Moving pictures have been forbidden at Zion City.

On August 9 and 10 there will be automobile races on the Libertyville track. The meet will be held under the sanction of the American Automobile association and some fast events are promised.

The lure of an annual salary of $64 is attached to the announcement by the United States Civil Service commission that an examination will be held in Chicago August 22 for a four-class postmaster at Itasca. No reference is made to the method of payment, whether there will be weekly or monthly installments or whether it will be delivered all at once.

Fifteen thousand dollars is the amount figured on to erect and complete the new Catholic church at Hartland to take the place of the structure destroyed by fire a short time ago. Subscription papers have been in circulation for some time and the amount thus far obtained warrants the belief that the amount desired will be secured. Plans and specifications have been completed and the contract is now being figured out by several contractors, the hope being to have the new church completed and ready for occupancy as early as October 1 of this year. The new edifice will not be on the site of the one destroyed by fire, but immediately across the roadway and nearby the parish house.

Worth a Strike.

It seems about time for social leaders to rise in their might and demand an eight-hour night.

THE "SUPERIOR" SEX

By ERNEST WOLLETT.

Miss Belinda, at her summer home, was setting out a bed of vegetables with the help of the man who employs by the day when she can enter him from his old-fashioned fishing boat.

"It was real smart of you to raise these little plants in the city and bring them out here," he said. "You'll have tomatoes and eggplants before any one else. I don't see how you ever come to think of them things."

"I bought all how some women, as plan ahead more men folks. Now, that patch of onions and lettuce you put in last fall before you went away has turned out fine, ain't it?"

"I'm glad, Cassius, to hear you speak highly of women's ability," said Miss Belinda. "I think we women will have to get you to work for us this summer."

"Ain't it worse for you now?" asked Cassius, mystified. "Some of them fellows that go by in the grocery mornin's before you get down to the garden run me 'bout workin' so much for a woman. But I always say that I don't see why your money, which is good as anybody's. And I will say this, Miss Belinda, it's a sight surer than some folks' money."

"Thank you, Cassius. I'm happy to know that you're satisfied and that you believe in women. I hope you'll help women get the ballot this fall."

"Get the ballot? How are the women expected to get the ballot?" Cassius laughed.

"They're expected to get it in this state through the referendum," Miss Belinda paused, but as Cassius did not appear much enlightened she continued: "You see, the question of woman's suffrage is to be voted upon next November in Wisconsin."

"I ain't heard nothin' about it," Cassius threw a little seedling into the ground with masculine roughness that ended its young life. "What do women folks know about politics, anyway?"

"Even you don't appear to be fully informed on all the present issues," declared Miss Belinda, laughing.

"Well, I ain't never been one to believe in women gettin' out of their place."

"Just what is a woman's place, I'd really like to know."

"Well, I think a woman's place is at home. I don't never want to see my wife gallivantin' round to the polls. Her place is at home."

"That reminds me," said Miss Belinda pleasantly. "I need some one tomorrow to help my maid wash the curtains. Can you come as usual?"

"Well, I ain't sure 'bout it. There's scrubbin' the postoffice and hardware store floors and woodwork this week. I don't best all my time bein' in it. She ain't hardly been home a hull day since the spring house cleanin' begun."

"Oh, then she doesn't stay in her place all the time," Miss Belinda remarked sweetly.

Cassius wiped his hand across his perspiring forehead and left a trail of garden soil on his perplexed brow.

"Well, anyway, she ain't mixin' up with man's business," he answered, doggedly.

"Oh, have we a woman postmaster this year, and isn't Mr. Beasley running the hardware store now? Is there a woman doing that? I must be quite behind the times if there are so many changes here."

"Everything's just the same as it always was. Even if you be kind of laughin' at me, Miss Belinda, you know mighty well that scrubbin' floors ain't men's business."

"No, no, it's not considered men's work. It's a little too strenuous for most of the men in this neighborhood. It would be a rather pitiful sight to see men, whose hands aren't used to holding much except a jackknife or a fishing pole on their knees all day, pushing a scrubbing brush across the floor, wouldn't it?"

Cassius' only reply to this question was a grunt as he rose to bring a pail of water for the plants.

On his return he stood with a rather majestic pose over Miss Belinda's kneeling figure and said: "The polls ain't decent for women. I've said it before, and I say it again, women folks ain't got no business in such a dirty place."

"Where is the voting place in this town?" asked Miss Belinda.

"Well, since the old town hall burned down, we've been votin' in the Oakland district school."

"Oh, that's where your daughter teaches. Dear me, you must have to have Amanda in such a dirty place so much of the time."

Cassius did not deign to reply. He gave Miss Belinda a scornful look and continued his work in his customary leisurely style. But at noon, having announced that he could not come back after dinner, because he had promised his wife to try to catch a fish for supper, he said: "Well, Miss Belinda, I guess there ain't no way you can deny that God made man before he made woman and gave him the first place in the hall of creation."

Miss Belinda laughed. Then as she watched Cassius stoop away she said to herself: "And our destiny is left to the hands of creation!"

Then There's No Row.

"Gracious! That noise across the street sounded like a pistol shot."

"Don't be alarmed. That was Mr. Brubaker slamming the door of his residence as he left for town."

"Then he always slams the door so hard?"

"Not every morning. There are some mornings when he and Mrs. Brubaker don't meet at the breakfast table."

Requires Only Small Outfit.

The active Arab barber requires only a pair of scissors, a pair of clippers, and a razor for their equipment. They erect their temporary shops in the market-places by spreading some matting over a few poles. Arabs have their heads shaved, keeping the hair short so that the white skull cap over which the fez is worn will fit closely.

Rid Your Children of Worms.

You can change fretful, ill-tempered children into healthy, happy youngsters, by ridding them of worms. Tossing, rolling, grinding of teeth, crying out while asleep, accompanied with intense thirst, pains in the stomach and bowels, feverishness and bad breath, are the symptoms that indicate worms. Kickapoo Worm Killer, a pleasant candy lozenge, expels the worms, regulates the bowels, restores your children to health and happiness. Mrs. J. A. Bralbin, of Elgin, Ill., says: "I have used Kickapoo Worm Killer for years, and enjoy it rid my children of worms. I would not be without it." Guaranteed. All druggists, or by mail, Forms, Philadelphia and St. Louis.

Arranging for the Future.

The little girl objected, quite naturally, to wearing her older sister's outgrown clothes. One day, in protesting while being dressed with such a parent, she exclaimed: "It's real mean, and when I get married, I'm going to have my youngest child first, so that she won't have to wear her sister's old clothes."—Saturday Evening Post.

Mad Gona Too Far to Change.

Little Helen and Jack had grown up together, and when Jack finally outgrew dresses and donned his first trousers Helen insisted that she, too, have her young man's suit. But Jack said: "No, you don't, either, 'cause you started out to be a girl and you've got to keep it up."—Chicago Tribune.

For Cuts, Burns and Bruises.
