The total vote in precinct No. 1 (Barrington) was 297 and in precinct No. 2 (Barrington Center) 86, making a total of 383. The total total two years ago was 291.

The following candidates were eligible for the office of collector:

The proposition of abolishing the poll tax will also be submitted to the voters at the election, April 10.

More Barrington Pupils Eligible

Through an oversight on the part of Country Life Director Eugene Phillips, the names of the following pupils of the Barrington school were omitted from the list of scholars published in last week's REVIEW eligible to attend the semi-final contest at Barrington Center, March 10.

Hazel Meyer, Warren M. G. Williams, Mabel Hobart, Eddie Jahn, Dorothy Klemm, Helen Abbott.

All of the above pupils made grades of 90 or better in the preliminary contest. Besides this spelling "90" which will be oral, a short musical and literary program will be presented.

It is planned to make this occasion rival the old time "spelling bees" of our forefathers in interest and enthusiasm.

The need of our schools to produce better spellers is well recognized, not only by educators, but by the business world as well; hence the present Cook county school administration has attempted a revival in spelling.

Patrons as well as pupils are invited to attend the contest which will be in the old school at Barrington Center on the above date. Programs begin at 8:30 p. m.

THE HEART OF NIGHT WIND

A STORY OF THE GREAT NORTH WEST

The story will be continued next week.

You would have followed me across the world upon your knees and you served me like a slave. And I—I repaid you with a white man's cold! I left you to break your heart among the dusky people who were kinder than I. . . . But the Winds of God, upon the chaste and honest heart of a man, who had given his life to land your faithful eyes, waiting, waiting, brought me back from the far cities—only to see you die in the lodge of Kolwame with my bairn on your breast! Or—yes, I bairn, Kolwame!

With a long sigh, he lowered his head, his fingers gripping his hair.

"Did I dream of death and earth—and, of Kolwame, who had repaid you with that? I struck his hand away when it hit me, but I took the hand back again. You were wild, that forbade you to the shadow cities, that made you a white bairn, but I have forgot. What is it? I would remember."

The bargains left the Preacher's eyes, they became suddenly calm and mild.

With a cry that cut high above the steady sounds of the wind and the fire, Siletz sprang up, a hand flung to his lips, where the sight of the Siletz stood dead in his incision.

"My father!" she cried pitifully, "oh, my father!"

Sandry was breathing heavily, a mist in his eyes and a sadness upon his heart. His victory over Hampden had lost its savor.

But the past with its painful shadows had drifted away from the Preacher, or forever and the look of gentle tenderness was in his eyes.

"My brother!" she said softly, "why do you weep? Ah—the life is gone down and it is dark. I have lost my way. What is the path?"

His fingers groped blindly for the gate.

"What is the way out of the labyrinth? I have lost my way, I have lost my way!"

With a small impulsion Sandry stopped and picked up the instrument. He had played a bit at college. Softly, however, the "Yours" notes began. Jesus. Lover of My Soul," to go on to that ancient place of trusting faith—"We have rest now, Hallelujah, my bairn is safe on board the ship of glory amid the death and dangers, the sin and stress of the moment."

A holy peace spread on the white features.

"Why, certainly!" whispered the teacher of the hills, "how could I forget? That's right. Way out of the labyrinth!"

And then, "Hush! The moment of many wings. Ah, it is God's hand! I go do profound! Gloria in excelsis!"

With that last whispered word the wandering player of hymns, the preacher of the fire-and-brimstone and the love of human souls, had slipped his habit's skirt. Sandry knelt, found a deep pocket, felt therein and brought out a small Bible of a long-ago day. Its edges were thin and frayed and creased with age. Its stiff back with the ogo-black, raised lettering, that long since had faded, was faded. He knew it intimately for the counterpane of that one on Siletz's stand in the little jewel room. It had many openings of the cover, and it tell apart, first at the seams and then at a passage whose beginning caught his eye as he placed it in the loving hands that made to receive it. The words were dim, faded. The faint words where which he had last bid struck him once when he sought for some clue to the Preacher's identity, now seemed to ring in his ears, stuporous requiem for the nameless, high-souled, drifted from the ways-of-men who had spent his blamable life in faithful atonement for a shadowy wrong.

"We shall ascend into the hill of the Lord, and he will teach us his way to our hearts. Who hath not lifted up his soul unto vanity, nor worn deserts."

The words were the last of that part which he had so long forgotten, and which Destiny had detected and flash back to him for one revealing moment.

