LEGION PARTLY JUSTIFIED

"Nothing which the Legion has ever done or is likely to do is so narrow, greedy or corrupt as that which our financial interests did in persuading the government to borrow rather than tax to the bone," said Thomas Nixon Carver, professor of political economy at Harvard, in discussing the wrong way in which the American government went about financing the war back in 1917. Professor Carver, in a letter in inflation published in the New York Herald-Tribune, declared:

"Every economist who was worth his salt was actively warning the government at the time of the consequences of its policy of financing the war by borrowing. It seemed horrible that those of us who stayed at home should not pay for the war. The most horrible thought of all is that a great many of our people actually made money out of the war. Nothing they are likely to suffer from this depression can expiate the guilt of those who profited by the great catastrophe."

In the above brief summary of the beginning of the great post-war inflation with its resultant inequitable fortunes for different people in this country is the justification of the World War veterans' claims for compensation, bonuses, hospitalization and pensions. The men who enlisted and were drafted into war service paid their debt to the country regardless of whether they were killed, wounded, or merely maimed up and down a training camp parade grounds for a few weeks. The fact that they offered their services and guarded with their health and lives should have relieved them of all financial responsibility for the war.

If the government had taxed to pay for the war instead of borrowing, the cost would have been paid during the life of the conflict instead of afterwards and the stay-at-home people would have had to sacrifice wealth and forego war time profits and inflated wages. But the government did not do it that way. Instead it borrowed lavishly with the idea that the cost be paid afterwards by all citizens—by those who served in the war and risked their lives as well as by those who stayed at home and made fortunes.

For this reason war veterans are justified in demanding compensations and bonuses to partially offset the double dose of war responsibility which has been placed upon them. As we have stated several times before in these columns, we do not believe the American Legion and Veteran of Foreign Wars were living up to their records of 100 per cent Americanism when they demanded payment of the bonuses at a time when the country was financially embarrassed, but we do believe the veterans should eventually receive the bonus when the nation's finances are sound enough to stand the strain of paying.

THE INDUSTRIES LAW

General Hugh S. Johnson's discussion over the other Sunday night of the industries plan for whipping the depression was profoundly interesting to employers, employees and unemployed men and women because of the sincerity and earnestness of the speaker and the severity and novelty of the plan.

The discussion was disappointing to many listeners in that the one important phase of the whole program, the unavoidable key to success or failure of the scheme, was passed over so briefly by General Johnson that it was apparent the speaker was purposely dodging the main issue. The neglected phase was the source of increased income with which big corporations and other employers can pay more employees and pay them higher wages for less work.

Except for this one all important link in the proposed chain of regulations of industries, the radio address was inspiring given if not convincing. The new administrator's appeal for wider distribution of wealth and dividing up of the nation's buying power equitably among the 125 million people is certain to create new supporters of the plan. The nation agrees with the administrator in his declaration that: "the spiteful thing about the miserable three years blight on happiness is its mockery of our common sense—millions homeless in cities of vacant houses, ill fed before full granaries, ill clothed in the presence of abundance, and cut off from the chance to work for the other millions who are suffering for lack of their services."

The large number of listeners, we are certain, were waiting to be told how industries can make the additional money to employ additional workers. Industries must not raise prices of their products materially and must not fix minimum prices, so as not to penalize the consumer, the administrator warned. Industry must depend upon increased business and not upon higher prices he summarized briefly.

If the increased employment does result in materially increased business, the plan will succeed. But there is no sound or logical reason to believe that without artificial stimulation, business will increase rapidly enough to keep pace with the administrator's program of climbing wages and increasing employment from artificial stimulation.

"I have more respect for this job than any one I ever tackled before."—Secretary of the Treasury Woodin.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER

By National Editorial Association
(Special to The Review)

Washington, June 28.—It is optimistic, at least, for government officials to freely predict that more than a million men will be back to work by Labor Day. They are basing their expectations on the new industrial recovery law and the public works measure. Unless there is a remarkable change in the relations of organized labor and the employers group, the upturn will be delayed until a better understanding of mutual responsibility develops. The atmosphere fairly reeks with suspicion as the federal agencies mobilize to enforce the new law. Labor leaders are usually militant and this militant attitude is being translated into a more militant attitude on the part of the employers.

