Receives Letter of Praise

Chicago, April 13, 1916

Mr. J. H. Taylor,
Editor,
Chicago.

Dear Sirs:

It has been brought to my attention through an item appearing in the Barrington Review of March 11, that your train was flagged out of the station by a party desiring to get his sick wife onto the train for Chicago. I have written to the train for Chicago, asking him to get his wife home as quickly as possible, and to see that the man's life by all means is given the first place in front of No. 51 northbound when he was leaving your engine.

"Such acts as this certainly show that you are alert to your duty and we want to commend you for your quick judgment and correct action in the handling of this matter.

"This will be read to the Wisconsin Division Safety Committee at their next meeting and will be put in our next Safety Committee report."

Yours truly,
G. W. DALEY,
Superintendent.

Clean-up Days Well Observed

The two "clean-up" days on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week in the village were generally observed by the public, which took advantage of the opportunity of having a regular call for rubbish, a common good custom in larger places, but the first day followed here.

Superintendent of Streets, Edward Peters, under orders from the village board, with the help of two teamsters, took about twenty-four loads to the old creek bed north of the public service station. From this time on the council forbids any throwing of rubbish in ditches or vacant property, any place.

Send word to Marshal Peters if you want rubbish removed. Everyone is forbidden to place ashes on the streets, parkway or curb line.

The Cook county side of town pawned the wagon more than the Lake county side. This is because the latter side is more particular or it is because people did not hold the census of the majority to tidy up their yards.

Hawk-Berlin Nuptials

On Easter morning, April 23, occurred the marriage of George Hawk, son of August Hawk, of Cuba township, to Miss Dora Berlin of Palatine, daughter of Mrs. John Berlin. The marriage service was performed by the local pastor of the church of which the bride is a member. Only immediate members of both families were present and a few young friends. The bride is quite young; she wore a white gown and carried a bouquet of pink and white roses.

The couple will reside in the Horgan farm where the groom has worked for many years. Their many friends wish them much success in their new life.

WRITES LETTER FROM CALIFORNIA

Former Resident Tells About New Town in the West—Much Delighted With Country and Climate

Now we publish a part of a letter received at this office from Mr. Edward Wasmann of South Hawley street who with his family have been in Van Nuys, California, all winter.

"After April 20 we will be at 936 Berzel avenue, Los Angeles. We like Van Nuys very well, but it is a new town and has not all the conveniences, such as gas for cooking which we miss very much, but we do have paved roads, or culverts, wherever we want to go.

This town is just five years old, but we have a big pipe organ factory and a clothing factory nearly finished.

It is a great valley for fruits such as apricots, peaches and plums which have been raised without irrigation, and we are having ripe strawberries now out of our garden.

Mr. Wasmann is gaining a little; he has been a very sick man and so far has not enjoyed himself very much.

The roses are just now in bloom; the trees are in full leaf, and all the birds are singing.

The farmers are cutting their first crop of alfalfa and the barley and oats are headed out. There are thousands of acres of sugar beets planted.

I have met one of our former Barrington people on the street in Los Angeles. Mrs. Howarth I met on Broadway one day and a few hours ago at Christmas time met Reese

Meyer in a market. Last week I called on Mrs. Matlair who has been sick for over a year and she died on April 12.

Thanking you very much for your favor. Mrs. E. F. WISEMAN.

New Cinema Very Gratifying

The patronage at the new moving picture show which opened at Village hall Tuesday evening was very gratifying to the management and the general report of the pictures from the public is that they were splendid.

Catch [Braham, operator] and local manager, found that he had to ask for order in the audience. This is to be expected at first for "rough house" actions have been permitted at some shows here and the general attendance here must learn that quiet and politeness are expected in any first class exhibition. In a hall of this size, however, the purpose, after being attended to, the noise would not be tolerated in an unsuitable hall

with unavoidable chattering.

Tonight night the film is "Jordan

Is a Hard Road," also a humorous reel. Next week Tuesday, there will be a five reel drama, featuring Katherine Kwiric, in "Crooked to the End" and a two reel comedy, "Friday night, May 5, will be Helen Ware in "The Worst of Friends" and a comedy reel of Weber & Fields, world famous comedians.

Additional Parking

Barrington's down town parking, so well liked last year by the planting of additional shrubby parts of the railway, was recently set back to the Leavenworth area south of the Laramie building on the triangular Laramie lot south of the Leavenworth garage and the tree bank on the south side of Main street, west of the station.

