from the cool shovel-free from soot, most winters! No wonder they say it's the best of the year!

you invest nothing to try heating with gas as now one-half of the cost of heating season! And without investing one cent! We will give you a free trial on the equipment, a month in the average home. This is the bill for the gas you use. You try it, you pay for it. And if within the year you are not completely satisfied with gas, we will refund your money and replace your former heater with a new one. But if you decide we think you will, we will refund the purchase price of the equipment.

Less Energy Needed in Morning Less energy is expended on work performed in the morning than in the afternoon. That has been determined in experiments conducted by the Northwestern university. Subjects were required to do the same amount of work at different hours of the day and their energy output measured. The most energy is used in the late afternoon. The energy used during the rest is greater in the early morning and least at night—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Those Wise Ants

Long has the ant, with its organized insect social activities, been held up as a great example of wisdom in nature. But according to the London correspondent of the Christian Century, a famous scientist regards the ant as no example for mankind. The ant shares many qualities with man—the keener slaves, he has domestic servants, he goes forth to war—but the ants seem to have finished their evolution; 20,000,000 years ago ants were as they are today. But man is only a few hundreds of thousands of years old; he is only beginning. All other animals are merely blind products of evolution; man is the conscious trustee of the evolutionary process and can take it further in his own progress.

Look for Spring Flowers Now and Enjoy the Season

Member of W.F.P.S. Writes List of Blossoms Out Each Season

In the second of a series of articles sent to The Review by officers of the state Wild Flower Preservation society, of which Mrs. Robert Work is a member of the official board and Miss Edith Dymond an officer, the writer runs through the gamut of favorite flowers, typical of each season of the year. The descriptions of spring flowers are especially timely, many now being visible in the forest, preserves and adjacent countryside.

"To a nature lover, a season is distinguished by the flowers and birds that appear and abound at that time. Eagerly a nature lover watches each wild flower as it comes above the ground. Our earliest spring flower, although it has an ugly name, is, on close examination, really beautiful. The Stink Cabbage blossom comes up late in February or early March, long before its leaves appear. It is the blossom that is interesting, enveloped by a spathe which is shell shaped, pinkish veined with purple. Really, the same keeps it from being admired as much as it might be. By the time the large leaves have appeared the blossoms have withered, and the seeds have dropped into the ground almost like little balloons. By this time the robin has come and built his nest.

The next flower to appear is the Hepatica, a general favorite. If we poke among dried leaves in the woods, we shall see the first shoots of this early flower, belonging to the crowfoot family, with six or sometimes more pinkish white sepals, often mistaken for peats, with narrow stem and petals and of delicate fragrance. The leaves are rounded with three lobes, mottled with purple, and are evergreen. Another early comer is the Blood-root, the white flower of which with its eight or more petals, is carefully wrapped around from which as it unfolds the blossom emerges.

Many persons if asked for their choice of the May flower would say, without hesitation, the Arbutus. It is an extremely early flower, blossoming under the leaves which are evergreen, as early as March. It is followed by the Spelling Beauty, a small pinkish white flower growing in loose terminal racemes. It is similar to the Anemone, or, as it is sometimes called, the Wind Flower, which is also white with four to seven petals like sepals, and no stamens. The leaves are broad and also on the flower stem which "below the flower and divided into five toothed leaflets. Another little flower to make its appearance early is the two leaved Solomon's seal, sometimes called the Pale Lily of the Valley—perhaps from its leaves. Then follow the other two belonging to the Lily of the Valley family, the Pale Lily of the Valley and the Spikenard, which while

Introduces New

Introduction of the new year is attracting more public attention according to Arnold H. Saxe, local Refrigerator Company, which is electric refrigerators.

"The many new features being real attractions," Mr. Saxe said, "the new models on display largely women have visited our showroom. Improvements made this year thing presented before. Even the inside has been changed and the new success with women. The mechanical real attractions. They give the household refrigeration service. The cooling unit in the new model, providing more bottle room all around. This provides two extra bottles for quick cooling of beer is installed so that this space can when beverage cooling is not desired. The new Leonard control speeds, which give the housewife, which she will have need in the freezing control that quickly drops freezing compartment to eight degrees. This temperature is reached in ice cubes, and then this control is a normal freezing temperature. This extreme temperature also is very useful in preparing frozen desserts.

"Other new features include which maintains correct food storage minimum cost for electricity while home; a 'Steady-Kold Defroster' that without melting ice cubes or temperature for food preservation; placed under the tray, easily removable compartment; as improved ice responds to the lightest touch; a new tray which slides from the bottom and is used when the owner retards in the refrigerator and 'easy-cube' the cubes pop at a twist of the wrist.

