"The young folks are counting on the dance tonight," he observed. "I don't know of a better place for the dance than 'Even the Buckner girls have got new ball dresses."

"Improvise, I call it," said Mrs. Mason. "I can't see anything, with Park Hill mortgaged up to the roof the way it is."

"I reckon it Mrs. Poly Gifford says her mouth more than ten minutes hand-running," he said majestically, "the top of her head'd fly from her to Charlottesville."

The mayor, encocheted with a sigh in the easy chair behind him, slowly fanned his palm-leaf fan and smote a hasty, errant fly.

"Speaking of Damory Court," he said in his big voice. "The dance I'd like to see. I'd like to see the dance. It was a happy thought of young V. I'll be surprised if he doesn't do it to the queen's taste."

The doctor nodded. "This place

"I'd hardly limit it to that," said the major, chuckling at the easy thrust of the matter for the moment. "And after all, even foldierhands have their use."

"Who said they hadn't? If people choose to make whirling dervishes of themselves, why at least can reflect that matter for their lives that can-bottom chairs. Though that about all you can say in favor of the modern ball."

"Bah!" said the major. "I remember a time when you used to run out in a claw-hammer and to tide the popular panic would result to all the interests involved. There was much still living in the memory with a shudder, the trying times of '37, when the merchants in the Boston merchant's exchange met day after day, insisting that the banks must be sustained; until finally Amos Walker rose up and said, "Gentlemen, the banks must suspend. I say so." There is no record of what was to be followed. There were murmurs of discontent and they were more ready to lynch the ex-governor of the commonwealth for the bold action he had taken, but he was

Said a Russian dancer to a Philadelphia reporter:

"We can learn much from the dancing of animals, but why did we do all of things, to the turkey? There is something a little too vulgar in the turkey's dancing, and they who like to take it as a guide about."

She shrugged her slender shoulders and said:

"That won't do for women."

For Handy Boys and Girls to Make and Do

By A. NEELY HALL

A ROLLER-SKATE GYMNASIA.
A gynghana was originally an East India entertainment. It consists of a group of miscellaneous acrobats, jugglers and "stunts," usually of a unique form. A roll-away gynghana is a brand-new idea that will at once interest every boy.

For the wheelbarrow contest you need one roller-skate, a piece of broom-handle 18 inches long, a block of wood, and some wire. Place the piece of broom-handle across the block of wood, leaving an equal projection on each side, and nail it to the block (Fig. 2), then bind the block to the skate with wire, crossing the wire as shown in Fig. 3 and pulling each turn as tight as possible. Figure 1 shows how to hold on to the ends of the cross stick on the skate while a companion transmits you along in regular "human wheelbarrow" fashion. The broom-handle is a good test of a boy's agility as a skater, for he must skate in and around past obstructions placed along the course without making a single false movement that would cause the spectators of a race. The posts are sticks 2 or 3 feet long, with sharp blocks, just wide enough to make them stand upright, nailed to the ends as shown in Fig. 4. Stride three posts along the sidewalk 10 or 12 feet apart for the first race. Then bring them closer and closer together in each succeeding race. The dotted line in

Fig. 6 indicates how to skate in and out around the posts.

Figure 3 shows a good leaning position. Strides 4 or 5 feet in length should be maintained to free alongside of the sidewalk, at a height of 3 or 4 feet above the ground, with one end nailed to the tree, and the other end supported by a piece of rope run from about the center of the stick to an upper branch of the tree, as shown in Fig. 4. Each stick should have a screw-eye screwed into it, near the outer end, and another near the tree, then a piece of heavy wrapping (cotton) should be slipped through the twine. Several of the hanging blocks should be provided along the skating course, and each skater must lean back and pull down each block as he passes beneath.

TRELLISES FOR VINES.
Every girl who owns a garden will need a few trellises over which to train her climbing vines. The frame from an old umbrella is required for the top of the vine trellis shown in Fig. 1. This is a splendid support for morning-glory and wild cucumber vines.

Use the handle from a broom, or a stick of about the same size, for the center support of the umbrella-bow, and by means of two strips of wood about 12 inches long, attach the umbrella handle to the end of the broom-handle, binding the strip in place with heavy wrapping-twine as shown in Fig. 1.