H. W. Blaney of Bloomington, who prepared the park plan, has ordered the necessary shrubs and trees and will be here Friday and Saturday to superintend the planting.

G. W. Dailey, superintendent of the Waukegan division of the C. & N. W.

railway, always ready to help along a good cause, has agreed to provide the necessary black dirt.

Special Offer

Whoever wins the piano to be drawn at Goff's market on May 18, will also receive a special certificate of scholarship in the Northwestern School of Musik in Milwaukee for a two years

course of lessons by mail.

A registration of $1.00 will be required to be concerned on the school: membership, and it is a month's pay-to cover cost of postage, mailing tubes for the instruction books and sheet music and for clerical work.

The same attention will be given to a student by mail as in the regular $4.00 a course at this school.

Getting Ideas for New Building

A. L. Robertson, H. J. Haagelund,

A. W. Meyer, E. W. Riley, Edward P.

Castles and Miles T. Laramie, members of the board of directors of the First Bank of Barrington, settled on the "hicks" of this village to Monday getting ideas for the erection of a new bank building in Barrington.

Real Estate Transfers

Wilhelmina Desprez, of 23, occu-ped the house of Mr. and Mrs. John Thielis of south Barrington.

Anton Bauman and wife to Robert

C. Keen, of part of section 21 and 25 in Cuba township, W. D. $10,000.

BARRINGTON TEACHER HAS MADE REMARKABLE RECORD

Leo Zelenka Laramore has been teaching German and history in the Barrington high school since last September, but there are very few people in Barrington who realize that he is a man of splendid attainments with a past full of success in several lines of study and artistic abilities. His true modesty has kept him from allowing this community to know of his achievements, but he will receive the appreciation of our citizens which is due him.

Aside from his school work he has given to our concert programs.

"In earliest childhood he manifested a talent for music and Crown Prince Rudolph of Austria, hearing the child sing when only four years old, was so struck by his talent that he insisted the boy should have a musical education, so he arranged to pay for the lessons. At six this genius made his first concert appearance. At eighteen he attended the world famous conservatory of music at Prague, studying harp and piano, and upon his return to Barrington he became a teacher of music, first in a private school and with country men, a tribe unconquered to American music and the free lack of manners often exhibited by "Young Americans" who have given him some trouble.

He received the Order for Art and Sciences, a degree, given at Darmstadt, Germany. He played with great artists on the harp and pipe organ. In 1910 he played at the Berlin Royal Court church a fine organ solo.

Mr. Laramore has been in America five years, coming from Germany where he was raised, the son of a Bohemian doctor and a German mother; he was born in Bohemia, but on his return to his home country he did not go to his former home as in an unsuitable hall

with unavoidable chattering.

Tomorrow night the film is "Jordan Is a Hard Road," also a humorous reel. Next week Tuesday, there will be a five reel drama, featuring Katherine Kured, in "Crooked to the End" and a two reel comedy, "Friday night, May 5, will be Helen Ware in "The Worst of Friends" and a comedy reel of Weber & Fields, world famous comedians.

He has appeared in all the large cities in most of the states. His musical compositions include organ, harp and piano duets and a cello and organ, "Longfellow's 'Psalm of Life' set to music."

His special work at present is in preparation for a professorship in the largest American colleges; he will be graduated in June from Northwestern University, Evanston with the degree of Bachelor of Arts and he was graduated and given the Bachelor of Science degree in Germany; he has at this time 120 and two-thirds credits in his college work and 120 credits in his research of the leading universities of Europe. Besides teaching for three hours each morning in Barrington, he keeps up his college studies, teaches several private classes in Chicago in languages of which he speaks seven and is teaching for the state of Illinois under civil service for the West Side Park Commission in the field house in Holstein park, a building similar to the Barrington school; here he has classes in singing and orchestra training.

Although giving his time now to gaining experience in teaching in America he has been a concert player of high merit. Last winter he appeared in 1909 in concert in the middle west, and in 250, two years ago, while during his short residence in America he has made over 1000 professional appearances as a harpist. Last week he was offered $150 for one number on a program but refused for lack of time.