Still having tiny blossoms growing in a compound panicle grows to a height of two or three feet. The fruit is a crimson berry while that of the true Solomon's Seal is blue, the distinguishing feature of the droop, usually in pairs, from the axils of the leaves. The Jack in the Pulpit and Dutchman's breeches are also early risers, the former a long stayer, as after the pulpit has withered, the crimson berries last; bright spots in the woods even until fall.

Many Birds Have Happy Hunting Grounds in Air

The strongest and fiercest of birds have their favorite happy hunting grounds, where they have only to perch and peer, while tiny morsels of birds and butterfly flash wing past.

For to the clearest birds, and the most swift of wing, go the juiciest bits. It is a race where wit count even more than wings, though the hunting grounds are in the air.

The shrewd birds perch in wait along the great cross-country air routes traversed by all the feathered and winged creatures who prefer to winter in the south and summer in the north. Always by the same familiar routes, the birds and dragon flies and moths travel, stopping over at the same islands, crossing the hills through the same valleys, a stream of fresh and delicious tidbits for the watchful hawks who have only to wait and dart after their favorite food.

The pigeon hawk is one of the clearest and fiercest of these bird hunters. He is only about a foot long, and yet even the swiftest bird is not safe from his beak, and he has been known to tackle creatures larger than himself with ease and courage.

Envelope of Olden Days

Not Made to Be Licked

In the old days the flap of the envelope was not gummed as it is today, and every letter writer had to have a tiny vial of sealing wax on hand for fastening even a regular bought envelope. In 1850, however, an envelope with a piece of gum about a half-inch square fastened to the flap was put upon the market and this proved so popular that the other kind went out of fashion.

When, about 1845, envelope makers began to gum the entire flap there was loud complaint that the glue required too much licking and also had an unpleasant taste. But in 1850 the use of gum in the flap had largely overcome this prejudice, and those who wished to seem up-to-date, especially in business circles, bought the new-fangled envelope. As late, however, as 1850 more than ten out of every hundred letters mailed in Great Britain used the folded flap instead of an envelope, and as late as 1855 such a substitute for the envelope was still exceedingly common in America.

Indians of the Klondike

The Indians of the Klondike did not consider gold or furs their chief asset when they chose a name for the rich tributary of the Yukon river. Their name for the Klondike river was Throdluk, meaning "rich full of fish."

Chapels at Bull Rings

The bull rings of Spain all have chapels under the grandstand, where prayers are offered for the matadors.

Bittersweet a Woody Vine

Bittersweet is a woody vine which twines itself round fences, shrubs and old stone walls. It also likes to climb trees and sometimes may be found waving its bright berries tantalizingly from the ground. The berries are unusually pretty because they have two brilliant colors, the orange of the outer cover which cracks open and curls back in three divisions, and the scarlet of the berry inside. Put them in a vase or jar in the house and they keep their coloring all winter and will not drop off like other berries. Against the snow the colors are particularly vivid and it is fun to gather it then when everything else is gone. The flowers of the bittersweet are greenish white, growing in loose clusters. They bloom in June, but because they are so seldom noticed they are not so much as the oblong, finely toothed on the edges, and grow alternately on twisting stems. The climbing bittersweet should not be confused with nightshade, which is also called bittersweet. The plants have no resemblance except in name.

Jealousy a Disease

Medical science has until recently regarded jealousy as a defect of character that is incurable. Psychologists have come to the conclusion, however, that jealousy is a disease, with the same general characteristics as other diseases. Jealousy is a mixture of fear, envy and weakness. It is just as uncontrollable as love, which comes and goes without any conscious effort of will. The only difference between love and jealousy is that whereas love is incurable, jealousy can now be treated by means of psychotherapy. The basic cause of jealousy is and covered by means of exhaustive psycho-analysis and after this a complete cure can be effected in most cases. The jealous person is given harmonies and is otherwise treated in the same way as a chronic epileptic.

Essentials of Good Hams

Fat is essential to a good ham—if it is lean, it is nearly always lacking in flavor and tenderness. The famous Virginia hams from lean Virginia hogs are exceptions to this rule, their delicacy being attributed to the animals' summer diet of forest roots and acorns and other nuts.

No "Southern" Speech

Speech varies so widely in southern communities, and has so few traits in common, that there is no distinctly "southern" speech, a scientist reports.

Dolls Objects of Fear?

