"WACK YOUR TONGUE"

One of the delights of life is "feeling out" people, not finding out their weaknesses and weaknesses, but feeling out their virtues. Everyone has had the experience of knowing a friend for years without really getting in touch with his innermost thoughts and emotions, then suddenly one learns in a few minutes that that friend has views of life and conduct of which he was unaware. Perhaps we had heard that this person had his religious habits and we were with him, but he is truly a man of piety who will be a help to himself and does not detract from the knowledge.

We hear dreadful gossiping remarks about some man or woman which we are sure to be ready to believe and perchance it will be years before we learn for ourselves that this person was very cruelly slandered. Some people swallow everything they hear about everybody regardless of who told them and no matter how improbable the information is. Some people say that this woman is questionable, she neglects her home, she is extravagant and does not care for her family, she runs the streets and so on; and all the time the wicked Dame of lying, she has exaggerated little short comings, little human frailties, until the poor victim's good name is gone and stories follow her for years which are undesired and unjust.

Many who call themselves pretty good Christians are very free with their remarks on the private lives and conduct of others and that is a very un-Christian like act. One who can preserve a discreet silence when another's faults are pointed out can find something good to tell about that person, is practicing the first rule of Christianity, "Do unto others as you would that they do unto you."

A small town is a regular hive of gossip which goes round and round, every fault is talked about and remarks are made which are said to be "fact," which when investigated are found to be enlarged upon and that the original happened was some trivial occurrence, harmless in itself.

Everybody needs the advice, "Wack your tongue."

"Can a man marry on $15 a week?" asks an inquirer. He can, yet he can marry on the price of the license and the preacher's fee, but—

Eugene may, as Doctor Cramer predicts, live up to a lifetime, but if there are not going to be any people whom, as others say, they worry about it?

Gold-storage helps to reduce, not increase the cost of living, says a college professor. Here, sometimes you get a chicken when you only pay for an egg.

Chocolate is to be taken out of the army's list of ration as indulgent. He. Perhaps the army will be just as well satisfied if a chess of tobacco is substituted in its stead.

"Kissing is the great national sport in the United States," says a French author; however, he will doubtless concede that the right have greater procreation here than in France.

A British firm is to get $125,000,000 from the government of Ecuador for cleaning up the city of Guayaquil. Guayaquil in the Latin countries seems high, but it is greatly to their credit that they must have it.

The invention is announced of a bottle to contain poison that will ring a bell when the bottle is opened. But still we have rats that blunderers will be found who will ignore the warning of a fire alarm bell.

The things said about Mrs. Llanza are enough to cause it to be a warning of any kind of humor. It is probably the real fact that while she was having her picture taken she was merely trying to look pleasant.

A Philadelphia girl wants $10,000 from a man who took two kisses away from her. If this is a fair example of market values there are plenty of young ladies waiting for one dollar a week who ought to be millionaires.

Care of Ferns in the Home.

Plural Short of this village offers the following advice on the care of ferns to the readers of this paper:

Plants grown of ferns must be kept moist and the soil never pushed beneath it else they will be apt to rot away. Give ferns neither light in preference to a southern exposure.

In the middle of winter the night temperature for ferns should be about 65 degrees, rising to not over 70, until the season changes.

Keep the soil of ferns always damp but do not let it get sodden. (Very wet soil soon becomes sour. Keep the foliage dry letting the plant drink through the roots.)

Water for ferns should not be cold. Do not put tender ferns outside in the rain. If you do their fronds will be beaten down.

Maidenhair fern requires more care than all other ferns. Give it plenty of moisture and abundant watering for once its soil becomes dry the fronds shrivel up quickly. Sterilized leaf mold makes an excellent potting soil. The maidenhair fern will thrive best in fern cases. You need not hope to succeed with maidenhair fern indoors if the room is lighted by gas.

Boson fern is a variety of sword fern that is robust, a quick and graceful grower and very adaptable. It will stand changes in temperature and also gas, which more delicate ferns will not do. The Boson fern is good for placing on a stand by itself in a jardiniere or during its growth in a window.