The Music News, an American musical journal published in Chicago, gave on August 21, 1915, the following account of Mr. Laramore:

"The addition of Leo Laramore to the list of European artists who are now making America their permanent home is of unusual importance. The harp has all too few masters in this country and the advent of several who have planned to join the class of virtuosos of recognized first standing will therefore prove a welcome of merit to the Barrington people. His organ forte is a French and German class organizes in Barrington this summer, as he hopes to rest in this village during the hot weather.

Several have planned to join the class of virtuosos of recognized first standing and others are invited to leave their names at this office.

The City of Numbered Days

SYNOPSIS.

Brouillard, chief engineer of the Niagara irrigation dam, goes out on camp to the automobile racing camp at the dam project. He meets a West Christian, who has been a member of the reformed party and explains the reclamation work to him. West is given a chance to make money. Brouillard is forced to hint from the planer, who tells Gresham, "You'll come down here and look kindly at the work we are doing. We are building a company and obtaining government contracts for the dam construction. A local city sprung up about the site. Steve Horsford, for whom you have a grudge, Brouillard does not influence President Horsford. Steve is a local boy, born in this place, thus opening an easy market for him. He is from the 'Little Sioux' gang. Brouillard and the company's promoter, Clark.

If you were in love with a girl and a beast of a man, who had the power to get you fired from your job, made a smirking remark about her to you, would you still be in love with her? Even if the act caused an indefinite postponement of your wedding?

"I can't believe it, Murray. It's a leap out of the book of Bedlam! Take a look at it and see what the bullet holes; this entire camp, fake it built upon one solid, iron-concrete fact—the fact that we're here, with a job on our hands big enough to handle an active, present-moment market for hand-to-hand matador battles. I only notice, also, behind the bubble-blowing, if we were not here the Niagara Improvement company would never have been heard of."

Gresham laughed. "Your arguing that twice two makes four doesn't change the facts. I believe it when I see it," was Brouillard's reply; and with this the master rested for the moment.

It was later in the day, as hour or so after the arrival of the new supply in the engine room, that Brouillard was given to see another and still less tolerable side of his temporary guest. Horsford had come into the office to plant himself coldly in the makeshift easy chair, that of a big, black, attack-appetizer.

"I've been looking over your rules and regulations, Brouillard," he began, after an interval of silence. "I'm afraid you'll be surprised to learn that Brouillard had been careful not to let his new employer know of his plan to take in trying to transplant the local Connecticut blue laws out here. Your workmen ought to have the right to believe it?"

to lab "Amy, sweetest and most sapient of diplomatis."

"If you don't like my name—" she began, and then she would say, "and other things, too, tell me who am a collection of contradictions."

Brouillard's gaze went past the shapely little figure in the string hamock to lose itself in the far Tiananmen distances.

"You are a bundle of surprises," he said, "and I am a man, though slip to speech. "What can't possibly know about my thoughts?"

She made a funny little grimace at him. "It was 'contradictions' a moment ago and now it is 'surprises.' Which reminds me, you haven't told me who am a collection of contradictions."

"Oh, I can't catalogue them if you push me to it. One minute you are the Madonna lady that I can't recall, calm, reposeful, truthful, and all that, you know—so truthful that those child-like eyes of yours would make a stirring imbecile of the man who should be your husband. The next minute you are a bundle of contradictions."

"And the next minute?"

"The next minute you are a witch, laughing at the man's little weaknesses, putting your finger on them as accurately as if you could read his mind, holding him in your power, and his mouth's might, over to his own. At such times you are, or it is enough to you to call it, to call it, to give a man a fit of seeing things."

Her laugh was like a schoolgirl's, light-hearted, ringing, deliciously unrestrained.

"What a picture!" she commented.

And then: "I can draw a better one of you, Monsieur Victor de Brouillard."

"Do it," he dared.

"Very well, then! Once upon a time you were a very bright, young man, who would have been a very upright, young man. You would cheerfully have died for a principle in those days, and you would have allowed the enemy to cut you up to come in little inch cubes before you would have admitted that any pig was even niente to be plucked."

He was smiling mirthlessly, with the black mephisto taking the cardiac upcurve.

"Then what happened?"

"One of two things, or maybe both of them. You were pushed out into the life ranks, you come sort of a civilian, or a man who doesn't want it, or is, that is true?"

He nodded gravely. "It is all true enough. You haven't added anything more than a graceful little touch here and there. Who has been telling you these things about me? Not Gresham?"

"Not, Murray Gresham; it was the man you think you know best in all the world—who is also probably the one you know the least—yourself."

