The body of a sparrow caused a short circuit which put factories, street cars and lighting circuits out of commission at London, Eng.

Few Antelope and Moose on Forest Service Reserves

Washington—Antelope are in danger of extermination, the Forest Service announced, and an effort is being made to give refuge for them there. A recent investigation showed that only about 5,000 now range the country.

Moose also show a decrease, but the number is still in the thousands with 8,000 the year before, but the wide difference in the figures is attributed to the fact that the census is the last count.

All wild 600,000 head of big game prove the reserves of the forest as a whole, an increase of 43,000 head in the year. Of this number, 50,000 are deer, the largest number being found in California, Oregon, Nevada, and Arizona. Bays have increased in all of the western forests, 50,000 being counted, compared with 43,000 the year before.

The count also showed 43,000 bears in the forests.

Man a Colloid, Science

Meaning Glee

Baltimore, Md.—Science today answered the question of the ages. For generations after generations has asked "What is life?" and the chemists today answered, "Man is a colloid."

Last night would become a reality at his scientific demonstration, the chemist went on to describe the colloid in its relation to life and death. He said, "Life is a colloid, a mixture of substances which were pure, or genuine in nature. To them was applied the name 'colloids,' derived from 'kolloi,' the Greek word for glue. Man, according to the chemists, therefore is a glue—a fact which explains much of his perseverance.

Men Hoots Kittens

Tankton, S. D.—Six small kittens on Lake street, near the corner of Oak and Nebraska, across the Missouri river from Tankton, are being mothered by a black and brown, patiently sit on her strange brood, apparently quite contented, giving way periodically to the mother cat when the latter comes to feed her family. The kittens are now about a month with the arrangement.

Save "Elegy" Churchyard

"Elegy" the churchyard at Stone Grove, near the corner of Oak and Nebraska, has been saved by the efforts of a number of Englishmen and Americans from a threatened fate. A group of building speculators who have long been scheming to demolish the church and its grounds, has been defeated.

On the Stroke of Twelve

By JACK WOODFORD

"Y'know of course understand," said Henry Hall severely, "that I am no coward, and that I am not given to magnifying trifles. This letter is similar to many others that I have received during my life, and I am not because I am almost certain to win it from him. I have a feeling that."

Presently, the young man of a metropolitan detective agency, leaned forward, and said to the man in the suit in a tone almost of pleading.

"What you tell me whom you think it is, so that in case, I can—"

"No that in case, put to Hall calm, he said, "I am not a coward, and I am not given to magnifying trifles. This letter is similar to many others that I have received during my life, and I am not because I am almost certain to win it from him. I have a feeling that."

knocked upon their door.

"Come in," called out the Creman as the detective stepped in, and stood opposite his employer, who was resting upon the mahogany table as he leaned forward to speak.

"Well, do you guarantee that you will do a world's record?" put in the Creman, looking without care at the detective, who was resting upon the mahogany table as he leaned forward to speak.

"No," replied Hall, taking the letter from the drawer and holding it across to the detective, "I won't. I've tried to do it and I've failed."

and reached between the hills surrounding the scene. The officers ran around to circle, shouting excitedly; lights began to flash on in houses all over town.

It took them 20 minutes to discover that the old cannon upon the corner house lawn had been thrown back 20 feet from its usual position. It was Presto's first shot.

"Last thing on earth I'd have suspected," he said ruefully to the town chief of the police.

"The fellow, whoever he was, was evidently discovered that this old Spanish-American war weapon pointed directly at Hall's room, and so he sent that note figuring that under the circumstances Hall would want to spend the last hours in his own room. Then, I suppose he threw in a half dozen sacks of powder, and a clock mechanism to set it off, and finished up with shrapnel—poor Hall!"

"How do you know that?" asked the town chief of the police.

"I know because I saw the clock mechanism in his room. Then, I suppose he threw in a half dozen sacks of powder, and a clock mechanism to set it off, and finished up with shrapnel—poor Hall!"

"How do you know that?" asked the town chief of the police.

BASEBALL

On Sunday afternoon at the Lake Zurich grounds the Cuba Wild Cat baseball team defeated the last Eight Nationals, 3 to 6. (Team of Cuba got a home run and Manager Clarence Mammensen a hitting two-bagger.)

The Wildcat's victory was a strong club in the field next spring, with Lefty Narowski of Cary pitcher. They will challenge all town teams.