Used in Strange Rites

Dolls, which are today the best-loved toys of little girls, were once objects of fear or hate. They figured in strange rites of black magic and were specially cherished by women. They were used to terrify and cast spells upon rivals, enemies, or unfortunate husbands. After certain "magical" ceremonies, says an exchange, it was thought that whatever was then done to the dolls would be felt by the man or woman it resembled. Sometimes, the doll was placed before a fire and allowed slowly to melt. As it melted the bewitched person was supposed to die of fear. According to a distinguished German scholar, during the later Stone Age every family needed these dolls to keep off evil, and manufacturing them became an industry. During excavation work the archeologists have found doll-shaped idols made from all sorts of material, from terra-cotta, tin and bronze. Some were cast out of sheet-iron and look much like modern tin soldiers.

In early Asia and Egypt the tombs of important people were filled with quite a population of doll figures. These acted as substitutes for the usual wholesale human sacrifices. In other places it was the custom for a bride to sacrifice her dolls to the goddess Diana just before the wedding.

Founded Greek Oracle

Centuries several thousand years ago in the mountains near Delphi, Greece, says the Milwaukee Journal, noticed that their cattle acted queerly after grazing near a strange hole. The men investigated, found that the too, acted foolishly, talked light-heartedly after breathing the fumes from the hole. They believed this was due to the fact that a god lived in the hole. They built a temple, here an elaborate series of temples and athletic fields. Priests and priestesses got "zoozy" with the natural gas that issued from the hole and then made foolish utterances of these gassed persons determined some of the greatest moves of Greek leaders. Conquering rulers and priests sometimes named after who have an oracle give the wanted advice.

Weight of Coin

There is a definite weight for every coin turned out—and even in the case of pennies, each eleventh disk is weighed by hand, on balance so fine that they record a pencil mark on a piece of paper. A penalty mark on one grain in weight is permitted in pennies.

"In" and "On" the Street

The explanation of the expression "lives in a street" instead of "lives on a street," is that street includes not only the roadway and sidewalks, but also the bordering dwellings and business houses. Sometimes the distinction indicates a difference in the street, the intention being to distinguish the character, as "his office is in Wall Street," but "he lives on Washington Street."

Coral Peels

Ordinary coral reefs are a white ash color and consist of white calcareous framework. The precious red coral is found widespread on the borders and around the islands of the Mediterranean sea. Black coral, which grows to a considerable height in the tropical water off Australia.

Consistency of Coal

Coal is not entirely made of the plant bodies so abundantly found in it. At least some coal contains organic substances absorbed by the plant subsequent to death.

Alaska's Coast Line

Alaska has a longer coast line than the United States.

REFORMS OF RECOVERY

Soon, perhaps before this session of congress adjourns, President Roosevelt will be forced to choose between those of his advisers who are looking to recovery—those who primarily desire to fill empty stomachs—and those who are more interested in getting across during the emergency their pet theories of reform.

Providing of jobs and the assimilation of workless men back into normal industrial employment was the foundation upon which President Roosevelt inaugurated the new deal. It has been the dominating objective of General Hugh S. Johnson and others who believe that a doctor and not a surgeon to amputate sections of the constitution is the nation's need today.

But there is another group that saw other possibilities in the overwrought temper of the day. They had never operated a business and been forced to find the wherewithal to meet payrolls. Virtually all of them had just graduated from advanced law schools or had been professors at these schools. Their pet theories had never been tempered by experience. And they set out to experiment with ideas without regard to cost or precedent.

The result leaves little wonder as to why industry has the "jitters" today as it wonders what is coming next from these fertile minds. Last year in the excitement, this group got through congress the securities act, which was designed to curb worthless stock peddling but in reality through its damned credit channels upon which legitimate business exists. This session then went further and under the guise of stock market regulation, which industrialists recognize as desirable, they have sought to bring business further under the entangling influence of a centralized bureaucracy. In an election year, when congress must watch its votes carefully, they have sought through the Wagner labor disputes bill to create a monopoly for the American Federation of Labor, have sought to coerce state legislature into passing unemployment insurance by assessing a 5 per cent federal tax upon all payrolls, partially returnable to the states when they enact their own legislation, have sought to endow the federal trade commission with new authority for "fishing expeditions" into private business.

CAN RULE ITSELF

Further proof that industry is competent to solve its labor problems without depending upon the national labor board, and that employees profit from collective bargaining without the aid of the national trade unions, was contained in a report made by the national recovery administration showing accomplishments of the cotton textile national industrial relations board.