"Good heavens! Am I really such a transparent egoist as all that?"

"One of two things are true," she retorted. "The one is that your ego is sound and clear-eyed and strong. In others it is weak—in the same way that passion is weak; it will sacrifice all it has or hopes to have in some sudden fury of self-assumption."

She said to put her hands to her hair, then to pull them down again, then to lay them upon the great ditch where the endless chain of concrete buckets added to the deep and widespread foundations of the dam. Across the river, a group of hidden sawmills sang their mournful song. In the middle distance, the cabin of the big, old, aged, roughly indicated structures over the valley level, the tall chimney stacks of the new cement plant were rising, and from the quarries beyond the plant the dull thunder of the blasts drifts in.

This was not Brouillard's first visit to the cabin on the Masiangale chain by many. In the earliest days of the valley activities Smith, the Buckskin cattlemen, had been Any Massingale's escort to the reclusion camp. "Just a couple of weeks ago," he said, "and the unexceptional difficulties had done the rest. From that day forward the young woman had hopefully opened her door to Brouillard and his assistants, and any member of the corps, from Lexington, the masons, who had lost his youthful heart to Miss Massingale on his first visit, was welcome.

MISS MASSINGALE acquiesced in a little uplift of her party round about.

"Just the same, you don't pretend to say you are enjoying it," she said to manifest depreciation.

"Oh, I don't know. My work is done. "A few weeks ago I was right across the river. I seemed so crudely unattractive that a pigmy-pink match at that distance from Well Street."

"But now," she queried, "now, I suppose the young woman is not shrinking into littleness, not to say cheapness, when one can get the proper perspective. And your life up here on Chillicothe has given you the right to be a little more than a girl."

The trouble shadows in the eyes of the young woman who was sitting in the sunbeam, who was very pale, the flesh hummock, with open-eyed frankness.

"I suppose it is—one form of it. At least it is civilization in the making. Everything has to have some sort of a beginning."

Miss Massingale acquiesced in a little uplift of her party round about.

Brouillard, sitting on the top step of the porch, raised his head against the sunbeam, and then he said, "I'm afraid it is in that way that you please," he returned gravely. "What is your need?" he said after the diverging pause, defining the word more for his own satisfaction than for self-defense.

APPEAR YOUR BEST AT HOME

Home is the place where a man should appear at his best. He who is careful at home and no one only abroad is no true gentleman. Indeed, those who cannot be considerate to those of his own household will never be really courteous to strangers.

It is in a man's home that his real character is seen; as he appears there, so he is elsewhere, however skillfully he may for a time conceal his real nature. It would do much to promote happiness in the home if all members of the family were to be as kind and polite to one another as they are to guests.

The visitor receives bright smiles, pleasant words and constant attention. Home folks are often cross, rude, selfish and fault-finding towards one another.

Are not our own as worth of our love and care as is the stranger within our own gates?

WOMAN'S CLUBS A BENEFIT

Occasionally we hear some man make a sarcastic remark about women's clubs. He shouldn't! They are a good thing, when properly conducted, just as are the clubs to which men belong.

Women are more mentally developed today than the women of fifty years ago and their knowledge naturally craves an outlet and an opportunity for expression. No more are the majority of women satisfied with visiting over the back fence and talking about what time they got the bread out of the oven and what they had for dinner the day before and whether the woman next door is good and takes care of her family and about the time she has had got home the night before.

Today women are taking an interest in the world outside their home walls as they should and they do not necessarily have to neglect home and family either. An up-to-date woman's club does a lot of good. When a body of women get together, each with some idea for the betterment of political and social conditions, the best that is in them comes to the front and serves to broaden and develop the moral and material welfare of the community.

The City
Numbered Days

By FRANCIS LYND

Mr. Lynde has outlined himself in this story of "Minneapolis," the "hidden" western city that grew up in the shadow of a big irrigation dam under construction, and for a time, threatened to stop the dam's completion.

For the men there is the story of the big business, gas and the government engineer.

For the women there is the story of the lovely and loving little woman who wouldn't let her man be any smaller than the man she knew and loved in him.

And for everybody there is a most charming picture of western life. —

HOW RUSSIAN TROOPS REACHED FRANCE

The above map shows the probable route of the Russian forces landed at Marschall. While it was reported the troops came from Archangel, this is hardly probable, early in the spring, the channel from the White sea to the Arctic generally remaining frozen from October to May.
