TITLE DELIVERS INSPIRING TALK

America's Part in World Peace,
His Subject

DEPLORES BIG ARMAMENTS

Graduates and Guests Listen With Respectful Attention to Inspiring Oration

Taking as its topic, world peace and the part America should play in it, the Reverend Ernest F. Title of Evanston, delivered to the invited guests of the Barrington High School and their guests at the commencement exercises at the Auditorium Friday night on a subject which is of chief concern in the world to-day. He gave to them a frank message to carry them into the workday world of which they now become members.

The orator was a veteran of the world wars and his talk was full of subjects connected with that never to be forgotten strife and the issues growing out of it, he impressed his hearers as to the need of peace and concord to the prosperity of the day. While not an exponent of disarmament, yet he condemned the rivalry for naval and military supremacy that is apparently continuing the attack of the world's peoples and predicted another world war if this tendency for huge armaments was not curbed. He impressed the young men and young women to go out and do their duty to their country and fixed firmly in their minds that world peace is one of the most precious possessions of the world and that it is to a world of men and women whose minds are attuned to it.

A man of great oratorical power, and earnestness of manner, the speaker held the undivided attention of his audience and left a lasting impression upon them.

The auditorium was filled at the exercises, all seats on the main floor being occupied and many overflowed in the balconies. The graduates appeared in the caps and gowns decreed by the board of education and the students of the public welcomed the speaker with a plaudited cheer.

The invocation was made by Rev. John E. Putnam, pastor of the Methodist church, and Rev. H. R. Schmitz of the Salem church, in his absence.

John C. Plaum, president of the school, addressed the graduates to the class of seventeen, who were as follows:

David A. Bierman, Lydia Weisheit, Marian Stroh, Hilda Sengt, June Work, Atchison Eakin, David C. Johnson, John C. Anton Besser, Helen Robertson, Louis Kirschner, Constance Calkins, Dorothy C. Johnson, Adele Wahman, Lois Scott, LaVera Hayes.

Monday evening the class meted to Colonel Fabin's estate on the Fox River just south of Geneva, where they spent the night. Tuesday they spent several hours on the beautiful grounds of the park-like property, which is the residence of the Anton Besser family. They wound up the day with an enjoyable party in Graft's hall, to which many other young people of the village were invited.

WAKEEDAN YOUTH BREAKS
BACK WHILE DIVING

John Johnson, 19, of Waukegan, broke his back while diving off a spring board into two feet of water at Bristow's on Sunday. Helpless as a log, he was unable to move and was paralytic, but he would have died had not friends seen his plight and sent for a doctor.

He is a son of the Veteran Memorial hospital. He has not recovered the use of his legs, but he is conscious and clearly minded.

LOCAL BEAN EATERS
ON THU. TO CAROLINA

C. E. Thorne, local bean dealer, left Sunday on a trip to the "garden lands" of North Carolina, the home of the bean, to call on 49 investors. They are making the trip by way of Boston, New York, Philadelphia, and the Carolinas. C. E. Thorne is bound to North Carolina. Mr. Thorne expects to return next Wednesday or Thursday.

LAKE COUNTY WILL GET ROAD REFUND AT ONCE

Money for Refund of State's Share on State Aid Roads Made Available
by Appropriation

Lake county will soon get a refund of state aid roads money, according to Representative W. F. Wetsel. The sum represents the state share that was due the state but had not been paid by the state, or will be, accepted by the state as soon as the appropriation bill makes the money immediately available. Mr. Wetsel said that the state will have an additional sum of $383,961.15 will be available to two years, and the money will be held up by the county for constructing other hard roads and it is expected that the state will make an extension of the hard road through Lake county.

At the time of its closing session, state passed a bill validating the million dollar road bond issue in Lake county, and the tax dealers are thenceforth knocked out.

This local issue, however, will be paid off by the state, and the county board sees fit to use the issue, which probably will do no good.

Mr. Wetsel said that the bonds will be used on roads designated at the time the bond issue was made, and the bond issue is the Barrington-Wauconda road from the village limits to Holtzman's church.

The road had already been prepared by the County Superintendent of Highways and had been given to the state highway division for approval.

REVENUE COLLECTOR MAKES TICKET BROKERS PAY TAX

Engers P. Gould, deputy collector of internal revenue, Chicago, is checking for income tax returns in Barrington and vicinity.

He has issued a new source of revenue to the community since April 1, 1918, and reads off the names of tax payers who have not paid a tax of $10 per year on the gross amount of $1000 for remittance of the fact that it is the property of the state.

It is said that nearly $500 was collected from local merchants who had been holding these tickets for the accomodation of the public.

GERMAN WAGES AND PRICES.

Germany wages at the present time are 100% higher than they were weekly, of roughly one-half of the pre-war normal. German prices in terms of gold seem to be on the increase, 20% higher than they were pre-war normal. The German Industrial interests seem to have been able to derive the maximum workers with the deepest depression, and the lowest wage. The Farmer, the Farmer, the Farmer's Farmer. In terms of marks, the German workers may be getting five or six times as much as they were before the war, but in terms of the money they buy, they are getting for less.

It is a strong thing that people have come to so worship money that they are willing to give up all they received. As long as Germany money has a fluctuating value, it is hard to say what the United States will find Germany a very difficult place to do business with. With a currency of uncertain value, it is possible to make labor do more, but for less remuneration and others who buy it. Germany will eventually pay for the way by the self-denial of her laboring people, a self-denial enforced by a manipulated currency system.

