Earn Money During Vacation and in Spare Time

Personal and social news constitutes one of the most important features of the community newspaper. It has great reader interest and probably pleases a greater number of people than any other department of a local newspaper.

Besides being of interest as reading matter, it serves many good purposes. To the sick it brings friendly messages, flowers and good wishes. Among vacationists, it lets their friends know they are away, and oftentimes saves time and inconvenience for them. It introduces the newcomer to the community and acquaints him with the people of the community. Would-be humorists sometimes make sport of the country newspaper's personal columns, but these same columns have been characterized by one of the country's leading advertising agencies (located in New York City) as the world's most successful piece of journalism.

The Barrington Review wants more personal and social news. It is willing to pay well for it.

A limited number of Girls (and Boys and Women, if any are interested) are invited to participate in a contest in reporting for the Barrington Review, vacation personals, general news items about persons, social events, etc. There is no limit to the amount of space the Barrington Review will devote to this feature. Contestants are wanted from every section of the village and from every rural community served by the Review.

The regular space rates for all published news will be paid. Considering the carte blanche the reporter has, this space rate is higher than the rate paid by most city papers for their correspondence. Checks will be mailed monthly, and in addition there will be monthly prizes to those sending the greatest amount of news. Full particulars will be mailed, the day after registration closes, to all applicants who are accepted.

Contestants must be eighth grade graduates or high school girls, or girls of high school age or older. No objection to male contestants, if any are interested.

Readers of the Barrington Review will be allowed to send in their own contributions and have them credited to their favorite contestant.

Use the Registration Blank in This Advertisement

Note that too many contestants cannot work efficiently, so get your application in early. We reserve the right to limit the number of contestants and choose the applicants who seem best fitted.

REGISTRATION CLOSES FRIDAY, JUNE 15, at 6 p. m. if a sufficient number of contestants have registered.

All who register and are accepted will be given printed instructions and helpful "tips" and furnished with paper and other supplies.

Adult readers will be asked to cooperate in making the Barrington Review more newsy and in encouraging the young people to get this valuable training and be paid for it at the same time. All contestants will be cautioned not to publish personal matters when requested not to do so, and against giving offense in any way. Adults are reminded, however, that if they enjoy reading the personal news, they should be willing to contribute to it.

THE CONTEST STARTS THURSDAY, JUNE 21st

STRAY CATS AND DOGS

The zeal of those who stress the importance of kindness to animals may sometimes appear to be a manifestation of sentimentality, yet there is generally behind it a sincere and laudable impulse.

While it may be argued that the sympathy and effort expended on unfortunate animals might better be exerted in behalf of human beings, the fact is that the human, cat, dog, and even birds, which are more likely to exhibit a similar attitude toward their fellowmen.

A New York woman's organization reports that during the past year it has found homes for 67 homeless dogs and 549 stray cats, while 68 dogs and 10 cats were returned to their owners through identification tags or collars. Bronze medals were presented to two men who saved a dog from considerable risk to themselves.

An important part of such organizations is the humane education of children, many if not most of whom have an apparent natural tendency to make life miserable for helpless animals, particularly dogs and cats. It is merely the result of thoughtlessness and may be checked by kindly admonition, in other words the training of the child, and through cruelty, which stern measures are necessary to repress.

The teaching of kindness to animals should have a place in the training of the child, and it can be taught better by personal example than in any other way. To befriend a stray cat or dog is to teach a lesson of kindness to all creatures.

And such lessons are worth while.

ARE WE WORSE OR BETTER?

Recently a pastor began his sermon with a statement which sounds quite familiar. He said:

"There is lawlessness everywhere. Children no longer obey their parents. It is evident that the end of things is at hand."

And the preacher told his congregation that the words were not original with him, nor even an utterance of the present day, but that they had been translated from an inscription found among the ruins of the patriarch Abraham.

Throughout all recorded history are evidence of such pessimism, which existed from time to time as to the future of the race. Now and then an era of comparative peace and quiet has been experienced, only to be followed by recurring outbreaks of violence and lawlessness.

While the present day conditions are bad enough, it seems that on the whole they are better than those of the past. This is more thought given to the relief of suffering, to the betterment of industrial conditions, to the protection of the helpless and to other humanitarian enterprises than ever before. Although the World War gave civilization a severe test, recovery has been rapid and the world has been spared the horrors of a world war. It is remembered that war has marked the history of every generation of mankind, and the same is true of lawlessness, oppression and every other manifestation of human imperfection.

JOKE IS A QUEEN

Not everyone might dare to play a joke on a queen, but Professor Charles Ludwidge Dodgson of England did, the victim of his jest being none other than the late Queen Victoria.

The learned professor was one of the ablest mathematicians of his day and the author of numerous text-books, besides being the writer of fascinating stories, which "Alice in Wonderland" is the most famous. It is related that Queen Victoria was greatly pleased with "Alice" and on a personal meeting with the queen she complimented him highly and asked him to send her copies of all his books.

Convinced with the request, he sent her a copy of "The Humpty Dumpty Book" and several volumes representing his mathematical labors. Whether the good queen enjoyed these as much as she did "Alice in Wonderland" is not recorded. Dodgson was one of many scientific men who have from time to time devoted attention to literary and literary work, while his professional attainments were within a limited circle, his charming stories, written under the pen name of Lewis Carroll, gave him worldwide fame.

SOME PURITAN CUT-UPS

Those who depend on the regular historical works of the school-book type no doubt have formed the idea that the Puritans and fathers (and forefathers) of New England were about as perfect as folks could be.

The iconoclasts have been at work again, however, and have dug up some old stories which appear to show that human nature at its best in the old days as it is at present. A recent writer quotes as length from a Massachusetts court record of 1646 of which a few simple cases are given as follows:

Henry Walton fined for saying he liked the great dog bark to hear Reverend Cobb preach.

John Griffith fined for stealing his master's ox and selling it to him.

Thomas Gray of Marblehead whipped for being overcome in drink.

Philip Cromwell fined for not living with his wife.

William Claus fined for spying into the chamber of his master and telling what he saw.

Charles Phillips fined for being in drink three times in two days.

Mr. Griffith fined for wearing a silk hood.

Sarah Collins fined for railing at her husband and calling him "a potted idiot."

DEFECTIVE CHILDREN

According to a report compiled from a survey of 10 million American school children, it appears that about 75 per cent of them are free from physical defects.

Of the defective children, however, the majority are afflicted with defects of the eyes, ears, nose, throat, and mouth. The remaining 25 per cent are afflicted with defects of the heart, lungs, and other internal organs.

Rev. T. L. C. Suhr on Perilous Trip to Interior China

165. Theodore L. T. Sahr, American, has been in China, who has been in Shanghai since the Chinese revolution broke out a year ago, is making his home in Chefoo, a small town, a few miles in the interior of the province. Mr. Sahr, who is also a missionary in China, has been in Harrington for a few months. Further developments in Sahr is receiving a series of interesting letters from her husband, and his previous trip to the province, of which the subject is the first, which will follow in succession.

Well they come over and I serve them on the porch and served them a couple of ice cold drinks of a kind another and one of his friends was a gal and the other was a man and he introduced me to the gal

And then she met Christopher G. Being neither a nobleman nor a millionaire, nor a cannibal, G. was rather out of Dorothy's line. Perhaps that was why he interested her so much—he was so different from anything she dreamed of for a husband.

Ineffective Reason
There are those who never reason on what they should do, but on what they have done; as if they had her eyes behind, and could see backward.—Henry Fielding