The report says that board has settled 800 complaints of code violations, and that only one complaint was carried to the national compliance board of NRA, while 3200 cases of misunderstanding have been corrected.

During the eight months the cotton textile national industrial relations board has operated, only six labor disputes in the industry reached a major strike stage, and these strikes lasted not more than a few days each, according to the official report.

SMALL TOWN INDUSTRY

Many students of the trend of industry believe that as a result of ever-increasing congestion in the great centers of population, the next few years will witness an increasing movement of factories to less crowded sections. This movement is, in fact, already going on, and many large manufacturing plants are now located in comparatively small towns. As a complement to this, it is also believed that farmers will gradually come to live more and more in organized communities, when good roads shall make it possible to go to and from their farms with greater facility. Under such a combination of conditions, agriculture and industry would be brought into closer contact, to the benefit of both. In fact, as Henry Ford suggests, with the growing use of machine and electricity on the farm, less labor will be required, and a part of the farmer's time may be employed in industrial pursuits. Something of this sort may be the ultimate solution of the farmer's problems, through increasing his earning capacity and consequently his standard of living.—Republican, Red Wing, Minn.

EDITORIAL SHORTS

We're patriotic, but still we'd prefer gold eagles to blue ones.

One thing that will greatly help solve the troubles of the country, is for everyone to make things go well in his home town.

Playing ball on the basis of the Golden Rule just isn't in the cards for some people. They would "gyp" their own grandmothers if they were able to see some advantage for themselves.

When Uncle Sam drives an individual out of business by selling below cost of production, who pays the taxes of the "evicted" business man? Ask us an easy one. The consumer is the "last man." He pays it.

WHAT'S GOING ON IN WASHINGTON

A slight recession in business, especially in the consumer goods industries, has produced a bit of nervousness. But the slow down was to be expected. Pulling out of iron from the economic structure about $50,000,000 to $50,000,000 a week for CWA expenditures meant an inevitable reduction in retail sales. Artificial prosperity will always run up against these broken curves. It proves that sound measures for recovery can alone make business improvement permanent. Business generally has become carried again about the nature of the changes which the administration is about to foist on them. There is uncertainty about the new Warmer Bill, uncertainty about the securities act, uncertainty about the tariff, uncertainty about the effect of the new tax bill on consolidated corporations and a dozen other important influences many of which are wholly deflationary.

The president's conciliatory attitude toward congress was shown by his signing on Saturday of the home owners' loan bill guaranteeing the principal as well as the interest on two billion dollars' worth of bonds of the loan corporation. Some believe that the bill might not contain the Norris amendment which he favored, demanding policies from congress to positions in administering the law. Others thought the legislation was of too much importance to the recovery movement to be rejected by the president on such a round. At any rate the president now has the law he wanted, and members of congress have their "spoils." Senator Norris told the senate on Wednesday the democrats would live to regret the day they struck out his amendment.

A new and larger federal police force is to arise to carry on the national war against crime. Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, who previously has opposed the building of such a national police force, admitted last week that it will become necessary should laws now pending in congress be passed. These measures would arm the federal government with unprecedented powers to pursue and stamp out predatory crime. However, the force of national police will eventually be, the attorney general could not yet say, but when the force is finally created and equipped, it will have at its command armors, cars, airplanes, and every other modern device for battling crime. Under the new pending laws which necessitate the national police force, the federal government will become the guardian of the law.

charged with these new duties: (1) To pursue, capture and punish any criminal who transports across state lines stolen property valued at more than $1000. (2) To capture and return any person who flees from one state to another in order to escape prosecution or an obligation to testify in any felony case. (3) To apprehend and punish any one robbing or attempting to rob a national bank or a federal reserve system. (4) To protect all interstate commerce from racketeering. (5) To capture and punish any one killing a federal agent or inciting trouble in a federal penal institution. (6) To solve and prosecute all extortion cases involving use of telephone, telegraph or similar devices of communications.

Poison gas will guard the nation's precious gold. In the doors of the huge gold vault now being built at the treasury department will be concealed chemicals which will pour forth deadly gas if any master crook attempts to bore through the heavily reinforced portals. The poison gas is only one precaution against possible robberies which the treasury is taking in building its vault. The walls of the vault will be made of impregnable to boring or melting, are to be 27 inches thick. Over 100,000 pounds of matted steel will surround, and under the vault will be passageways through which treasury guards can pace day and night. Burglar alarms and time clocks will sentinels the huge vault to be the largest enough to contain all the $7,755,000,000 worth of gold which America now owns, and most if not all of the precious metal is to be gradually concentrated in the vaults after the completion in September. In addition, vast fortunes of silver, paper money, and securities may be locked away there.

