Thank-Offering Day

The missionary society of the Salem church presented a "Thank-Offering" program Thursday afternoon, the subject of which was "Jesus Is Knocking". Nearly the entire theme of the service was given in music by Mrs. J. M. Haffner, Mrs. Walter Landwehr, Mrs. D. B. Pomeroy, Mrs. Chester Meyer, Mrs. Robert Hargrave, Mrs. John Caldwell, Mrs. Walter Cannon and Miss Alma Anderson taking part. The first chapter of the new study book was reviewed by Mrs. T. S. Haffner as a Chinese woman, Mrs. John Platter, a Japanese, and Mrs. John Schaefer, a woman of India. The review showed the church which is taking place in the home and social customs of these women.

It is the certain result of such competition. The children take sides, the parents take sides and soon the domesticity is involved in a wasteful struggle to place their entry first. Victory is the result.

Competition is essential to sturdy character, but the competition should be centered upon one's self. It is much harder to get a child to compete with his self of yesterday than it is to get him to fight against his classmates. But when we consider the aim of this competition there can be no question about the merit we want to foster. We will not get a child to compete with his self of yesterday.

The growth of the child is concerned in his growth. It should be that growth is the growth of the mind and the body.

Each child has a plotting stage. Each child has to make a curve of his progress. It is the stage that you think he is not capable of. Spur his interest. He will be just as thrilled to see his progress as he will be to see his progress.

Now, they are to be on guard against the wrong sort of competition. They should not have a higher peak than their own. And more of them not if they have made the meaning of the child's growth as here can be done.

GO-ROUND

on all products sold by retailing in the town, Tom never failed to pay the two percent tax on all the produce he sold.

As a rule Tom was a good-hearted fellow, paying his dues to the government whenever it was asked of him and hardly ever did he meddle in the affairs of others. But one day he approached the mayor of the town and asked him, "Do you think it is fair to pay a farmer for selling a few eggs from his farm and sell them on the streets in our town at 25 cents a dozen without having to pay a sales tax on them, when I have to pay my eggs from the farm and sell them at 25 cents a dozen and in addition have to pay a two per cent sales tax on every one-half cent on every dozen of eggs? Will you please tell the state government that I don't think this is a fair deal?" Then Tom added, "It may cost me only $3 a month more, but the principle is all wrong."

If the business men did not know it to be different, they might be inclined to believe that the custom of taxing makers on Halloween night and the night before was introduced by the distributors of cleaning preparations.

Tom, Tim, Terry and a few more of the street corner philosophers had gathered for their after-noon chat in the town square. For some reason these wise-cracks talk drifted into purchasing supplies for their families.

"Well," said Tim, "I have a car and a Buick is only six miles away from where I need anything I drive over there to buy it. Usually it is a few minutes longer there." "You've got nothing on me, Tim," said Tom, "for when I need something I have the money, I give my neighbor George the money and he buys the stuff for me."

"But what do you do when you don't have the money, Tim?" asked George. "Well, Terry," said Tim, "when I don't have the money, I go to the stores in our town and have it delivered." "Excuse me, Tim," then rang out Terry, "you should know better than to carry what little money you have to spend out into other towns and then when you have no money, you expect your local business men to carry you along. And I suppose you will forget to pay them too."

The life of a community cannot be measured in dollars and cents alone, for there are many tangible assets; and first among these are loyalty and cooperation toward the all-around betterment of the community.

★ $1.20 in trade coupons

immediately after you make the investment. Coupons are good as cash at Barrington stores.

★ 5 cents or 10 cents weekly

or even more in money saved from your food bill. (Review readers do this by planning their shopping from grocery and meat ads in the newspaper).

★ 25 cents to a dollar or more

two or three times a year in the form of money saved by selling a "dead elephant" or buying a needed article at a bargain price. (This is the experience of consistent readers of classified ads in The Review).

★ Many dollars

saved throughout the year from the cost of clothing, hardware, drugs, furniture, etc., because you take advantage of special merchandise offerings advertised in The Review.

Can you afford to pass up such an investment when in addition to paying the interest as listed above, it will pay back your original investment of $2.50 in the form of interesting reading of all the local news of your community for a year?

{ This wonderful investment opportunity is available now. With one exception it will be available later. The first item listed above, the free trade coupons, will be available only for a short period of time. As soon as a definite number of coupons have been issued, we will withdraw that offer. }

TANGLED WIVES

By Peggy Shane

CHAPTER I

THE world was black. Red circles poured in. They were swarmed by purple rings. She was lost. Was halcyon going. She was riding. She was going somewhere.

"You faintest, dearest. It's been too much for you."

