. Thus there was a contribution in the office of the Chicago American recently and all excuses and loud assertions on the part of the proofreaders availed not. There it was, in big black type, on the first page: "Michael Farley Dead From Heart Disease."

AMBITION TALKS

BY HARLAN READ

SOME PIONEERS WHO HAVE SUCCEEDED

Even apparent dullards may attain to great intellectual power by constant effort. History is full of instances.

Sir Isaac Newton, when at school, stood at the bottom of his class.

Mr. Walter Scott was considered a thoroughbred dunce, as a boy, so far as his schoolroom work was concerned—so much so that Prof. Dalsell of Edinburgh University said of him, "Dunce he is, and dunce he will remain." Yet who at those who have read "Marmion," "The Lady of the Lake" will now agree with the professor?

Mr. Washington and Madison, who met as foes in the most conspicuous battle of modern history, and wrote their names in blood all over the map of Europe, were classmates at school; and Ulysses S. Grant, the greatest general of the Civil War, twice president of the United States, was in his boyhood called "Uddies" Grant by his own mother, he was so ungainly! So ungainly that when, as a boy, he was appointed to a leadership in West Point, a neighbor who saw his fellow in the road said, "I hear they've appointed you leader, but I don't see how they could do that." "They have," replied Mr. Grant proudly. "Well, that's a great name," replied the neighbor. "Why did they select him when there were brighter boys in the neighborhood?" It is said that, as a boy, he once rode his own bid at an auction.

NOT A LOVE LETTER

BY GEORGE MUNSON.

John Benson rose hurriedly from the breakfast table and plunged for his hat; then he plunged for his wife "Good-by, dear," he said, clasping her as tightly as he could, considering that he was holding a derby and a half full of office papers. "I must catch that 8:27."

"Good-by, John," said Mary Benson, kissing him fondly. "I do wish you didn't have to hurry away to that old office," she added, pouting.

"It won't be for long," said her husband. "My great new advertising scheme goes through week after week. Everybody will read them. It's my own idea. Can't stop to tell you now. Good-by." And, with a hurried final kiss, he was through the door and hastening toward the station.

Mary sighed a little—then smiled. She and John had been married only six months and they were very fond of each other.

She put away the breakfast things; then, still smiling at the thought of her husband's haste, she went into the little room in which he worked at nights upon the new advertising plan. A piece of paper lay in one corner; it had evidently fluttered out of his desk and fallen there, unnoticed. She picked it up and, glancing at it, felt her heart throb painfully. She could hardly read the words that danced before her eyes.

It was a love letter, and it began: "My dearest, sweetest Jack." It was sweet—evidently that the writer might remain immune against discovery.

Worst of all, it was headed 1247 Anderson street—her husband's business address.

Mary Benson had the quick temper which accompanies many lovable natures. She snatched the letter into a corner and hid it under her bed. She was determined to go home to her mother. Then at last she composed herself, dabbed some ointment upon her eyes, put the letter in her bag and started down town. She would be very quiet and very calm and give the woman no occasion to triumph over her. She would request a few moments of John's time, would walk in, lay down the letter, ask him if he had anything to say, and then go home.

She Was Determined to Go Home to Her Mother

It was nearly eleven o'clock before the snow-white, one-eyed and one-legged street. She might have taken the train. But she wanted to spin out the journey as long as possible.

She got down from the car and entered the dreary office building, hung up on the seventh floor of which John had his business quarters. She had never been there since their marriage. She knew that he had a bookkeeper, a stenographer and an office boy. When she went in she saw the same office boy and bookkeeper; but there was a new stenographer.

"Why, Mary!" John was at the door, looking at her with a puzzled expression. "He was" holding her hands.

"Mary! What is wrong, dear?"

She could not help her tears. "Send that woman away," she said in a faltering voice, and the stenographer withdrew softly, smiling a little. She had seen men's wives go to their husbands' offices before. Mary Benson entered, put down her bag and, standing like a recording angel, hung down the letter silently. John Benson read it and suddenly began to laugh uproariously.

"John, what do you mean? Can you offer any excuse at all? What is it?" John Benson read solemnly:

"My dearest, sweetest Jack—When are you going to take me out to dinner again, as you did on the 29th, sweetheart? I miss you every hour of the day—more than I miss Harold, the new patent scissors for cutting your own hair. When I see my brother's Harold I think of your own dark, lustrous locks."

"Oh, pshaw!" said John, throwing the letter down. "That's a simple, childish excuse. Mary, we're flooding the country with them. Everybody will read them and want a pair. Look

WORDS OF TRUTH

FROM

THE SIXTH DAY OR EPOCH

As the carbon-laden atmosphere became more pure, vegetation began to rank. The animals also changed correspondingly. The heavy-boned Sloth and Mammoth gave place to less bulky varieties of animals common today.

The specialization in the case of Man's creation is shown in his vast superiority over the lower animals. The first man, Adam, was an image of his Creator, the highest type of fleshly or animal being. That image of his Creator consisted in his moral and intellectual likeness. It is difficult to judge from present human conditions all that is meant by God's image, because we have no sample of perfect humanity for comparison. "All have sinned and all come short of the glory of God" in which Adam was created. (Psalm 14.) There is none in God's image today. Sin and death have reigned and the God-likeness has been lost. All need redemption, restoring back to that which was lost. It was toward the close of the Sixth Day, or approximately forty-two thousand years from the time of beginning the ordering of Earth, that God Created Man. The image of God would mean a human being thoroughly in tune with the Infinite One, one that would have no unrighteousness or iniquity in him. Adam's transgression was not the result of ignorance, nor of pure willfulness. It was the result of temptation which his limited knowledge accomplished.