CHAPTER XXX.

"The Night Wind is Not Like You," Sandry laid the Bible under the lifeless hand, looked about desperately for something to cover the sanguined face between its white curls, and finding nothing but the tall ferns gathered in a armful which he spread over the body.

Then he faced Hampden in deadly quiet.

"I had meant prison," he said, "now I mean the electric chair."

The other laughed.

"Mean an' damn'd!" he said impudently, "you'll never get me through this. I am a man who is content with a clump of ferns that held him, but Sandry went over and plucked it up."

He stood a moment considering.

A hot wind was whipping up the dips on every side and Black Bolt was stepping unceasingly, pulsating, pulsating.

Preacher and she would ruin you! Shoot them, Sandry, shoot them—or give me the gun!"

Shuddering, Sandry covered her savage eyes with his hand. Their voices, silent, were thin. But the shoot him loose, crying for death. "Kill them both, for they will ruin you if they go free! She's got the packet. Kill her and get the packet!"

"What's this?" he cried hoarsely. "This girl has written about you—about a man by the name of Muggleton!"

Sandry's face went white beneath its grim as he raised his eyes and looked at Poppy Ordway. She returned his gaze.

"Then—" "True," she said, "that's what I went east. I'm the winner at last. The woman was a dangerous woman, but she will create there, though you did not know it, and I was determined to make sure. Fair means or foul—mu. And there's no law for a genius. I know and you know that you are—genius!" he said, throwing his head back.

Then Sandry dropped his eyes to Siletz and spoke as if he shored some compelling power, some urge to justify himself before her.

"I answer to the Right Law. I observe the ancient Right Law, Little Siletz. I am a man of the law. I am a man of the law. I am a man of the law. I am a man of the law."

"I know!" cried Sandry. "I know!" the smoke was so dense that the actors in this drama could scarcely see each other's faces, but they took no note of it. The climber rose and shut them out in a sound-a-moan silence. The gun was silent. Ordway, edging sideways, was driven to the possibilities of the moment. He saw the gun hanging in Sandry's hand, forgotten. He saw Siletz devoring his face with her blazing eyes of passion. He saw his moment have made her great.

She felt with a flash of her genius the drama of the situation, the tensity, readiness of the moment for wild, fantastical things, and accepted it at once.

"Yes!" she cried, "yes! I offer Sandry you—and myself!"

With a beautiful gesture she stepped toward Sandry and held out both hands, her golden head up, and blazed blue eyes steaming with excitement, her whole expression, such a lure with the mighty abandon of her passion. He saw his moment have made her great.

With one great bound he flung himself high in the air, leaped the space between and came down with his great weight upon the shoulders of the other man, clutching for back and throat, drawing the one to him in a grip of iron, pushing the other away.

Sandry lay down like a reed, as he was bound, and when he rose there was an ominous snap. The bone of his right leg, newly healed and fragile, gave way under the strain.

As the two men fell, both guns, one in Sandry's hand and the one in his trousers' hand, tumbled loosely to the ground.

Siletz crouched over Sandry, who was on his hands and knees, holding him, and, as she did so, she was an ominous snap. The bone of his right leg, newly healed and fragile, gave way under the strain.

As the two men fell, both guns, one in Sandry's hand and the one in his trousers' hand, tumbled loosely to the ground.

"Who Wins Now?" He Said. "Brains—Brains!"

nows of their fate. Miss Ordway raised pale hands and let them drop while she stared with eyes of frightful horror. Siletz moved never a muscle.

"It's you to go back!" she cried, "that big things are about to happen, and you will not. Now I shall pay you for all things—for what you would do to Sandry. Also I pay him for that." She pointed to the still form under the ferns.

"There is a way out—the secret trail which only I know and which we take."

PEACE TALK SOON

VON BETHMANN-HOLLWEG TELLS AMBASSADOR GERARD TO HALT VACATION.

TO ASK WASHINGTON TO AID

German Chancellor Intimates to American Envoy at Berlin That End of Great European War May Be Near. May Address the Reichstag.

Washington, March 22—Germany has officially intimated to the United States government that the services of the Reichstag may be required to be utilized soon in the interest of peace in Europe. Within the last four days Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg of Germany has conveyed to Ambassador James W. Gerard in Berlin a general idea of the peace terms Germany is willing to discuss. Furthermore, Mr. Gerard received a message from the same minister that it will be disadvantageous for him to take a vacation at this time, as he had planned. Mr. Gerard has changed his plans, therefore, and awaits further communications from the German chancellor.