She was turning back. She was full of something like fear, but it was more than fear. It flared and crackled up as if she stood in the midst of a fire. She gasped as if smoke choked her.

"Your darling."

She kept her eyes closed. She felt a motion of something under her, carrying her.

"Open your eyes, dear."

But she did not. She did not want to see the person who spoke to her. She knew she was in a vehicle of some kind, going some where.

"You're all right, sweet."

It was a man's voice. She hated it. She turned her head and saw the man's face. He was looking at her with a smile. She knew the man. He was the man who had been with her in the taxi. She was riding in a taxi. She was riding in a taxi. She was riding in a taxi.

"You're all right, sweet."

"Dollar-stay. Don't forget your bag."

Her bags! She was startled. The driver indicated that he had left himself. It was tucked down with very smart-looking luggage.

She watched the dorman pull down two more looking bags of aniseed, and an enormous hat of the same extravagant material. "Wouldn't do to go off and leave these," commented the dorman good-naturedly.

"Of course not." She was confused by the sense of many people, the sounds of cabs honking. She wanted to look at her bags, take them somewhere and examine them carefully. Surely when she read her own initials they would remind her of her name, and her past.

She pulled out two bills, and handed them to the driver. As he let his car move into the traffic she turned and looked at the bags piled on the sidewalk before her.

They bore two large, prominent letters, D. V.

"What a most definite clue that would lead her back to herself, or the person she had been. A bell-chime rang. The door of the taxi opened, and she stepped out, and seized them. She slipped the dorman good-naturedly, and followed the bell-boy.

As she mounted the stairs she felt a hand on her arm. "Everything is all right. Her name was D. V. Miss Druella Vance, or—Miss Druella Vance, say—of Miss Deborah Valance."

It was absurd and annoying that the right name should come. She drew on her gloves, half nervously, and her finger struck against her wedding ring. Instantly all her thoughts were concentrated on the ring.

"What a man! Miss Druella Vance! Miss Druella Vance! Why, she was married. Was she married? Yes, D. V. And then her husband, the man who had been with her in the taxi, was riding in a taxi. She was riding in a taxi. She was riding in a taxi.

Conference

Libertyville Team Wins 19 to 0 From Maroon and White

No Game This Week Gives Local Grids Rest for Heights Nov. 11

A splendid football eleven filled out a splendid Libertyville team last night by a score of 19 to 0 in a conference clash at Libertyville. The local squad was out-weighted but not out-fought by the team of about 100.

The Broncos starting lineup saw all the regulars intact except LaRue, who was injured from a collision with the Broncos' line. The line was made up of Braden, Conner, and Workman. The back field was composed of a combination of old players.

The Broncos were the strongest team in the conference. The first half was a struggle, but the Broncos' line was too strong for the Maroon and White. The Broncos' line was too strong for the Maroon and White.

Frank Nordmeyer of Waukegan, Walter Nordmeyer of Grayslake, and Fred Nordmeyer of Melfry left Tuesday morning for a vacation.

A. D. Collins of Essex, Ia. was a guest of Mrs. F. M. Rottin, 126 Grant avenue, Saturday.

L. T. Smiley, 126 Grant avenue, was a guest of relatives at Vinton, Ia. last weekend.

Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Sears and daughter, 200 Grove avenue, were guests at a Halloween party Saturday evening at the Crane community center near Whiting.

Mr. and Mrs. Leon Fredericks and daughter, Ruth and Janet of 1319, were dinner guests. Sunday of Mrs. Mathilda Riecke, 417 N. Cook street.

Mr. and Mrs. William Hartman and son Clyde of Glen View are guests of Mr. and Mrs. George Whitcomb, 439 N. Cook street Sunday.

Miss Phoebe Drussel, who is attending Normal school at Sheboygan, Wis. is spending several days this week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Drussel.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Kirby and daughter Shirley and Miss Wanda Kirby of Chicago were guests Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Kirby, 310 E. Lincoln avenue.

Mrs. Cora Bangs left for her home at Amarillo, Tex. Friday after spending several months with relatives in this vicinity.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh McCulloch of Humboldt, Ia. are spending this week with Mr. and Mrs. John Robertson, 100 W. Main street.

Mr. and Mrs. George Eklund and daughter Mildred and Florence, and marks the one hundredth anniversary of the organization of Baptist work in this area.

Mr. and Mrs. John Schwamm, 113 W. Lake street, visited relatives at Hampshire Sunday.

Mrs. Walter Hartley, 114 W. Lake street, underwent an operation for appendicitis Tuesday morning at a hospital in Waukegan. Her condition is reported to be satisfactory.

