WASHINGTON'S CRITICS

As we in 1930 celebrate the 158th birth day of George Washington, mindful of his inestimable services to the great Republic of which he is truly called the father, it seems almost remarkable that he should have been beaten during his lifetime to the most bitter and violent attacks by military and civil opponents.

Yet such was the case. Perhaps no worthy man in the history of our nation was ever so violently assailed as was Washington during the Revolutionary War and throughout his subsequent career as President.

The famous and vicious "Conway cabal," composed of disgruntled officers of the Continental Army, sought to have Washington removed from his position of commander-in-chief in favor of General Gates. The plan failed, but the intrigue of his enemies made Washington's difficult task more difficult.

Even when he had finished his public life, after serving eight years as President, in fact, upon the very day of his leaving that high office, an editorial appeared in a Philadelphia newspaper containing the following:

"This ought to be a day of jubilee in the United States. If ever a nation was de-bauched by a man, the American nation has been debauched by George Washington. His conduct can be an example to future ages, yet the history of the Federal government instruct mankind that the mark of patriots may be worn to conceal the foulest designs against the liberties of the people."

Washington has been indeed "an example to future ages," but not the horrible example which the Philadelphia scribblers had in mind. In spite of all criticism and abuse, the nation and family of George Washington have done more to us as Americans than any other historical figure.

He was human—he was not a saint—but what he accomplished so far outweighs any minor shortcomings that his grateful countrymen have written his faults upon their hearts.

A PATRIOTIC CRED

"The American's Creed" adopted by Congress in 1919, is not as well known to the citizens of this country as it should be.

This creed was selected through a contest, open to all Americans, for the purpose of securing "the best summary of the political faith of America." The author of the most successful creed was W. E. Tyler Page, a descendant of George Washington.

The phrases composing it are taken from the Preamble to the Constitution of the United States, the Declaration of Independence, the code of Allegiance and utterances of distinguished patriots, all woven together into a complete and lofty sentence, as follows:

"I believe in the United States of America as a Government of the people, by the people, and for the people; whose powers are derived from the consent of the governed; that democracy in a republic; a sovereign Nation of many sovereign States; a perfect union, one and inseparable; established upon these principles: that all men are created equal and human for which American patriots sacrificed their lives and fortunes."

"I therefore believe it is my duty to my country to love it; to support its Constitution; to obey its laws; to respect its flag, and to defend it against all enemies."

FARMERS WHO CAN PAY

We recently ran across a North Carolina doctor's diagnosis of the farmer's financial troubles which is worth passing along. This was a general practitioner in an average town. He said that in the last two years the number of families in the county of many farm families on his books, usually making collections yearly when crops were marketed, as is the custom with many.

On January 1 I checked up on his delinquent accounts and found that: in nearly every case those who had failed to pay were one-crop farmers, who made no attempt to raise a variety of products. Then he looked over his up-dated list, which disclosed conditions somewhat like this:

"A large flock of chickens, a few hens, others had dairy cows, orchards, vegetable gardens, hay, and other feed for their stock. In other words, those who had raised their own food and stock feed, or had been able to market produce and dairy products, had also been able to pay their debts. The ones who had not been able to do this had either their hills, without doubt.

Spring will soon be here. The decisions the farmer makes regarding what he will raise next season will determine his financial condition in fall. Will he profit by the experience of those who have succeeded through diversification, or will he stick to the old poverty-breeding one-crop plan? His doctor and other creditors will be interested in this question. The farmer should take an interest in it himself.

TOO MUCH REGULATION

Undue centralization of authority in the Federal government is most undesirable, in the opinion of Governor Christianian of Minnesota, who sees a menace in the growth of bureaucracy which is usurping the power rightfully belonging to the individual states.

In a recent article he declares that we have enough red tape, delay and waste, and will have more of these, with perhaps a correction in boot, if the present trend toward centralization continues to continue. Referring to the numerous commissions and regulatory bodies now functioning in Washington for the control of commerce and industry, Governor Christianian says:

"While I approve of measures by which business is regulated wisely and controlled firmly, I emphatically disapprove of the numerous and petty regulations with which we are burdened, which the public welfare serve or any purpose, whatsoever, except to make more government jobs."

MOTORIST TAGGED

Among the measures designed to regulate the motorist, a new Connecticut law will be watched with interest. It provides different insurance for various classes of motorists.

Those whose driving records indicate them to be safe drivers, and who are granted a reduction from the regular insurance rates; the next class pay the standard insurance fee; those found to have been involved in minor accidents and slight violations of traffic rules pay a premium; and those whose driving records indicate serious accidents are penalized 25 per cent, while those who are shown to have been at fault in highly serious and flagrantly avoidable accidents must pay an additional premium of 50 per cent for their insurance.

The new law is designed to bring enough to enable one to judge of its results, but it seems to be based upon sound principles and may prove to be of some measurable benefit in reducing automobile accidents.

WHY MAKE IT WORSE?

In spite of all that we possess of knowledge, philosophy and religion, when viewed in its stern reality, life is a tragic thing. We may be profoundly thankful for the many "bright spots" in the human breast."

Man, like every living creature, is born under the sentence of death, which rests largely upon the king of this world and the number of his subjects is known to be infinite.

That we can cheerfully and hopefully "carry on" in the face of this certainty and in the midst of the trials of our daily existence is convincing evidence of man's courage and strength.

These afflictions are not intended to spread gloom or discouragement, but are merely a reminder that, taken at its best, there is enough anguish in the world, without anyone seeking to make the burden of life even heavier.

Make 1 aint get moth hole. When you get moth hole, you have to have a moth hole. A moth hole is different status which don't keep from sevin' and learnin' and you have to have a moth hole picked up.

Then the third reason that I have here is and the only thing that keeps me here is that I have to have a moth hole. It is so much a fine place to stay.

"HANK THE HIRED MAN is it? I just finger that I got to put up with him. I am not going to put up with him. I used to watch status about the moth hole. I used to watch him kickin' everything, wood be judge. You got to have a moth hole to stay.

I am not going to take this information so that you know what I just said.

Next week I am going to tell you what to think about him if it did me.
