Our attention has been called to the fact that in an article which appeared in the paper last week giving a review of the Woman's Suffrage bill that in the list of officers published for which women may vote for that the township and village officers were not enumerated.

The first section of the law which was published clearly states that women may vote for all officers of cities, villages and towns (except police magistrates). It appears that our authority on this point and many to be made by these officers under the heading of "what women may vote for."

trade could not by implication be expected from such language in any treaty, by the nation which desired it.

During this controversy many American and British officials took part in it who subsequently participated in the framing and ratification of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty.

In their work on the latter treaty these men must have had very clearly in mind the construction of this language which had been determined recently in a controversy arising between these very two powers.

If the language used in the Hay-Pauncefote Treaty was, on the contrary, to have comprehended the doctrine of our maritime trade, would it not have so stated in plain words? In such cases, that rule has been followed.

For instance, the treaty of 1850, United States with Nicaragua concluded December 1, 1851, known as the Pellaig-hoyes-Zelaya treaty, contained the provision "usual tolls for the vessels of all nations excepting the vessels of the contracting parties engaged in the maritime trade."

Wherever it has been desired to exclude maritime trade from the general language of a treaty as to commerce and navigation, express words to such effect have been inserted. As a consequence of the foregoing, the interpretation of the treaties of the United States referring to this subject will indicate the true meaning of the language.

It is clearly always general and then general terms have been invariably inserted to include various conditions within their meaning.

To now attempt to do violence to these precedents and force in opposition meaning into the language of this treaty, is to be impossible to do so material interest to do so, seems to be to be such an impossible course of action as to be altogether foreign to a treaty.

I believe for this reason alone, the clause exempting our coastwise shipping from tolls should be repeated. But other reasons lead to the same conclusion. It is impossible to enlarge upon them here so I shall merely state them.

As a matter of fact it is not to our own interest materially speaking, to exempt our coastwise shipping from these tolls.

Exemption of our coastwise shipping from tolls would be a policy which has the best protected monopoly which exists in our country today.

It would seriously injure our foreign trade. Other nations would be urged upon them here so I shall merely state them.

It would likewise result in the building up of the American merchant marine as is urged by some.

The annual expense in buying fuel and operating the canal, will be enormous. Under existing laws American vessels have a monopoly of the coastwise trade. There is no reason why they should not continue to have it at a low price and every reason why they should.

The principal result of free tolls for American vessels engaged in coastwise trade, would be to help the great mercantile interests of the coast in competing with their trade rivals in the interior.

Instead of resulting in lowering existing freight rates it would actually result in raising them. It might cause a lowering of the coastwise rates, but that very fact would result in the raising of rates between inter-lake points.

I sometimes am called upon to cast my vote on a matter which seems to me to present a close question. But the more often I have considered this subject the more often it has seemed to me to be our duty to promptly repeal this clause that says should have been put into the act regulating the use of the canal.

St. Patrick's Day Ice Cream

If you are planning a party for the day in celebration of the great Saint Patrick you will want ice cream for the menu that is appropriate for the occasion. I will have brick ice cream colored green and white and you will not have to leave a special order before hand. The green part gets its color from the using of Pistachio nuts and not any artificial coloring is used in the manufacture, so you need not be afraid of any poisonous coloring. The white is vanilla flavor and the two combined make an ice cream that is unique, appropriate and above all has that richness for which Gibbs' ice cream is noted.

Robert Walton, for many years a resident of Watonsia town, died at the age of 77 years in his home in Waukegan where he had lived for the last years. He was a veteran of the civil war and was a member of the post G. A. R. of Watonsia. The remains will be brought from the vault in Waukegan and interred in the Vale cemetery later in the spring. The widow and four children survive, two daughters are married and one, younger children who live with their mother.

Henry Davis.
It has been a long time since the death of any resident occurred which gave our people such a shock as was caused by the very sudden death of Henry H. Davis at his home north of Waukegan at 10:20 a. m. after but an hour's indisposition.

He was in town Saturday attended the meeting of Watonsia post G. A. R. in the evening and seemed in perfect health.

Death was caused by apoplexy and it is said that he was in much pain but fully conscious to the end.

Deceased was born June 24, 1845, on the farm where he lived all his life except when he did as above stated, being 69 years of age.

Mr. Davis was a soldier in the civil war and has always been a leader in grand army circles, where he was a much beloved member. He was one of the cheapest and kindest of men, a good neighbor, an indulgent father and a citizen of high participation.

His wife had died about 25 years ago and Henry H. Davis had kept the home open as at all times, his daughters first service as home-makers until both died and then he had to depend on outside workers. He could not stand that day were glad to remain with him as he was to live with them.

He leaves two sons, Aaron the oldest being 40 years and John who lives on part of the farm, and one grandson, Roy H. Davis, besides four brothers, Frank of Graylake, Melville and Edward who reside in Minnesota and Will who has always lived on the farm near his brother.

The funeral was held at the Methodist church Wednesday afternoon, Rev. Williams officiating and members of grand army post and women of the relief corps attending and holding their ritual exercises in which their deceased comrade had so often taken his part upon such occasions.

All were deeply affected, for they feel the loss of their patriotic comrade and lonely tears and sorrowful eyes were outward evidence of the aching hearts this doubly bereaved, depressed by grief, on this occasion.

Henry Davis was a clean man, industrious, temperate and honest. He was a kindly man; and came about 45 years living his neighbor as himself in any one the writer has ever known.

His place in society is vacant, now and long will friends, neighbors and relatives miss this good comrade.
