Washington's Foreign Visit

Barbados is the only foreign country ever visited by Gen. George Washington. He went there in 1751 with his brother Lawrence, who was in search of health. The island, lying far out in the Atlantic, is the easternmost of the Caribbean, Bridgetown is the port and main city. The town was once the headquarters of Lord Nelson, the great fighter who was immortalized in the battle of Trafalgar. The house occupied by Washington still stands.

SIXTEENTH INSTALLMENT

"I don't know why you're all so considerate of me," said Doris, who was trembling on the verge of tears. "It's Rocky who needs rest, really. I've done it in a lot, and he's been at the wheel since three o'clock this morning."

"Yesterday morning," said Rocky. "He stood for a minute looking down at Doris when Beatrice had left the room. 'Good night, I probably won't see you again until I get back.'"

"His curt tone startled Doris. He was blinding his lips nervously. His jaw tensed unpleasantly."

"What's the matter?" said Doris in astonishment. "Rocky held out his hand. 'Good night,' he said in a businesslike tone."

Doris bent her head. "Good night."

As the door closed behind him tears sprang to her eyes. He had been so good—so understanding—but so matter of fact. She hardly knew what he had expected him to do. But certainly she had not looked for this abrupt impersonal goodbye.

She crept between the sheets for a moment.

"The sun was streaming in her room when the window. Beatrice was standing beside her with a loaded tray."

"It's ten o'clock," smiled Beatrice. "and I thought you might be hungry."

Doris sat up, opening and closing her eyes. They still seemed from the strain of her long drive.

"Has Rocky gone?"

"Yes, quite early. I have to run now. But I brought you this."

She gave Doris the morning paper.

Doris read it as she drank her coffee. At first she didn't notice anything, though it was on the front page. Then she saw "Doris Merrell" caught her eyes.

It was a double column heading on the front page of New York morning paper. Some young reporter had done his best to make a news item out of the story of the picture of young Merrell, Dora Val, the girl who had been discovered by Doris and Rocky. Lacking a picture of young Merrell, Dora Val, they printed one of their Val girl with the caption:

"Son's wife taken in false arrest."

Doris read it through twice. It would have been a good story if only she had been first. Rocky had a paragraph which said that Mrs. Dora Val was the fourth young Merrell to have been discovered.

"Why couldn't one of those girls have been Diane Merrell instead of me?" she thought as she got out of bed.

She would ask Beatrice to get her some old newspapers. She would like to read about Diane Merrell. Beatrice came back.

"I'm afraid I've been a long time, but there's such a lot to do," she said. "I was a busy little fish on her head."

"I wonder, Beatrice, if you could dig up some old newspapers for me to read."

"Of course."

"They went downstairs together to Beatrice's pretty little room, down in the basement."

"This has been my own special place since I was sixteen," said Beatrice. "I'm sure there are some newspapers in the basement. I'll send them up."

A few minutes later, an elderly maid came in and put down a huge pile of old newspapers on the table.

Doris rose unthinkingly. She felt a little faint as she put out her hands to touch them. How lay her own story—or did it? Would she have the courage to read it?

The first paper was recent, and yielded nothing. As she continued her search with a beating heart, she came upon great glaring headlines:

"Shoots Groom After Wedding Society Girl Kills New Husband and Disappeared. Note Found."

She read feverishly. She had been married at an afternoon wedding on May 19 to a man named Howard Valley. Immediately after the wedding ceremony he had gone out on a side door where her leg was packed, loaded with her leg. The groom had been with her. As they were about to step into the car she had shot him, and had driven away.

As she read, a stronger and stronger feeling of antipathy for this girl Diane Merrell developed. Was it possible that she had ever been a girl capable of all that? She was a heartless, cold-blooded criminal. For the note poured that the poor boy whose body was discovered sprawled against a flowered blue bus. It read:

BROWARD: This marriage can't go on—It's a trap.

She stared at the note again. It had been found in the pocket of the poor boy whose body was discovered sprawled against a flowered blue bus. It read:

BROWARD: This marriage can't go on—It's a trap.

"I don't know why you're all so much of a fuss," said Doris, who was trembling on the verge of tears. "The Rocky who needs rest, why, I've done it in the car a lot, and he's been at the wheel since dawn 'till dusk this morning."

"Yesterday morning," said Rocky, "I stood for a minute looking down at him when Beatrice had left him. Good night, I probably don't see you again until I get home."

The car door started Doris. He was sitting his lips nervously. His eyes widened.

"What's the matter?" said Doris. "He's holding out his hand. 'Good night,' he said in a businesslike way. But he's not."

"He's not," said Doris. "Good night," he said in a businesslike way. But he's not."

"I'm afraid I don't," said Beatrice. "How did you find out about this?"

"Doris saw it in the papers," said Du Val. "And that made her wonder, as the saying goes, 'You saw a wife.'"

"You are here then to Mrs. Du Val's agent? Am I to understand that?"

"Molly sat down and crossed her legs. 'Well, that's about it. Am I lucky? I can see my picture in every paper in the country. Along with some of course.' She inclined her head.