The recent discussion between the chancellor and the German minister of a most friendly and intimate nature, the former did most of the talking. While no direct reference was made to the resignation of Admiral von Tirpitz, stress was laid on the desire of Germany to remain at peace with all neutral countries and hope was expressed for an early termination of the war itself.

With reference to the terms of peace, only the most general expressions were used. Nevertheless, it is possible to say that Germany has in mind the rehabilitation of Belgium and has no present intention of asking for any indemnity.

On the other hand, Germany is not disposed to relinquish all of northern France without the payment of a heavy indemnity and will further insist on the return of the German colonies in Africa. These terms are not likely to be irrevocable, but may be subject to modification if adequate reasons arise.

It is considered likely that in the next few days the German chancellor will make a notable speech in the Reichstag which may have a significant bearing on the points outlined to the American ambassador.

PASSES RESOLUTION APPROVING COURSE IN MEXICO.

Vessel Carried 87 Passengers and Crew of 300, All Reported Saved.

President Sends Thanks to Senator La Follette, Who Introduced Measure in Upper House.

London, March 15.—The 12,000-ton Royal Dutch Lloyd liner "Tribuna," outward bound from Amsterdam for the River Plate, with 87 passengers, three of whom were Americans, and a crew of 300 was sunk: "Thursday of Nordhinder Lightship, on the Dutch coast." A Dutch freighter from Amsterdam quotes the captain, Capt. K. H. Wytsma, as saying his ship was torpedoed. Semiofficial reports from Berlin claim that she struck a mine. Adjudicates that all on board were saved.

The "Tribuna" was struck about three o'clock in the morning, a great hole being torn in her stern. She remained afloat, however, until about 8:30. She sank about two miles east of Nordhinder lightship.

The explosion put the steering gear of the vessel out of commission, but the iron board was injured. Water ran into the ship, but the iron board's stern penetrated the corral and engine room. It was alone owing to the fact that the modern construction of the ship—she was in service only a year—enabled her to float for several hours after receiving her death blow, that the loss of life was not greater.

The "Tribuna," which carried a general cargo and coal, was making for Falmouth, where she was to take aboard passengers for South America. When the explosion occurred, her proximity to the coast enabled rescue ships to reach her quickly. Her calls for help were answered by a life-saving vessel from the Hook of Holland, the Dutch steamer "Kratat" and two other ships, one Dutch and one Swedish.

The American navy was sent immediately to the White House and President Wilson directed that his appreciation be conveyed to Senator La Follette.

Senate Approves $11,000,000 Appropriation to Build U. S. Factory.

Washington, March 23.—The Tillman bill to provide for the erection or purchase by the government of an armor plate factory at a cost not to exceed $11,000,000 was passed on Thursday by a committee of the Senate.

Previous to passage the measure adopted without a roll call an amendment by Senator Wadsworth providing that any plant to be erected should be located at a place approved by general board of the navy with special reference to considerations of safety in time of war.

$2,000,000 FIRE IN TEXAS

Many Perish When Grenades Explode at Monterrey, Mex.—Loss Heavy.

Laredo, Tex., March 20.—The post office and public baths at Monterrey, Mexico, were destroyed by fire, according to private advices reaching here. The loss, it was said, will run far into the hundreds of thousands. All the mail in the post office was destroyed.

The origin of the fire is unknown, but it is believed to be accidental.

Fourteen Carranza soldiers and ten civilians were killed in an explosion of a carload of grenades and artillery shells at the Carranza station of the Mexican railroad lines at Monterrey, Mexico, last Tuesday, according to passengers reaching here from Monterrey. The loss was suppressed by the Carranza authorities because of the tension existing between the United States and Mexico.

Twenty dead were reported to be Mexicans. Immediately after the explosion a mountain cloud of smoke spread over the city and the cry, "The Americans have arrived," rang throughout the poorer section.

The flames made a clean sweep of the southern portion of the city, burning a path three and four blocks wide extending to the public square.

Hair Turns White in a Night.

That hair over turns white in a single night has been emphatically declared by some doctors, is spite of historic instances—such as that of Marie Antoinette—to the contrary. But Dr. Lehrer called the attention of the Society of the Red Cross to the fact that a young French soldier who was blown into the air by a mine and buried in the earth, sprang up with white hair.

