MOTHER'S DAY

Never since its inauguration has Mothers Day presented such an apportunity for service to mothers as the present day. With more than 12,000,000 of our citizens unemployed and with an estimated 9,000,000 more working but part time and other millions deprived of normal income, the situation is one that calls for practical gifts that will relieve actual is one that calls for practical gifts that will relieve actual suffering and want.

The day will be observed throughout the nation on Sunday, May 14.

Planned in the beginning as a tribute to fortunate mothers with thoughtful sons and daughters who took pleasure in remembering them with gifts of candy and flowers, bodys, telegrams and letters, the observance has gained increased momentum each year. For the past few years there has been a tendency to commercialize the day and this has been deplored by those who believe in its original purpose. It was inevitable that with the vast increase in need, brought about by the depression, the flow of gifts purpose. It was inevitative that with the viast increase in need, brought about by the depression, the flow of gifts should be directed into a different channel and destitute and dependent mothers should share in the observance. Urging a golden rule observance of the day, the Golden Rule Foundation of New York, which annually spon-

WHO PAYS THE TAX?

The state sales tax is proving decidedly unpopular with The state sales tax is proving decidedly unpopular with both retailiers and consumers. The uncertainty of the law which has left the matter of collecting it entirely up to the discretion off the retailers, has caused considerable embarrassment to all lines of trade and has consequently added to the unpopularity of the tax.

The tay is claimed to be a tax on the consumer. To a certain extent it is a tax on the consumer just as the tax on a rented piece of real estate is indirectly a tax on the renter;

The tay is claimed to be a tax on the consumer. To a certain extent it is a tax on the consumer just as the tax on a rented piece of real estate is indirectly a tax on the renter. But directly, the tax is levied on the retail trade. If the law is declared valid, a storekeeper is as much of a payer of sales tax as an owner of an apartment house is the payer of real estate tax oil that property.

In reality the renter of a piece of real estate ultimately pays the tay if he pays his rent because the tax is paid from the owner's receipts of rent. However, the owner of the real estate guarantees payment of the tax. Regardless of whether the renter pays promptly or fails to pay at all, the owner of the property must pay the tax collector.

Now the retail merchant is in exactly the same position as the owner of retail extend property. He has to pay a three per cent tax on all of his sales regardless of whether he received payment for those sales or not. He charges the tax back to the consumer. If the consumer pays his bill, he automatically pays the tax just as the renter pays real estate tax when he hands the landlord his rent money. But when the consumer fails to pay his bill to the retail merchant, that merchant is caught hobing the sack for the sales tax. Therefore the regail merchant bears the burden of sales tax responsibility just as much as the owner of rented property bears the burden of real estate tax responsibility.