Conciliation seemed to be in the air of official Washington during the past week. The outstanding demonstration of this spirit of conciliation was the settlement under government auspices of the long drawn out railway wage controversy, on terms which were declared to be satisfactory to all parties concerned, including the president. The settlement was not exactly in accordance with the suggestion made by the chief executive during the previous week that the rail employees forego any wage increase this year but the men finally accepted 2 1/2 per cent raise, which the companies probably can stand. Next year there will be two other increases aggregating 7 1/2 per cent.

World's Bleakest "Dungeon" Cages Byrd

While the rest of the world stops to drink, bask before electric fans, and luxuriates in swimming pools this summer, Admiral Richard E. Byrd, submerged in the cold and dark of the long Antarctic night, will be making meteorological studies which may disprove Mark Twain's crack that "no one ever does anything about the weather." For months he will be isolated in complete solitude 123 miles south of Little America.

"EVEN months in solitary" is the sentence imposed upon Admiral Richard E. Byrd by his recent decision to undertake a series of scientific observations from a one-room hut 123 miles south of Little America.

Totally alone, buried in the long Antarctic night of howling gales and sub-zero temperatures, Byrd is recording weather conditions, carrying on studies which may cause drastic revision of present meteorological theories.

Modern igloo. During his stay in the South Pole, "Hell's half acre," Byrd's home will be a shack, sunk to the caves in the ice to temper wind and cold, and utterly dark, insulated from the outside world. It is 13 feet long, 9 wide, 7 feet from floor to ceiling. Besides a folding bunk and chair, its furnishings include a table, books, a phonograph and a radio. Oil pressure lamps provide light; a kerosene lamp is ordinary.

driven generator supplies current for a radio transmitter. Scientific instruments, located on the surface, are reached through tunnels. Other tunnels lead to caches in the solid ice where food and fuel are stored as a safeguard against fire, every explorer's ever-present fear.

Like Robinson Crusoe, Byrd's daily routine leaves little time for idleness in addition to cooking and keeping his quarters "ship shape," he must keep his instruments and generator free from snow and frost. Incidentally, who would like to try starting a two-cycle gasoline engine at 60° below zero? Despite winds, cold, and utter darkness, observations must be taken and recorded regularly. On ordinary days, this schedule should leave the Admiral time for reading, writing, and a little reflection. But in the Antarctic, days are ordinary.

H. Koenig Scores Lone Barrington Run in 1st Inning

Koenig Fans Eleven; Bronks to Meet Antioch and Arlington

Leyden's powerful ball team handed the Bronks nine its second straight league defeat by the rather lopsided score of 11 to 1 at the local diamond last Thursday. The Bronks were "crushed" again and made it rather easy for the southern school by making five misplays. Three errors in the third inning enabled the Eagles to cross the plate for three unearned runs. Koenig, big Leyden pitcher, had the Bronks' batsmen all under control, only allowing four hits while striking out 11. "Lefty" LaPointe got the only extra-base hit off Koenig, a double in the bottom of the third. Koenig's error in the third inning cost the only Barrington run. Sewski was the Leyden slugger, cracking out a double and a triple and scoring three runs in four times at bat. Starkweather also hit a two-bagger for the Eagles.

Moyners and Eilers, Bronk hurlers, only gave up eight hits but Leyden took good advantage of the local errors to mark up 11 runs.

Koenig, batting in the lead-off position made the Bronks' one run in the first inning. He got to first on the third, advanced on error and a pair of outs, and scored on LaPointe's double.

Two Games on Tap

The Bronks go out to town Friday to face the Antioch Indians. Antioch Coach Anderson's boys are bound to break loose in some game soon and they may decide to "go places" against Antioch. On Wednesday what will probably be the feature game of the season will be played at the local field when the Bronks arch-rivals, the Arlington Cardinals, come here for a league scrap. Arlington has a strong club this year and trounced Leyden earlier in the season.