The man was deafened by the detonation, his face was buried, and there were several bruised and broken bones.

He was taken to a neighboring hospital, where the following day he noticed four lots of white hair on the fronto-parieto-occipital region of his head.

The loss of color was complete from the roots to the ends of the hairs, and the white hairs were as firmly as their brown neighbors.

PERSHING WANTS MORE U. S. TROOPS FOR VILLA HUNT

Regiments Ordered to Guard 200
Miles of Communication
Lines From Attack.

BANDIT IS STILL FIGHTING

Carranza Troops Press Close on Heels
Of Rebel American Flying Column Near Scene of Battle—
Wire to Border Cut.

Washington, March 23.—General Pershing reports that he has reached a point near Villa's and his followers. The dispatch indicates that Villa is possible still may be trapped.

More Troops for Mexico.
San Antonio, March 23.—General Funston asked the way on Tuesday for more troops to sent into Mexico, after long consideration of the advisability of combining the operations of the Francisco (Villa) with the forces now commanded by General Pershing.

General Pershing suggested that another regiment be sent to him, and General Funston asked the department for what he characterized as an adequate force.

With Cavalry to Mexico.

It was reported at General Funston's headquarters that the fifth cavalry, of which one squadron is at Fort Myer, Va.—another at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., and the third at Fort Sheridan, Ill.—would be brought to the border at once and sent forward along General Pershing's line of communication to Chihuahua. The Twenty-ninth Infantry, stationed at Fort Davis, Texas, was brought to the border.

The only reason given for strengthening General Pershing's force was that his field of operations has become so extended that his main line of communication and the subsidiary lines were much weaker than they should be.

Our Precautionary Move.

"Merely a precautionary move," was the way General Funston answered all suggestions as to his motives, other than it was deemed to strengthen the lines.

Pershing Cut Off From U. S.

Wire communication between the United States and General Pershing's northern expedition in northern Chihuahua was cut off entirely yesterday. It was officially announced from military headquarters here. "It is asserted that the army wireless station at Casas Grandes failed, the only remaining line of communication into Mexico being an army field telegraph wire, which has been practically useless for the last two days, because it has been cut in 5 miles of places between Columbus and Chihuahua 30 miles south of the border.

It is not believed here that General Funston is worried to any extent by reports of alleged growing antagonism among Carranza troops, although he carefully studied all reports, official and unofficial, on that part of the situation.

Villa Troops Not Located.

It has not been forgotten at his headquarters, however, that Villa has many more troops somewhere in northern Mexico than the few hundred he had when he started his flight before the pursuing troops of the two countries. Realizing the mobile character of Villa's bands, it was not believed it would be possible to much General Pershing's forces to Lake Chapala, toward which one of his columns was reported to be moving; it is almost 200 miles from the border, and by the time the column directed toward Carrizo and Naulchuca arrived at their destination they also had almost as far south.

South of Chihuahua, where the cavalry detachments that are following the trails into the heart of the country where Villa is known to have gone are operating in a triangle of approximately 3,000 square miles area.

Many More Troops Needed.

The chase for Villa has grown larger than even many military men who had studied the situation carefully believed it would. It has assumed the proportions of a national emergency, and it was pointed out that if it became necessary to extend the operations much more it might be necessary to move into the field almost all the remaining available forces of the regular army.

That statement eliminates some 20,000 men now in the southern department, the greatest number on duty in Texas, New Mexico and Arizona, along the Mexican border. General Funston explained that he could not tell where any of these for the operations in Mexico, because it was equally necessary to guard the frontier.

GLOOM AT FORT SHERIDAN

Troopers Given Up Hope of Getting to Mexico—Lines Guard Given Vacant.

Chicago.—Fort Sheridan troopers have given up hope of getting to Mexico. Every detail has been completed and the first march could be started the day after yesterday. Now, however, Colonel P. L. Doner, directed that every man in the regiment receive a card stating positively whether he would go to Mexico if the call came.

Border Town Ask Guards.

Similar demands are being made at his headquarters for a body of well-armed and committed troops from towns along the Mexican-American border. These petitioners have earnestly insisted that they feared raiders from across the boundary line, many of them offering what appeared to them evidence that raids might be expected.

Official reports regarding Villa's fight with Carranza forces at Cruces and Naulchuca, south of Gómez, were vague and contradictory. Whether the American column of cavalry that was advancing southward on the trail leading to Cruces encountered Villa was merely a guess at headquarters.