Mrs. Ed Anderson of Chicago, Mrs. Al. Marston of Violet, Polkshauer of Herrington, Mrs. George Vaughan and Mrs. M. O. attended a luncheon party sponsored by the Mothers club of Kelsey school at Mrs. Smith's home on Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Koubek were awarded medals of William Leach, son of Henry Leach Tuesday. It was claimed the seven year old boy had not received the necessities of life at the home of his father and stepmother and the judge with persuasion induced the father who said he was unemployed since he moved here six months ago, to give the boy into a home where he could enjoy the comforts of life and acquire an education.

The Civic Choral club now holds its rehearsals Friday afternoon instead of at night as formerly.

The Parent-Teacher association held the January meeting Tuesday afternoon at the Grove school. The main topic of discussion was whether to have the circulating library book.

Beatrice closed her eyes. Then she said in a calm tone: "Let me show you the telephone."

Molly with a small sneer on her face said: "I'll show you a hot look at Doris and followed Beatrice."

Beatrice opened a door. It led to a small clothes closet. Before Molly quite knew what was happening Beatrice had pushed her in.

"She locked the door. 'It will give you time to get away. Doris. My number is right outside.'"

Doris clutched Beatrice by the hand. "All right, this—I'm going to give myself up—in the nearest town."

"Now don't. Wait. I'll give you some money. Drive toward Canada, and Rocky will overtake you at—let me see—at Barrington."

"No, Beatrice. It's too late. And tell Rocky if he comes. I'll swear I've never seen him before."

"No, Doris. No."

"Yes. Please. You've done so much. I can't stand it. It would break my heart if you got into trouble."

Beatrice had found her purse. She gave it to Doris.

"The key to the car's inside."

The Same Old Biology

"You saw—protect yourself against light," said the "old biology" when we first heard of it. But we have so many actual instances of rising prices that can be life threatening that it is hardly worth the trouble of making the up-grade. Every day contracts are being made at higher and higher prices, for the sake must protect himself from the rising price of the goods he needs.

Molly rose. She whistled as she did so. "What a sap I've been!"

Doris stared blankly. Beatrice bit her lip.

"That's interesting," continued Molly. "I knew I'd seen you in the movies—in the real it was."

Mrs. Cot, county superintendent of schools, came here from Woodstock and explained the conditions that had to be complied with. In order to have a circulating library every school in the district must join and the charge is $25 for each room. The Grove school has two rooms. These books come from the Community high school library at Crystal Lake. They deal with various subjects and are a great help to school children. It was decided to take up the question with the board.

Men of the village held a meeting Friday night for the purpose of organizing a civic club to boost home trade and home industries and see that local applicants received the benefit of CWA works.

To Review

Three Books
Mrs. Robert Work will review three books at her home Friday afternoon, Jan. 26, at two o'clock. "The Gold Falcon" is the story of an English poet who was an aviator in the World War. After the war he went to America to regain his mental health, leaving his wife and child in England. The book tells of his adventures there, his inspiration for the poem "The Gold Falcon" and his return to England.

"Snows of Helicon" by H. N. Toulmin is the story of an English architect who has a great love for the beautiful. He is disheartened over modern civilization and the lack of appreciation for the beautiful. In an attempt to rescue at least a bit of beauty, he loses his life.

The third book to be reviewed is "Punch," the delightful story of Elizabeth Barrett Browning's dog, written by Virginia Woolf.

Just recently another notice came calling attention to "Gallant Lady" and asking us to patronize it. This does not come as advertising, but to encourage the showing of good pictures.

After all the movie office receipts are the best proof of the popularity of a picture. Ann Harding's fine acting and her strong supporting cast make this a picture worth seeing.

Three Canadian Plants

There are three carnivorous, flesh-eating plants in Canada. While the great majority of plants obtain the nitrogen necessary for their growth and development from the nitrates in the soil, the three Canadian species of which the Pitcher plant, the Sundew and the Bladderwort are representatives, obtain their food from the fact that they use the bodies of insects and small animals for this purpose.

Although these plants possess a repellent, the green coloring substance of plants which is essential to growth, and can live for a time, at least, without organic food, it has been shown by experiment that some of them thrive better and increase more rapidly in weight when supplied with small pieces of animal flesh. The leaves of the Sundew are covered with tentacles which create a sticky fluid in which insects are firmly held and die. The tentacles also secrete a substance like pepsin which digests the body of the insect, the digested product being gradually absorbed by the leaf. The process of digestion of the Butterwort is similar. The Pitcher plant collects rain in which insects are eventually drowned, the insects being gradually absorbed by the smooth surface of the tubular leaf and the downward pointing palisade of bristles which bars exit. The bladderwort on the leaves of the bladderwort, which are mostly water plants, are provided with a valve opening inwards and forming a sort of trap-door, fringed with bristles. No sensitive are those bristles that a sudden touch causes the bladder to expand violently, thereby sucking in small aquatic animals, such as crustaceans, which are unable to escape. They eventually die and are completely absorbed by the plant.