"Foolfarc" is a corruption of the French words "fool" and "far-dant," meaning, literally, foolish dandy; hence, dandified apparel. The word, introduced by French voyagers, is used in old diaries and contempo-

A curious story is told of the complications in China where so many belong to some secret society or other. An imperial general once chasing a notorious bandit noted that of his army falling back to form a line of reception and on inquiring learned that his army honors the very bandit he was chasing. The bandit in question was head of a great secret society and the only way the imperial general could get ahead with the work of capturing the bandit was to hold a full council of the society right there, declare himself the head of the society, be accepted as such,
and the business of the campaign
was resumed.Sports at West Point
The United States military acade-

West Point maintains that every cadet is a bona fide student, proficient in his studies as well as in his military work and is at the institution for the purpose of becoming an army officer. Therefore, any cadet who maintains the re-sport, after he has completed his participation in athletics at any other institution before entering West

stage, by his brilliant performance of "Richard of Bordeaux," now playing at the Erlanger theatre.The entire Chicago press, without one exception, has acclaimed him as one of the great actors of our time; and the play and company, the most scholarly, forceful and picturesque seen upon the Chicago stage in many, many years.Dennis King has upon many occasions disclosed to Chicago patrons the magnificent histrionic endowment bequeathed him, but never has he given a characterization so exquisitely etched and so delicately visualized as the handsome monarch Richard II of England, who single-handedly conquers and conquers of conspiring and dishonest advisers.It is rather pertinent that at this time when the Dove of Peace is being groomed as the messenger of international beauty, that a play constructed basically upon the necessity of Universal concord, should be received with such unanimous commendation upon both sides of the Atlantic.Plays of such purpose are indicative of the trend of the times and disclose most emphatically that the theatre is an integral element in our national culture.Pages have been written advocating the truths propounded by the youthful ruler Richard, who,
by force of circumstances and not of choice, was compelled to combat conditions in England in the 14th century, that singularly resemble similar conditions in certain countries in this 20th century.Dennis King gives a masterful study of Richard, splendidly conceived, developed with a workmanlike understanding that places him today among the truly great players of our modern stage.
Cynthia Gibbs has surrounded him with an exceptionally capable company, including Henry Mullin, who came from the original cast in London to play Henry, Earl of Northumberland (character created), and prominently mentioned in the large cast are the following well-known players—
Hugh Buckler, Charles Bryant, Montague Love, Richard Stevenson, A. G. Andrews, Alexander Frank, John Emery Lionel Ho-
rath, Wilfred Stearns, Andrew Cruikshank, Lionel Ince, Beatrice de Neerard, Olive Reeves-

Old Curiosity Car First One Used on Salesman's Route

The first traveling salesman to make the northwest suburban district of an automobile is the distinction of A. P. Peck, 32 year old resident of McHenry county whose 1903 model Cadillac was sold recently to Pete Frye and Marvin Snyder of Barrington, as reported in The Review April 19.

Mr. Peck, who lives 4 1/2 miles northwest of Crystal Lake, bought his car new in 1904, although it had been manufactured in 1902—the third vehicle turned out by the Cadillac automobile company. He drove it during the ten year period from 1904 to 1914, using it to transport himself and sample case through northeastern Illinois and southern Wisconsin.

The car may not have had the speed and comfort comparable to the automobiles of today but it did register mileage.

"I used to make the trip from Crystal Lake to Whitewater, Wis., on a gallon and one-half of gasoline," he said. The more round about route then was more than 40 miles. He drove it for a year or two before Illinois required automobiles to be licensed, although he took out a Wisconsin license soon after buying the machine. His total mileage was in excess of 150,000 miles.

The Barrington men who have overhauled and repainted the car have replaced the divided rear seat with a small rail, thus converting the rear into an open trunk rack. Snyder and Frye bought the car from the original owner for $15.

young people to read," continued the speaker. There are four producers of motion pictures that control 95 per cent of the pictures. "What would be the result if four men controlled the libraries and books of our country? It is true that these producers have every local manager in the United States so bound that his choice of pictures is extremely limited.

"In Illinois, there are now more than 200 chains of better films and this fact is making a difference; fewer children are attending regularly yet larger audiences are seeing worthwhile pictures." The speaker closed his remarks by naming several pictures suitable for children.

Mr. Smith of the local school spoke briefly on "Moving Pictures in Our School and Why," and stated that the pictures were shown for both educational value and entertainment. Following is a partial list of pictures shown in the local school this year: Merchant of Venice, American Indians, King Lear, Elsinore's "Thou shalt not kill," Foxglove of Snow and Dew, Pictures on Europe, the X-Ray, the Covered Wagon, the Butterfly, and Glance of Industry. Mr. Smith stated that as far as educational value is concerned the school has not begun to do what can be done with motion pictures.

A short business meeting closed the program that had been opened by two delightful numbers given by the junior high girls' glee club under the direction of Miss Esther Strous.