Mrs. A. D. Carmichael and sons Donald and James have returned to Barrington after an absence of several months. Mr. Carmichael will return in a short time also.

Carl Weichelt enjoyed a day's vacation from his duties at a day of progress this week and most the time with his mother, Mrs. A. Weichelt, 106 W. Lake street.

Mrs. M. B. Bowman, 542 Grove avenue, is a patient at the Sherman hospital in Chicago.

The grand lecture of the League of Nations chapter 494 scheduled for Saturday night has been postponed indefinitely. A social hour at cards will follow the regular meeting Monday evening.

Barrington's home talent dramatic club "The Maquereaux" appeared before local theatre-goers for the first time Wednesday and Thursday nights.

The three act comedy-drama "Philip the Martyr" sponsored by the Lions club for the benefit of the local boy scout fund. About 120 children attended the performance Wednesday afternoon, and nearly 300 people were present at the Thursday night performance. Figures for Thursday night were not available before the review was given.

The initial play of "The Maquereaux" was surprisingly well staged for amateur production and the audience applause at the final curtain was a commendable bit of the season.

The club members portrayed their roles very well and were not affected by "stage fright" the language of all constant.

George Banks as Spenser, the police officer, and uniformed with brass buttons and gold braid, and Grace Kellum as Gertrude, the colored cook, were comedy bits of the season.

"Henry Dodge, the Road prominent business man and politician in the field was well played by Ralph Kellum and Florence Harlowe was excellent as Josephine Henry's patient and friend.

Costume Miller as Mrs. Wiggins, a housewife, brought many laughs as she told what she thought of her performing son-in-law, and Mrs. Wiggins who was accompanied with Philip as played by Lillian Nixson, who played the role of a nurse.

Phoebe Drussel was good as Betty, Henry's sister who fell in love with Philip. Mr. McGee, played by Thomas Galtman, who was excellent in the Yellow-Tree guide who gets in all sorts of trouble.

How Lapidary as Jane, Betty's cousin, and Edgar Boehle as Alfred, the boy who was the first to see "fanny" as the bashful father and Sam, the dignified father was Mr. Wiggins, portrayed by Henry Josephine.

The best comedy scene of the play was the scene of the first act when Philip introduced Susan as a native Algonquin who lived in the woods.

At the end of the play, the audience was told that the play was a success.

Mr. Wiggins and Samuel as Philip's father all begin to cry and the play ends. The crowd outside in the street was very enthusiastic.

Philip's father was extremely funny, playing from Samuel's dignified "scholarship" in Mrs. Wiggins' high indignation that would be anything but a mother scene.

The celebration, Saturday, which was planned by Jim Moorhead, president of the Northwest Towns Improvement association, and Otto Gross, will include a parade and speech.

As very early, county and state officials will be present.

The parade will form on Algonquin road at Higgins road and then move to the Algonquin and Manitowish roads.

The opening ceremonies will take place on Algonquin road to be met by the city officials of Algonquin.

The Algonquin road passes through Barrington township about three miles west of the village.

Former Resident of Barrington Dies at His Home in Dubois, Nebraska

Paul Rohlfmer, 84-year-old former resident of Barrington who left here last week ago Monday after a visit with relatives in this vicinity, died at his home in Dubois, Neb. Tuesday, according to a message received by his brother, August Rohlfmer. His sudden death was caused by heart trouble. Funeral services were held at the family home Thursday.

Mr. Rohlfmer spent his boyhood and young manhood farming in the vicinity of Barrington. He married a young girl, Miss Anna Riecke, who moved to Nebraska 47 years ago, and celebrated their golden wedding in 1909.

Mr. Rohlfmer is survived by seven children, one brother, A. Rohlfmer and two sisters, Mrs. E. Peters and Mrs. Ida Meyer, of Barrington.

The best comedy scene of the play was the scene of the first act when Philip introduced Susan as a native Algonquin who lived in the woods.

At the end of the play, the audience was told that the play was a success.

Mr. Wiggins and Samuel as Philip's father all begin to cry and the play ends. The crowd outside in the street was very enthusiastic.

Philip's father was extremely funny, playing from Samuel's dignified "scholarship" in Mrs. Wiggins' high indignation that would be anything but a mother scene.

The celebration, Saturday, which was planned by Jim Moorhead, president of the Northwest Towns Improvement association, and Otto Gross, will include a parade and speech.

As very early, county and state officials will be present.

The parade will form on Algonquin road at Higgins road and then move to the Algonquin and Manitowish roads.

The opening ceremonies will take place on Algonquin road to be met by the city officials of Algonquin.

The Algonquin road passes through Barrington township about three miles west of the village.
