These committees will act as follows:

Secretary — Secretary, C. E. Paxton.

B. A. Schroeder, who probably will be elected president, is responsible for the existence of a Chamber of Commerce in Barrington and has devoted much time and energy to its organization as its secretary, asked to be relieved of that task and urged the adoption of a motion that he be elected chairman of the executive committee. In support of his contention that the secretary should not be paid, he pointed out that the secretary's office imposes upon the holder, and displays and describes a batch of official documents, which are the secretary's hands at that time for attention.

Fourteen members were astonished at the number of requests the secretary receives for information concerning business and professional institutions. Half of the letters that Mr. Schroeder called attention to were from men headed for the chamber of commerce.

The motion was carried, and it was indicated the wide scope of a chamber of commerce and the opportunity it offers to the interests of the town it serves.

Authoritative Ford Secretary

Mr. Schroeder's suggestion of a permanent secretary was adopted by a majority of those present, and a motion was passed authorizing the board of directors to employ a secretary at a salary of $1,000 a month, and the board appointed F. L. Waterman to serve the organization as its secretary.

It would have been the desire of the chamber to have Mr. Schroeder continue in office as its president. DeLong, however, had a high commendation to his credit and fitness for the office, but it could be seen that the members of the chamber were right to reflect from the duties which the position entails.

The two officers spoke briefly, pledging their best efforts to the tasks before them, and before the motion was voted on, a hearty vote of thanks was given the retiring officers.

Following adjournment, Mr. Green served an excellent lunch of sandwiches, coffee, cake and ice cream, while the members lingered for a half hour social chat.

by 162 votes. Much bitter feeling developed during the campaign in which the two candidates for the office of our candidates was overshadowed by the present improvement plan for the village. The plan was supported by the other retiring members of the village board who generally accepted it as in favor of early completion of the proposed improvement plan. A vote for Mr. Timmerman and his ticket was a remonstrance against the plan, and the proposal to pay for the paving. The objectionable matter has been in the court since several weeks ago, and the decision of the case was deferred by mutual consent until after the election. The erty belonging to their regular officers.

"Most of the school districts which have been affected are now bonded to the limit. Much of the personal and real property of these schools would have been destroyed. Unless these buildings are reconstructed, the welfare of the children will be deprived of a school opportunity next year. It is estimated that the insurance and the additional amount of $250,000 will be required to reconstruct the public school buildings. Constitutional restrictions prevent a direct approach to the legislature for funds. It appears that this amount must be raised by the public and the community. I hope that the people of the state—its teachers and its pupils—will respond.

"After a conference with the Governor, members of the General Assembly and school officers, I have decided to propose the following plan:

elementary and high school teachers, $1,000 each

High school pupils, $20 rents

Elementary pupils, $10 rents

10 years each.

Total $155,000

A committee will be appointed to draw up the details of the appropriations, a complete list of the schools to be affected, the amount of money to be raised by each district, the instruction to be given to the people, and the amount of money to be given to the public school buildings. Constitutional restrictions prevent a direct approach to the legislature for funds. It appears that this amount must be

TALK STIRS DISCORD

Every thoughtful person must be impressed and again with the pernicious effects of loose talking and writing. Perhaps half the enemies and antagonists which beset the world might be traced directly to irresponsible and vicious talk.

Not only does it affect individuals, making enemies of people who ought to be friends, but it is productive of discord and even war among nations.

In the present unsettled and delicate state of world affairs a great injury to the interests of peace is being done by impetuous utterances of pseudo-statesmen, who recklessly disregard the views and sensibilities of other nations in order to impress home people with an exaggerated idea of their own patriotism. The United States has its full share of these jingoes, who would imperil our international relations for the sake of popular applause and votes.

Too many of our newspapers illustrate the same tendency, through irritating editorial expressions which cause unfavorable reactions when reprinted in foreign countries and call the task of diplomatic missions difficult.

It is without saying that we should always be found ready and willing to take a firm stand wherever our real interests are at stake, but this may be done in a simple and dignified manner with out resorting to unnecessarily offensive tactics.

Statesmen and nationals of all countries might contribute measurably to the cause of peace by refraining from violent and ill-considered outbursts that tend to aggravate an already difficult problem.