The president has wisely chosen this time for a vacation. He is also from the hickering and bawling that inevitably follows the initial efforts to translate laws into definite action. You do not expect to impress a man on a vacation with the gravity of your pet projects. It is best that Mr. Roosevelt should enjoy days at any away from the crowd. There are some serious problems that he returns to his official duties. Granted more power than any sovereign, he will be under terrific strain when he returns to his official duties. Granting all acts are carried out in his name. There are some serious problems that he returns to his official duties. Granting all acts are carried out in his name.

Meanwhile the thousands of republicans now holding office by grace of President General Parker are not doing and rightly so. "Big Jim" is traveling about consulting state demagogues and politicians in the East. He is doing his best to smooth factional strife which may impede the early success of his program. When the country will have the first chance to register its sentiment as to the Roosevelt administration. It has been suggested that the "blackening" of republicans under the protection of the civil service law last fall should be offered by a presidential order opening these jobs to the party in power. It will be recalled that Mr. Hoover permitted office holders, appointed without a civil service examination to "dig in" by extending to the political appointees certain rights as to those who passed merit tests.

There is more truth than poetry to the current charge that Barney Barry is virtually "president pro tempore." Some weeks ago we noted that Gen. Johnson, the new industrial administrator, has been Barry's "Man Friday" at Washington for many years. George Peck, director of farm relief was a partner of Johnson and both were in the baruch when he served as chairman of the War Industries Board. Though legally nothing but a private citizen, Barry wields a tremendous influence here. He has been a financial agent for the democrats for years and never wanted a government post. Barry, as he is known to the politicians, is a must follow chain equally as close with the republicans in days when they were in control.

The adjournment of congress did not squelch the veterans' compensation issue which nearly wrecked democratic harmony. The veterans are conducting a systematic campaign which alarms legislators seeking reelection. As a consequence the party workers are pleading with the administration to soft pedal all economic because of the possibility of political backfire. On the other side of the fence, hardboiled advisers are telling Mr. Roosevelt that the country will stand behind economic activity of the legislature and the balance of the budget.

The recent months' armistice on wages for the organized railroad workers has several "inside stories." The favorite of the day is that credit Donnell Richberg with playing an ace for his clients. Richberg is counsel for the Brotherhood now loaned to the government for work in connection with the industrial recovery act. There is a certain irony in that Richberg helped draft the law and will interpret as counsel for the industrial administrator.

It was generally agreed that freight rates could not be lowered or the railroad given a boost without slight sacrifice by the unions. It appeared that there would be no alteration but the fine hand of Mr. Richberg apparently disclosed a path. The union men on the rail lines will continue to draw top wages while millions of the unemployed must be content with conditions. It is little risk of this sort that may make the American Federation of Labor take Mr. Richberg to their bosom. The two union groups have been at odds for years.

Working Men Are More Subject to Cancer

The professional, business and white collar groups in general have less cancer than do the wage earners of the country. In addition to the cancer from this disease has increased far more rapidly among men than women. The cause of this increase is being studied by the department of public health. A dollar five month between dates of first noticeable symptoms and time of visit to a physician, characterized by an elaborate report on cancer, suggested the use of the "dollar" and "cent" for all cancer patients whose history could be obtained.

Dividends Cut on P. S. Co. Common Stock; Remains Same on Preferred Stock

The board of directors of the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois, at a meeting held June 22, declared a quarterly dividend of 50 cents a share on the company's preferred stock, payable on August 1, to stockholders of record July 15. This is a reduction of 25 cents per share below the quarterly dividends paid in the company's common stock since August 1 of last year. Prior to that time the dividend was $2 per quarter. The directors declared the regular quarterly dividends on the six per cent and seven per cent preferred stock, payable on the same date as the dividend on the common stock.

The reduction in dividends on the common stock was necessitated by the reduction in rates which will become effective July 1. These reductions were made in response to pressure of the Illinois Commerce Commission, and will reduce revenue from electric and gas business in excess of $1,000,000 a year. The reduction affecting the electric rates includes the new three per cent federal tax on residential and commercial business transferred by recent act of congress from the consumer to the producer.