The system of system planning, like that of communism, is in full flight. Systems of rationing are always safe. According to Gantel, all systems are dianosed during the same period. The system of rationing was not determined, but it was found that distasted systems possess a characteristic military appearance, and that the United States is not safe from it.

Just as, for example, I think, was observed by the German government of iniquity. True, it was not so much any distinct and well-defined leading, but cause music is not a distinct art, but jazz does contain a real immoral influence, because it confuses, bewuses, bewuses and befuddles the mind through the ears. It is, in effect, the dope or knockout drop in the art of sound.

Laws against immoral art? They can do a little to help us, but not very much. To rely upon legislation as a safeguard against immorality in art, that is, as a real safeguard—is a great mistake. The true defense must be made in the discrimination, the taste, the conscience of the individual and the public.

We must learn to ask ourselves and we must teach our children to ask art as well as in commerce and other human activities what is good in its effect and what is evil. After all, in thinking of art, that is to say, and of the highest kind, I come back to the words of an old book:

"Whatever things are pure and lovely and of good report, if there are any virtue, and if there are any that are praiseworthy, think on these things."

A man is made by his thoughts. What he loves is apt to look at; what he looks at long grows to be like. These are my views on art and morals.

"What Doth Strengthen and What Maim?" Application of Moral Law to Art

By DR. HENRY VAN DYKE, Address to N. E. A.

John Keats, whose centenary has just been celebrated throughout the English-speaking world, has a very fine review on the moral side of poetry. You will find it in his odes entitled "Bards of Passion and of Mirth":

"Free your earth born souls still speak

To mortals of their little weak,

Of their sorrows and delights,

Of their passions and their spites,

Of their glory and their shame;

What doth strengthen and what maim."

Now, Keats is distinctly a poet's poet; he represents the aesthetic in all its beauty. How does he apply the moral law of the art of the moral law to art? "What doth strengthen and what maim?" That is the question to ask about a work of art—does it make your spirit stronger or weaker, does it build you up and inspire you and move you with courage and healthy feelings or does it enslave you and lower your moral tone and fill you with morbid thoughts and hysterical impulses?

Take the art of music. Great music, even really good music which has melody and harmony in it, flows around us like a stream of pure, clear water, or, like the billows of the great sea, it refreshes and it strengthens; but sensual music, lascivious music, music which is not built up of the true, the good, the beautiful, the dignified and the vulgarized, who is led to it.

Just as, for example, I think, was observed by the German government of iniquity. True, it was not so much any distinct and well-defined leading, but cause music is not a distinct art, but jazz does contain a real immoral influence, because it confuses, bewuses, bewuses and befuddles the mind through the ears. It is, in effect, the dope or knockout drop in the art of sound.

Laws against immoral art? They can do a little to help us, but not very much. To rely upon legislation as a safeguard against immorality in art, that is, as a real safeguard—is a great mistake. The true defense must be made in the discrimination, the taste, the conscience of the individual and the public.

Economic Liberalism in Its Fundamental Features Cannot Be Abandoned

By DR. DAVID KINLEY, President, University of Illinois

The notion so frequently expressed in the literature of the social sciences that the present economic and social order is based upon the past, is, in my opinion, incorrect. We are told that the group, whether of the name of society or state, must stand in step and in step with its functions in a larger field, even involving multiplicity of daily life. Those who hold this view of the nature of society and the state insist that the era of what they call "individualism" has passed, that a society based on individual liberty is out of date.

The system of economic liberalism in its fundamental features can not be abandoned. It has become an enduring part of our civilization and our personal life. It has promoted liberty, peace, initiative, personal independence, individuality, culture, and the welfare of man, and relieved poverty, has exploited human beings the resources of nature more abundantly than ever before, has enlarged knowledge, has improved the life of mankind.

I do not understand how there can be improvement in the welfare of society excepting in the sense that there is improvement in the welfare of individual men and women. High character, trained intelligence, self-reliance, initiative, knowledge and skill in working with the forces of nature and applying them to his or her use constitute the more powerfully individual man, and this constitutes the more powerfully individual woman.

It is this combination, before and after, that leads individual individuals to think that knowledge and effort on their parts are not necessary. They learn to look to the state, to society for many things that they should do themselves.

"Fundamentals of Business Prosperity Are the Ten Commandments"

By ROGER W. BARBON, Statistician

Business conditions are due to a man's attitude toward life. Business conditions can be changed by the better only as man's attitude toward life changes.

Business runs in cycles—first a period of prosperity and then a period of depression. When studying these business changes, it was necessary to resort to certain statistics. In endeavoring to ascertain what caused the fluctuation, it was found:

That a period of depression is the result of unrighteousness, dishonesty, extravagance and insolvency which develop in the latter half of a period of prosperity, and that a period of prosperity is the reaction from the former integrity and thrif that develop in the latter half of a period of depression.

The meaning of this is plain. It is not railroads, steamships or factories which cause our prosperity; it is not banking, foreign trade or commodity prices which give us good business. All these things are like the thermometer that register the temperature of the time.

"Prosperity is based on those fundamental qualities of faith, temperance, service and thrif, which are the products of the human heart. The fundamental principles of prosperity are the ten commandments."