New Clash Due Soon.

The last reports received here told of Villa's repulse with Carranza's forces near Naulchuca. If Villa defeated the Mexican government troops, it was regarded as probable that he had continued his movement into the south, where he might remain unhosted for some time.

However, the American troops believed he has an excellent chance of intercepting him on the trail or to the country either to the right or left.

Villa was reportedly defeated by Carranza forces at Cruces, just south of Villa, and to have retreated into the Santa Clara mountains.

American troops have been dispatched to the vicinity where Villa was reported as fighting with the constitutionalists, according to the Columnists.

The Americans went in a separate flying column. It is understood that constitutionalists have been dispatched to the same neighborhood to co-operate in attempting to turn Villa.

A separate column of American troops had been sent to the vicinity of Cruces, where Villa was reported.

Rangers Seize Smugglers.

Texan rangers and the cavalry patrols have commenced a roundup of Mexicans along the frontier who are suspected of being Villa's and of being engaged in the smuggling of arms and supplies across the Rio Grande.

Members of the American expeditionary force who sent back from the front on couriers say there is considerable suffering on account of the heat of the day and the sharp cold at night. Some of the officers have ordered sleeping coats lined with furs.

Infantrymen are especially affected by the sand, and many are suffering with swollen and blistered feet.

Two U. S. Flyers Missing.

Colombus, N. M., March 23.—Two airmen of the first squadron have been lost in flight on route from here to the front in Mexico. Capt. B. D. Foulds, in command of the squadron, reported their failure to arrive and said their whereabouts were unknown.

Major W. H. Williams, 1st Lt. H. W. Williams and Lt. E. S. Gorrell, six machine gunners, arrived safely. Exceedingly high winds have made army airmen's tasks hazardous.

A minor engine difficulty or a loss of the route by a few miles to east or west might cause many hours' delay in the semihostile country where the machines are flying to the front.

The country is difficult of access for repairs if engine trouble or minor accidents require the sending of machine gunners to the stranded planes. Wind conditions are extremely variable, so that a machine landing for a temporary stop might not find it advisable to land again for resumption of flight.

An Aeroplane, one of six to arrive, was partly wrecked in a 50-foot fall.

The pilot, Lt. S. T. Bowen, was injured but not fatally.

Refused to Fly Eight.

It was learned on unquestionable authority that the troops of the federal army, which had been sent to the front at Casas Grandes had been withdrawn and are now in and about Juarez. From the same source it was learned that at least one detachment of Carranza troops had refused to follow Villa and had withdrawn on the bandit's approach, leaving him to itself.

It was learned on unquestionable authority that the troops of the federal army, which had been sent to the front at Casas Grandes had been withdrawn and are now in and about Juarez. From the same source it was learned that at least one detachment of Carranza troops had refused to follow Villa and had withdrawn on the bandit's approach, leaving him to itself.

The Reason Why We Buy and Sell Litchfield Spreaders

We know we can't afford to build up a trade on an inferior machine or implement of any kind. We might succeed in getting a good start due to our own efforts, but if we haven't a good article to back up our efforts our customers will buy the customers of someone else. There is a shorter way to temporary profits, but there is no such thing as temporary success. The results that include disappointment for somebody is not a success although it may be profitable for a time. We had this in mind when we were looking for a spreader to handle.

The Litchfield Manufacturing Company, told us they would build for us the Litchfield Spreader and if the best spreader on the market. We made them prove it—made them show why it was best before we would make a contract. Before we would push it we made sure it was worth pushing. We examined all others and after making comparisons we were convinced that the Litchfield Spreader was superior.

We were looking for the machine that would do the best work for the longest time with the least repairs. When we investigated the Litchfield Force-Fed, Self-Cleaning, Endless Conveyor, No-Choke Box, Bull Dog Cylinder, Oil Packed Main Bearings, Metal Side Hatch and 4-in. Channel Steel Sills; we made up our minds that this was the machine we had been looking for—the one we would sell to our customers with a clear conscience and guarantee we like it and so will you if you buy one.

The written Five Year Guarantee Bond showed that the Litchfield Mfg. Co. had confidence in this machine—knew they built it and just what it would do. We looked up the Litchfield Mfg. Co. and found that they had a large, well equipped, up-to-date factory—had been in the manufacturing business for thirty years and were thoroughly responsible in every way. The more we see of the Litchfield Spreader and the more we learn about it, the more we like it and so will you if you buy one.