Run a cord around the ends of the umbrella-rib, slipping it through the eye of each rib, or sewing it to each eye if the cord is too thick to thread it through. Then bury the end of the broom-handle in the ground to a depth of 4 inches, and with it in position take more cord and tie a piece to the end of each rib, and tie a piece halfway between the ribs to the cord you have fastened around the ribs. Cut these cords long enough to reach the ground, and drive a stake into the ground in the right position to fasten each cord.

Plant the vines you wish to have run over the frame, beside the stakes, and entwine the small tendrils around the strings to give the vines a start. Then by guiding the little fingers, as the vines grow, so the vines will spread over to the adjoining strings, the space may be completely later-filled, and by the time the top of the umbrella frame has been reached you will have a thickly covered bower.

The small trellis shown in Fig. 2 is made of lath. Any caliper will furnish you with what you need for a few cents. The lath may be nailed together with nails as shown in Fig. 2, or the edges may be notched as indicated in Fig. 2 and the ends joined together with cord as shown in Fig. 2. Cut the ends of the lath strips pointed with a saw.

A trellis of a more elaborate design, though one that is quite a simple to make, is shown in Fig. 6. The center circular frame is a barrel-hoop, the upright pieces each side of this are sticks about 1 1/2 inches square, and the crosspieces are lath. It is easiest to build this trellis that upon the ground, and then set it in position. First fasten the barrel-hoop between the uprights; then cut the lath crosspieces to the right length, and nail them to the uprights. You will notice that the lath are fastened to both sides of the uprights; therefore a pair of each length of lath is required.

IN THE FATHERLAND OWED LIFE TO QUAIL

INTERESTING BITS OF NEWS FROM THE GREAT GERMAN EMPIRE.

WHAT'S DOING IN OLD HOME

Summary of the Most Important Happenings in the Land of the Kaiser—Timely Items for the German Readers.

While it is unlikely that the German government will change its attitude regarding official participation in the Panama-Pacific exposition, important commercial and industrial concerns will present a greater display of the man products than Germany has ever presented at any exhibition. German arts and crafts and many links in the chain of her social structure will have an important place. The colleges of the committee organized by Herr Bulow, director general of the Hamburg-American line, was mainly due to the fact that it involved too much publicity for the state to not designate to know what they were exhibiting or the extent and nature of their exhibits. That, they held, would bring rivals more readily into the field. It was felt desirable to work with greater secrecy, and that is what is now being done. A business subcommittee of the Berlin committee arrived under the title of the "Centralstelle für die Deutsche Ausstellung in San Francisco" is arranging the exhibits. There also stands an unofficial committee formed of the heads of the chief exhibiting firms in the companies in just many of the public. Officials of the "Centralstelle" in Berlin are surprised at the great desire to exhibit. The "Centralstelle" is fully recognized by the San Francisco authorities and its policy is to accept as exhibitors only important firms and organizations. A number of the unofficial committees say that if the British government would change its attitude the German government certainly would do the same. There was a strong general feeling in favor of official participation, but the German government would rather that Great Britain move first.

Paul Scheerknecht, the well-known writer, prophesies that the architecture of the future will be of glass, and he of glass, he says, "with all good eliminated. The furniture will be of wrought iron, and of many colors, the buildings will be of iron, rustproof, while the walls will be of double glass, to insure warmth, and of many colors, in order to invite inquisitive people. The buildings will be heated by electricity and the walls decorated in fifty millions of colors. The porch of every house will have three sides of glass, and there will be glass garden houses, where one may live in the sunshine by day and the starlight by night."

A German syndicate has been organized for the purpose of circulating news for the foreign press. The chief aim of the syndicate will be to protect the sending out of unreliable and anti-German reading matter to the press of foreign countries. The title of the syndicate is to be at least three years. The syndicate has a capital of 100,000 marks, and the members of the syndicate an equal amount. It must be said that such a news agency is highly necessary.

Kaiser Wilhelm visited Archduke Franz Ferdinand at Innsbruck, Austria, on his way to the front. The Kaiser was accompanied by Grand Admiral von Tirpitz, the secretary of the Imperial navy. The court publications stated that the Kaiser was to inspect the Austro-Hungarian navy. But from other sources it is learned that the naval policy of the triple alliance was thoroughly discussed.

Insurance against unemployment is the burning question in Germany. The matter has of late been before the Reichstag, also before the Bavarian, Saxon, and Prussian state parliaments, and in all cases demands have been made by the laboring parties for the state support of the workmen who, to the number of between 1,000,000 and 1,500,000, are always out of work.

