FERA GOES SOCIALIST

Upton Sinclair captured the democratic nomination for governor by promising to exterminate poverty in California.

And how is Sinclair to abolish poverty in California?

By hooking onto the Roosevelt administration and getting the needed millions or billions from the United States treasury. He told about it in jubilant spirit at Washington. After an hour's conference with Harry L. Hopkins, the president's federal relief administrator, he said to astonished newspaper

"Mr. Hopkins has authorized me to quote the relief law It says. The administrator may certify out of the funds made available additional grants to states applying therefor—to aid in assisting cooperative and self-help associations for the barter of goods and services. While there is no precedent for it, Hopkins is of the opinion that the FERA could make such grants to the governor of a state. That is what we

No precedent for it, but what is precedent as between friends like Sinclair and Hopkins; or, for that matter, the constitution, either, when pipe dreams are lifting them to

You remember it was Hopkins who said, rejoicingly when news of Sinclair's capture of the democratic party in California reached Washington, "He's a good democrat; he's on our side."

WHAT TYPE OFFICIALS

Every once in a while, and possibly twice in a while, we have something to say in this column about the lack of public interest in selecting our governing officials. Voters who have this whole problem in their own hands unjustly find fault, when they themselves are to blame, if they do not secure service from men who govern them.

In an address, recently delivered at the commencement exercises at Hamilton College, New York, Governor Lehman

"By and large, people are going to get just the kind of government they want and deserve. If public officials feel there is a wide circle of people interested in their work, critical of results and ready to praise and reward faithful service, or condemn inefficiency and dishonesty, they are going for render good service. Conversely, indifference or ignorance on the part of the public will, almost inevitably, lead to vice that is indifferent if not worse."

He certainly put his finger right on the spot. There is a tremendous indifference and no one wants to exert nself or herself unduly; consequently, right after a primary or a general election voters do a lot of fault finding in scoring the work of their officials, but there is no sustained effort, for it is soon forgotten. However, the public is always long in its criticism and fault finding, but rarely does one hear a word of praise. The governor knows whereof he speaks .- Journal, Ramsey, N. J.

LEARNING A LESSON

The masses will in due time readily understand the rise in the cost of living, the continued presence of 10,000,000 unemployed, the rapid growth in relief expenses and the throwing out of work of thousands of people through clumsy handling of the labor problem.

The administration's education has not proceeded to the point where it can appreciate what a delicate adjustment and point where it can appreciate what a delicate adjustment and interrelationship and interdependence exists between all lines of business and the investor public. It has yet to discover that throwing a monkey wrench into the machinery of costs is not the way to stabilize business.

The labor controversies of today make it impossible to determine labor costs for a sufficiently long period to make ommittments.-United States News.

THE HUMAN BRAIN

The human brain doesn't wear out. It grows with use. Not long before his death Thomas A. Edison was asked how he kept his youthful outlook. He had been talking, at 82, of gs he was going to do next.
"You can keep your brain young by working it hard," ne replied. "It grows in power with use. The only thing hat grows old about a man is his body. If my stomach holds out I'll be inventing new and better things at 100."

We are convinced that Edison was right. Of course, some men stop thinking, others never did use their brains much. But the man who had a good brain and uses it to its limit grows in ability as time goes on. limit grows in ability as time goes on.—Wayne County News, Wayne, W. Va.

After averaging about $100,00,000 or slightly more a week, the government's outlays during the week of September 5-12 jumped up to $176,000,000, according to treasury department accounts. Almost every improtant heading on the expenditure side of the government's ledger showed increases during the week. The total of $176,000,000 for the week was divided into $39,000,000 spent by so-called emergency agencies and $37,000,000 spent on "routine" functions.
