TELEPHONE NO. 1 BARRINGTON, ILL.

A WORLD RADIO CENTER

Plans recently made public by Rockefeller interests contemplate for New York City the greatest amusement enterprise the world has ever seen, with radio as its central feature.

This stupendous project will represent an investment of $25,000,000—a quarter of a billion—will cover three whole blocks in the vicinity of Fifth Avenue and Forty-eighth Street.

Performances from all of these worlds to radiate to the nation and to the world by radio, and means will be provided for utilizing all developments of television as they appear.

In connection with this majestic art center will be a grand show which will be promoted by no effort will be spared to make it the most impressive boulevard of its kind in the world.

Provision will be made underground for tracks and terminals and parking spaces, all deliveries to the "radio city" will be made from this underground area, so that the surface traffic problem may be reduced to a minimum.

All this is of the greatest significance, not only to those who will be attracted to it but to everyone who owns a radio set.

This may be understood from the announcement that National Broadcasting Company will operate 27 broadcasting stations in radio city, instead of only eight as at present, offering better programs of greater variety.

EFFECT OF STIMULANTS

For many years scientists have carried on experiments with a view to determining with some exactness just what are the effects of various stimulants on the human system.

Prof. Norman W. Lyon of the psychological department of Columbia University recently conducted an exhaustive series of tests devoted to the effects of coffee on his subjects.

subjects, the results of which have been made public.

As may have been expected, all the subjects reported that they had a better appetite, but the results were sufficiently unimportant to warrant some general conclusions, which also agreed quite closely with those of other workers.

It was found that while some were stimulated by drinking coffee, others experienced no such effects. Some were made coffee and nervousness. Also it was noted that while coffee drinkers showed great increase in certain work they suffered in accuracy and many of them drank coffee and coffee or none at all maintained a higher average of readiness than those who drank ordinary water.

HOW TRAINING COUNTS

An unusually striking illustration of the value of training is afforded through the work of casualty records during the World War.

The central powers mobilized 22,850,000 men and 1,000,000 casualties upon the armies of the central powers.

In other words, in the case of the highly trained troops of the central powers an average of nearly one man in every 100 died upon the allies for every man mobilized.

Allowance must be made for the long distances some of the allied troops had to be transported and the fact that a good many never got to the front, still the greater losses were chiefly due to the time consumed in training, which gave the enemy, before the battle, equipped troops from the beginning, a tremendous advantage in all operations.

As with an army, so with an individual. The trained man has a great advantage in every walk of life.

JAZZING UP THE RECORD

There should be room in the Congressional Record for a Babe Ruth as well as a Tom Sawyer and a George Washington Byrd as well as for President Hoover.

This is the opinion of Representative John J. Boyer of the National Broadcasting Company, who has introduced a bill to amend the act relating to the Congressional Record.