The Kaiser is again attempting to stamp out piracy to army recruits. General Polkowsky, the minister of war, in a recent speech in the Reichstag, adopted the usual attitude of calling the cause of cruelty much less grave and less frequent than charges of desertion. The Kaiser's speech was met with a storm of applause by the officers, but a lieutenant was injured. The accident occurred during a fight from Kohn to Metz.

Berlin—Richard Birnbaum was fifty years old June 11, and the anniversary was celebrated in many of the theaters by festival reproductions of his operas.

Hunter's Experience Seemed Dispensation of Providence.

Pioneer Would Have Been Victim of Indians for His Miraculous Escape—Loaded Gun.

Superstition played an important part in the lives of the Indians that inhabited the prairies of Kansas in the early days of the Santa Fe trail, says the Kansas City Times. Every tribe of Indians was "good medicine" or "bad medicine," and many wonderful stories were circulated about miraculous escapes from death by white men because of some unaccountable act that was dubbed "good medicine" by the Indians. Some tales, however, are true. A Frenchman made "good medicine" once by making out of his "bad medicine" a "good medicine" by sticking a needle in his hollow wooden leg. He was killed, however, excepting with his life after a severe beating.

The long absence from their white fellow by traders and trappers and their close life with the savages made the hardy frontiersmen who blazed the trails of the West more or less superstitious. A story which will illustrate this was told to Col. Henry Inman by "Chief Johnny" Smith, an early day character, while the two were hunting along the Washita river. Others corroborated it. The two in company with the Indians were hunting for soldiers. Their two men had become rather suspicious. When a hunter appeared one day with a mass of quail he was hailed with delight by all except Uncle Johnny. He refused to eat quail, because, he said, one had once saved his life. He was on his way from the Yellowstone to Independence, Mo., in 1847, with some companions, Boyd and Thorpe among them. A wandering party of Apaches overtook them in western Kansas. Fresh meat had been scarce with the travelers, so one morning when several buffaloes appeared they prepared to have a meal or two of buffalo steak. The Indians had not disclosed themselves as yet.

About the time I could fairly see "red" related Uncle Johnny, "I covered three or four buffaloes, and a half mile. I need Boyd and Thorpe start out from camp with their rifles and make for the buffaloes, so I grabbed the ponies, got my rifle, and started on my own.

"By the time I reached the edge of the bottom, Thorpe and Boyd was a crowling to onto a young bull was

WRONG KIND OF GARDENING

"Now comes the season when the wife goes to the country and the husband, in the words of the immortal song, shouts 'Hooray! Hooray!' "The Jernon B. McVada is an actor dinner speech at Duluth began his response to a toast on "The Ladies." "When the ladies are with us, we are safe," he remarked, "but when they go off to country or church, leaving us in town alone, then our troubles begin."

"A man one summer day called on a doctor. "Doc," he said, "I'm all right down." "You look it," said the doctor sympathetically. "I'm not going to prescribe drugs for a man in your condition. No, sir, what I'm going to prescribe for you is gardening."

"The patient started and his unbecomingly pallid turned to a dull brick red. "Doc," he said, "gardening is the cause of all my trouble."

"Humph," said the doctor, "gardening is the cause of all your trouble," said the doctor laconically.

Leading in self-assertion. About Appledy-Jay Dean didn't get no more pride and independence about him than a rabbit.

Ashton Alford—day he didn't knowed I was hidden—when we, with the rest of the outfit, drove the red devils away.

"You see, boys, if I'd drove into that cave the devils would a had me before I could get a patch on my half-dime," have no weaknesses in them. They knowed all that. They knowed I hadn't feed, so they kept a respectable distance."

Post Toasties

For That Bedtime Snack

The kiddies need something that is dainty and appetizing, don't they? And you want to be sure that they have a food that is easily digested—one that will not disturb their sleep.

Post Toasties are surprisingly good at any time.

They are made of the hearts of the finest Indian corn, perfectly cooked, delicately sweetened and salted, rolled into thin, ribbon-like flakes and toasted to a crisp, golden brown.

They have that indescribable flavor—sweet and delicious, that so delights the taste.

Just pour from the package and add cream and sugar, or sprinkle over fresh berries or fruit.

Easy to serve and mighty good.