When thinking of man in the image of God, we instinctively look back to "The Man Christ Jesus," who was holy, harmless, undefiled and separate from sinners, and was like the first Adam, whose penalty He came into the world to meet—1 Cor. 15:22. Adam's dominion over the lower animals was like God's dominion over the Universe. Angels, although in God's image, do not have Godlike dominion over creatures of a lower order. Man's dominion overthrown by sin is to be restored by Messiah's Kingdom.—Acts 3:21-22.

Farm Interests

Edited by HENRY C. BELL
Published by the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee

Special Crop Bulletin.

The business of farming used to be among the most difficult of all commercial industries. It used to be; but it isn't now, although a good many farmers still make it so.

The one thing that made farming most difficult was the fact that each farmer was absolutely thrown upon his own resources; he had only his own experience from which to profit. When any of us must work and build only upon our own experience, it is a long, hard and doubtful journey to success.

But conditions have changed. And this change has come about within very recent times. Today the wise farmer can learn exactly what to do, and how to do it by the practical experience of others. For today the farmer has at his command the numerous expert farmers to guide him; he also has the exact details of what other farmers are accomplishing, and how they are making successes of their farms. The results of every farmer in every state, under every possible condition and with every variety of crops, is now available to the ambitious farmer. The successes and failures of thousands of others, and the full analysis of such successes and failures, form the basis upon which the farmer can now profit.

The agricultural publications have been largely instrumental in standardizing farming. These mediums have been the direct means of fraternalizing farmers, and all farmers are to be an intimate, helpful contact with each other.

But of all the interesting, instructive material that is now available to the farmer, there is probably nothing that has become of more importance to farming than the Special Crop Bulletin, edited and issued by the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee.

Under the direction of Professor Henry C. Bell, formerly professor of agronomy and manager of farms of the University of Maine, this committee issues special crop bulletins that analyze and clearly explain the proper care of the soil in its drainage, and fertilization, and how crops should be rotated to produce the best yields and other essentials that insure the highest and most profitable use of the soil.

The special crop bulletins are based wholly upon actual experience of successful farmers and the results of experiment stations. No theories or generalizations are to be found in these special crop bulletins; only actual facts based upon actual demonstrations, well illustrated, and in very readable form.

Now the purpose of this Middle West Soil Improvement committee and their bulletins is to help the farmer in caring for his soil, and to show him in a very tangible way how to get the largest crop yield of best quality every year. The bulletins, which are sent to the farmers without any cost whatever, contain no advertising and make no attempt at selling anything. These bulletins are intended to show, among other things, the permanent and profitable advantage of fertilizers. The bulletins contain very valuable information for farmers. They will warrant every enterprising farmer in sending for and reading them.

The potato bulletin recently issued is an excellent illustration of how valuable these publications are.

Here are various extracts from the potato bulletin:

The Potato is a Money Maker.
The Irish potato is a staple of American diet. They were enough potatoes consumed in the United States in 1911 to allow one 8 ounce potato a day throughout the whole year for each man, woman and child. Truly, the potato is the root of the people! The portion of the American meal made up by this vegetable, alone, amounted to over 300,000,000 bushels.

Within the important vegetable is becoming an important part of the business of farmers, great and small.

With such an enormous national appetite to appease, there seems to be good reason why thousands of the farmers of the middle west should be so busy with a few acres of the crop. With modern methods the potato is a money maker for the farmer. A couple of acres should produce approximately 90 bushels—enough for his own use with a few hundred bushels to sell.

The Type to Grow.
The type of potato that is the greatest favor on the market is one that is regular in shape, whose size approximates 3 to 4 inches in length, 2 to 3 1/2 inches in width, and whose weight runs from 6 to 8 ounces. This potato should be oval in shape and should possess a smooth skin of fine texture. The eyes should be concentrated in a great deal of care in preparation for cooking, should be kept away from the sun in order to keep the skin of the potato smooth. In the same, the potato should be a small number, but without potatoes are discarded.

Interest in Good Roads.
For the first time it now seems as though public sentiment in Illinois would result in new roads. The bill prepared by Hon. Homer J. Tice is the result of careful investigation and a weighing of all the factors which enter into the problem of the Sucker state. Undoubtedly there will be considerable objection, particularly by the farmers, to a road official, who, if this bill becomes a law, will be without jobs. However, everybody ought to be in favor of the Tice bill, for through its operation the expenditure of no more money than is now being annually used for so-called road work would result in hundreds of miles of permanent roads, and also durable bridges. Isn't it about time that Illinois, which ranks first in agriculture, third in population and third in total wealth, be rescued from the 24th place, which it now occupies so far as attention to road improvement is concerned? Objection to good roads has heretofore been based largely upon unbusinesslike handling of this same proposition in other states. Now the whole matter has been worked out in a satisfactory way and a careful study of the problem reveals the fact that hundreds of miles of good roads can be constructed each year, without materially adding to the annual tax. At present approximately 37 1/2 per cent of the road tax in Illinois is absolutely wasted.—Orange Judd Farmer.

Good Roads Day, March 7.

Friday, March 7, will be Good Roads Day in Illinois schools. The observance ought not to end with the schools. Every agricultural, commercial, social and fraternal club in the state could well afford to get up a good roads program for that day.

The Chicago Association of Commerce has arranged a big good roads meeting for the evening of March 8, and will entertain its members at the headquarters of the Good Roads movement.

Those who have a good roads meeting on March 7, other organizations will follow suit, and the observance of Good Roads Day will be a success.
