"Enlarged Service in the Overcoming of Poverty, Disease and Sin."

By WALTER DILL SCOTT, President, Northwestern University.

Chicago is destined to become the educational center of the United States. Now is that time when for today these of the twenty-four great universities of this country are situated in the state of Illinois and all three are housed either in whole or in part in Chicago.

What is a university? Is it an institution for preparation? Is it a place for the development of a winning football team?

Is it a place for the propagation of the faith? Is it a place for securing for the search of a husband? Is it a place for the discipline of youth?

A university can be all these things, and still fall of realizing the true ideal of a modern university. The foundation upon which Northwestern rests is service. Service, enlarged service, service at once more comprehensive and more spiritual, must be the rock upon which we shall continue to build.

It is service in the overcoming of poverty, disease and sin. The gift of alms is the least effective of all forms of charity. What we need is to train people in the ways to overcome poverty.

As to the suffering created by disease, the need of relieving such suffering is not to be compared to the need of education in the way to avoid and eliminate disease. To teach the latter is one of the functions of a university that is founded on the ideal of the larger service.

And, as to sin, the greatest need in the world today is not more money, but more morality. The foundation upon which we shall continue to build is service.

And because it is really and truly in it that it is doing its share in clearing the world of education of the odor of denying practices and methods which have long since ceased to have any significance, but have not been buried.

A Right Every Young Girl Should Have During the Years of Courtship.

By MARY BARTHELEW, Chicago Juvenile Court.

A living room for every girl in Chicago, a place where she may safely and decently bring her boy friends during her courtship period. It is impossible for parents to provide a place where their daughters may bring their boy friends. It would be desirable to make parlors out of our public schools in just the same way that we have made social centers of them. We should make it possible for the girls to receive their courtship in some place where their parents may come and visit them.

The existing housing conditions have forced many girls to meet their boy friends outside of their homes in public places. No matter how refined or proper the girl, a man or boy can not have quite the same respect for and attitude toward her that he would have had he met her in her own home.

This housing condition in Chicago presents a very great problem. It is more serious in the life of a girl than in that of a boy. Every girl is entitled to respect in the home during her courtship period.

The children of today no longer look to their homes for their joys and pleasures. They only look to them as places to eat at, places to sleep in, and places where they can put in their demands for spending money and other entertainment.