Mexican Hairless Dogs

Frequently the Mexican hairless dog is confused with the Chihuahua, but they are two distinct breeds, although coming from the same country. The latter is of a much smaller dog, weighing from two to six pounds, with a smooth glossy coat of various dark shades. They are graceful, alert and peppy little animals with some of the qualities of the terrier. The smaller they come, the more desirable they appear to be. It is a vest-pocket edition of the terrier family.

The Word "Secretive"

The adjective secretive, whether used in relation to concealment or in the biological sense, "Promotive of secretion" has but the one pronunciation, with the accent on the second syllable. It is formed from the verb secrete, which means commonly either "to remove or keep from observation," or, in the physiological sense, "to separate by the process of secretion."—Literary Digest.

Otter as Much at Home

The otter, although rated as a land animal, is as much at home in the water as on land. In diving, speed and grace it is the equal of the seal. If it wants a fish for a meal it is doubtful if any one it goes after has a Chinaman's chance of escaping. Like the seal, its favorite food is fish, and unfortunately it eats nothing for the sluggish, still waters of lakes, preferring by far the turbulent, rapid flowing currents of rivers and streams.

The Michigan otter, says a writer in the Detroit News, is far famed for its pelt, which in value far exceeds that of the beaver. Its body is about 27 inches long with a tail of about 10 inches. The unpurified fur is the most durable of all furs, and like the sea-otter, rates 100 per cent in this respect.

When the animal takes up habitation along any watercourse it does not build a house but lives in bank burrows usually underneath the roots of some over-hanging tree. It breeds but once a year and usually brings forth a single pup. It does not spend all of its waking hours hunting on land or water, but is known to divert part of its time to pleasure. Wherever they are found it is not difficult to uncover an otter slide nearby. This is usually constructed on the steep banks of the stream. The slide is generally formed on a clay base, kept moist and slippery by the water's wet fur. The animal proceeds to the top of the bank, folds the forelegs under the body and launches down the grade like children on a toboggan, but they always end by a plunge into the water. They have been observed keeping this up for hours, finally ending the play by swimming off down stream.

Union Is One Vegetable That Has No Substitute

It has been said: "Kill the onion and you leave a gap in the world." For everything there is a substitute. The potato is akin to the onion; cabbage and turnip are substitutes for the onion. The onion is a vegetable, and the potato is a vegetable. The onion is a vegetable, and the potato is a vegetable.

Lighting and Rain

Lighting is most commonly associated with thunderstorms because rain clouds are formed by the rising of air, and the rising of air is caused by the heating of the earth's surface. The rising of air is caused by the heating of the earth's surface.

Praise New Line of Cars Seen at Hudson Dealers' Convention

Col. R. L. Mendenhall and George A. Hargis of the Barrington Hudson Motor Company on Thursday attended the Terraplane and Hudson dealers' convention held by Butler Motors of Chicago, distributors for this area.

Never in his history as an automobile dealer, said Mr. Hargis, "have I attended a more enthusiastic trade meeting than the Terraplane and Hudson meeting held in Chicago Tuesday. The new Terraplane and Hudson for 1934 is roomier, larger and finer in appearance than their predecessors, and in spite of the fact that they are bigger in every respect will outperform even the famous cars of this line for 1933."

The cars are ultra-modern in every respect. They incorporate features which are distinctive of this line alone. We promise the people of Barrington an interesting exhibit with the aid of these new models which are due here shortly.

"Although these cars are bigger and more luxuriously appointed than ever, but one of their performance ability has been sacrificed. In fact, the contrary is the case."

After viewing the 1934 Terraplane and Hudson and listening to the sales executives who spoke to us, I find it difficult to restrain myself from breaking all release dates on this material and telling the public in this vicinity all about these new cars. However, I am duty bound not to give more than just a few hints. The features which are included in these new cars represent the most advanced results of the day and incorporate many ideas which I believe will be exclusive to the Terraplane and Hudson line.

Our order for 1934 demonstrators has been placed, so that in just a few days we will be able to disclose this new line to the people of Barrington. All we can say at this time is, keep your eye on our showroom and be ready for a treat when the day comes to exhibit the new Terraplane and Hudson.

Baltimore, Md.

There is a county of Baltimore and originally the city was a part of it and the county seat. In 1851, however, Baltimore City was separated from Baltimore county. The city has since had its own county courts, sheriff, and other officers, and is therefore a county in itself; or a county-horough, to use the official name.

After viewing the 1934 Terraplane and Hudson and listening to the sales executives who spoke to us, I find it difficult to restrain myself from breaking all release dates on this material and telling the public in this vicinity all about these new cars. However, I am duty bound not to give more than just a few hints. The features which are included in these new cars represent the most advanced results of the day and incorporate many ideas which I believe will be exclusive to the Terraplane and Hudson line.

Our order for 1934 demonstrators has been placed, so that in just a few days we will be able to disclose this new line to the people of Barrington. All we can say at this time is, keep your eye on our showroom and be ready for a treat when the day comes to exhibit the new Terraplane and Hudson.

Baltimore, Md.

There is a county of Baltimore and originally the city was a part of it and the county seat. In 1851, however, Baltimore City was separated from Baltimore county. The city has since had its own county courts, sheriff, and other officers, and is therefore a county in itself; or a county-horough, to use the official name.
