THURSDAY, MAY 20 IS COMMUNITY BARGAIN DAY IN WAUKEGAN

School News

And the merchants are determined to make it the greatest bargain day in the city's history. Every place of any importance in the city is participating in the event and every line of business is represented. Months ago committees commenced the preliminary work. They organized the merchants, and laid the foundation for a city-wide bargain. All the leading merchants entered into the affair with enthusiasm and are now busily planning to make it the biggest day their stores ever had.

One prominent merchant who has been very active in promoting the event, informs us that while United States dollars have been growing in buying power at a great rate for months they will jump in an amazing way—actually being worth 11.50 and 2.00 in Waukegan May 20.

While the merchants have agreed to hold this "Community Bargain Day" at the same time there exists a big rivalry to see who can offer the biggest bargains and attract the greatest crowds. It will all be well said in saying that "Community Bargain Day" shoppers in Waukegan will receive the biggest dollars worth in years.

Room Five. Robert Haier and Helen Brown have been out of school this week on account of illness. We hope Virginia Sigwalt will be able to return soon.

Every pupil in the room but seven received 100 in the weekly spelling test.

For the last half hour on Friday our room had a showdown with the boys do last week and the girls on the other. The boys lost all of their number while only half of the girls had to go down.

he largest gruffest with a stolid mien. The bustling entrance of the school room was broken by a catnaping man, who, with a yawn, stepped into a "quitting frock" that enveloped him.

Promptly dismissing school, Ichabod went to his room, where he found a letter, and soon rode forth—a ghastly cavalier to this bidding of his lady.

Guspende, the boy of olden years, heretofore, from the farmer with whom Ichabod was domiciled, was a reliable and trustworthy friend. He was now, however, a young fellow, who, with a few "setts," where were gathered the farmer folk of the surrounding country.

Washington Irving, the famous writer who has written "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow" and "The Rivals," has written a new story, "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow," which is a continuation of the first story. It is a story of a young man, Ichabod Crane, who is a school teacher in a small village in New York. He is a very good man, but he is a little bit of a dreamer. He is a very good man, but he is a little bit of a dreamer.