BORAH IS RIGHT

We do not always agree with Senator Borah. Hardly anyone does, because no one can quite keep up with the process of his active and independent mind.

But a recent speech of his, attacking the tendency to federal control of practically every action of the individual citizen, must strongly appeal to lovers of freedom. In the course of this speech he said:

The remorseless urge of centralization, the insatiable may of bureaucracy, are depriving more and more the people of all voice, all rights, concerning home and hearthstone, of family and neighbor. There is not a practice, custom or habit but must soon be censored from Washington. There is not in all the relationship of parent and child, of family and home, anything sufficiently private or sacred to exempt it from the furtive eye of the speculating agent."

But the speculating agents constantly build up a greater and greater federal machine, with expanding departments and bureaus to oppress the people and add to the tax burden.

He might have added that the few activities not supervised by the federal government are regulated by a multiplicity of state laws. The citizen is dominated, restricted, inspected, investigated, searched, taxed and befooled at every turn.

Yet many wonder at the unrest now in evidence in this land of the free.

HENS MAKING RECORD

An especially interesting national egg-laying demonstration has been in progress during the past six months under the auspices of the Alabama agricultural college, of which J. E. Ivory is state poultry specialist.

While a majority of the hens competing are owned in Alabama, those of other states are well represented in the competition, which embraces several of the best known laying breeds. Records are kept of individual hens, as well as group or pen.

As this is written a Barred Rock hen owned by Mrs. D. T. Tatum of LaFayette, Ala., holds the individual record, having laid 136 eggs and missing only 18 days since last November. Two Rhode Island Reds owned in Birmingham are tied for second place, with 130 eggs each.

One hen has laid a pen of 10 Barred Rock hens at J. E. Ivory's place, and others are doing well, but do not observe any Sunday "blue law."

This competition is demonstrating the value of raising pure-bred fowls and is stimulating great interest among poultrymen and farmers of every state.

The time is rapidly approaching when the scrub breeds of chickens and other poultry will find no place in the modern farm.

The department of live stock the same tendency to better sires and more scientific management is in evidence. It is a most encouraging sign of the farmer's awakening to the necessity for advanced methods in the conduct of his business.

OIL TOWN IS SAVED

When the oil field which supported the town of Cement, Okla., slumped through decreased production and low prices two years ago, it appeared that the place was doomed.

A few energetic and determined men refused to accept such a situation and set about to make Cement an agricultural center, through the fostering of a farming interest and cooperating with the rural people in every possible way.

They met with unqualified success and today the town is more prosperous than ever, with every residence and business house occupied and more building in progress than at any time in five years.

This is another illustration of the fact that a prosperous agricultural community is the greatest asset any town can have. Industrial oil rolls are most desirable and should be sought diligently, but farming is still the solid and dependable resource on which permanent prosperity of towns and small cities rests.

TELEPHONE BOY HERO

On the roll of youthful heroes the name of Johnny Macris, 15-year-old switchboard operator of the Englewood, N. J., hospital deserves a high place, his intelligent and brave action having miraculously saved 110 patients from the burning building without the loss of a single life.

When the hospital caught fire, Johnny stuck to his switchboard, calling fire, apparatus and warning the various sick wards until he fell unconscious, overcome by smoke, afterward being carried to safety.

Doctors, nurses, policemen, firemen and neighbors worked desperately to save the lives of the inmates, including 20 newly born babies.

Six of the rescues were severely hurt during the progress of the fire and that there was no loss of life is declared to have been truly remarkable.

The superb courage of Johnny Macris illustrates the fact that many an obscure person is a potential hero, capable of responding nobly to a supreme emergency.

After 33 years as a judge, Chief Justice Willard Bartlett of New York left an estate of only $43,000, which was less than he possessed at the beginning of his service on the bench. Had he left the public service for private practice a few years ago he might have been worth ten times that amount at his death, but he has left his family a proud heritage that can not be measured in dollars.

President Coolidge should not take jibes at his electric horse too seriously. When Thomas Jefferson invented the swivel chair it was ridiculed as "Jefferson's whirigig," yet modern bu-relics couldn't do without it.
